83rd Year, No. 302 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1967—96 PAGES PRICE: 10 CENTS WEEKEND 15 CENTS

Centennial Edition Off Press June 29

A Centennial edition of the Victoria Daily Times, marking Canada's 100th birthday, will be published June 29.

Timed to appear on the eve of the July 1 anniversary, it will combine the regular issue with four sections of lasting interest.

Readers will recognize some of Canada's most respected by-lines. The stories span our history and our country. While they cannot comprise a comprehensive history, they are a tasty collection of representative stories, chosen for their interest.

One complete section will deal with Victoria and Vancouver Island. Other sections will discuss Canada's growth as a nation, and regionally. Pictures loaned from treasured collections give comparisons of our todays and yesterdays. They have been liberally employed.

The four special sections will contain 96 pages and the whole newspaper will weigh in the neighborhood of two pounds.

It will be the largest newspaper edition ever produced for Victoria readers.

All regular subscribers will receive a copy of the centennial edition by carrier delivery. Those persons wishing extra copies should reserve them now at newsstands or at the Times circulation department, 2631 Douglas St. Colorful mailing wrappers will be provided persons wishing to send souvenir copies out of town. Or the circulation department will undertake mailing and wrapping for customers for a flat 25 cents per copy. Order forms for mailing appear elsewhere in this edition.

16-HOUR BATTLE

Losses Severe On Both Sides

By HUGH LUNN

HIEP DUC VALLEY, South Vietnam (Reuters)—A big force of North Vietnamese regulars killed 54 U.S. marines and wounded more than 300 in a 16-hour pitched battle which ended early today, marine officers said.

The Americans reported finding 450 North Vietnamese bodies on the battlefield in the rolling hills and ricelands of northern Quang Tin province.

Fighting broke out in this valley, southwest of the major U.S. base at Da Nang, as a marine battalion came under heavy fire from the North Vietnamese, who pinned one company down with rockets and fire from machine-guns and recoilless cannons.

One marine described the fighting as a "knock down, drag 'em out, hand-to-hand battle."

One mile to the southeast, an American battalion moving up on foot to reinforce was locked in battle with another force of North Vietnamese.

As marine reinforcements flew into the area by helicopter, jets dived through streams of red tracers from machine-gun bullets to hit the North Vietnamese with rockets, bombs and napalm.

The planes kept up their assault throughout the night, dropping napalm within 100 yards of the marines.

Robot Car Misses Shah of Iran

BERLIN (AP) — A car steered by remote control and apparently set to crash into the Shah of Iran's motorcade en route to the airport today hit a parked car instead, West Berlin police reported.

In a statement, a spokesman said the Shah's motorcade already had passed when the car was set in motion.

"There were no explosives in the vehicle," the spokesman said.

The royal couple ends a nine-day official visit to West Germany Sunday. Anti-royalist demonstrations followed them across the country.

Police said that one 26-year-old student was pronounced dead at a West Berlin hospital where he was taken after a wild melee in front of the municipal opera house.

The royal couple were not touched by any of the paint-filled eggs, vegetables, stones or smoke flares.

43 Injured, 44 Arrested In Boston Negro Section

BOSTON (AP)—Police maintained an uneasy vigil in the predominantly Negro Gove Hall section today after a night of looting and rock-throwing touched off by a welfare demonstration.

Police formed assault lines throughout the night to clear the streets.

At least 24 policemen, one fireman and 18 civilians were injured.

At least 33 men and 11 women were arrested. They were charged variously with trespassing, taking part in an affray or assault on police officers.

Windows of businesses were smashed and there were reports of widespread looting. Several fires were reported in the area.

There was no estimate of damage.

The disturbance began late Friday afternoon when about 30 welfare recipients, members of an organization called Mothers for Adequate Welfare, capped a day-and-night sit-in by bolting the front door of a city welfare office in the Grove Hall section.

Fifty-eight welfare workers were blocked inside when the women took up positions on the first floor of the building, guarding the door they had locked.

Police climbed into the building through windows and formed a flying wedge to force the women out. Several of the women were carried to police wagons.

A crowd of more than 500 persons gathered outside the building and continued to hold most of the welfare workers inside. Police then called for reinforcements. About 150 policemen were assembled at the height of the disturbance.

Head for Safety!

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) —U.S. Ambassador Elbert Mathews today warned U.S. dependents living in threatened areas of Nigeria to seek safety immediately in the capital city of Lagos.

He issued the statement as Nigeria moved toward almost certain open warfare with its secessionist eastern region.

RED CHINA NEWSPAPER ASKS HONG KONG COUP

PEKING (Reuters)—China today told Chinese in Hong Kong to organize and prepare for a possible overthrow of British rule in the colony.

In one of the toughest pronouncements on the colony by China's Communist leaders since they took power 17 years ago, Hong Kong Chinese were told to mobilize "to launch a vigorous struggle against the wicked British imperialists."

An editorial in the Communist party newpaper The People's Daily said the Hong Kong Chinese should "be ready at all times to respond to the call of the great motherland to smash the reactionary rule of British imperialists."

'We'll Fight America,' Jeer Arabs

CAIRO (AP) — Thousands of jeering Egyptians carrying banners and huge photos of President Nasser staged an anti-American demonstration today at Port Said as a U.S. Navy destroyer entered the Suez Canal bound for the south.

Egyptian launches surrounded the destroyer Dyess as the demonstrators shouted from the banks of the canal:

"Down with Johnson; we will fight Israel and America," the crowd chanted.

The U.S. destroyer took up its position awaiting a south-bound convoy.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union bolstered its forces by sending three more warships into the Mediterrenean Sea.

In Tel Aviv, new Israeli defence minister Gen. Moshe Dayan, said he believed Israel could win if war broke out with the Arab states. But he told a news conference: "If it should come to fighting, I do not want American and British boys to die for us."

MAKE STAND

At the United Nations, Israeli ambassador Gideon Rafael told the security council his nation is determined to make a stand on the Gulf of Aqaba in resistance to the Arab blockade of the waterway leading to the Israeli port of Elath.

The United Arab Republic government ordered Egyptians to take precautions against any bombing attack or invasion from Israel amid a flurry of diplomatic activity as the mid-east crisis neared the end of its third week.

U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser sent President Johnson a message, according to the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, but its contents were not disclosed. Soviet amabassador Dmitri Pojidaev called on U.A.R. Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad this morning.

In Baghdad, Iraq called an emergency week-end meeting of oil producing Arab states to co-ordinate threatened Arab action that would cut off oil to any western powers helping Israel in event of war.

THERE'S NO TOMORROW WITHOUT PLAN—THANT

MONTREAL (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations described the Middle East crisis Friday night as "explosive and delicate" and warned that the world must prepare for the 21st century—if there is to be a 21st century.

Mr. Thant issued his warning during a six-hour flying visit to Montreal to address the council of the International Civil Aviation Organization, a UN special agency, and the United Nations Association in Canada.

He also held private discussions on the Arab-Israeli crisis with External Affairs Minister Martin.

'ACT OF BANDITRY'

U.S. Roasted By Russ in UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The Soviet Union today accused the United States of "an act of banditry pregnant with serious consequences" in the bombing of the Soviet ship Turkestan in a North Vietnamese port Friday.

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko, speaking during the United Nations Security Council debate on the Middle East crisis, said:

"An end must be put once and for all to the arbitrary actions of the United States, the self-styled world policeman."

He said the U.S. has no "moral right to come to the Security Council and play the role of protector of international navigation."

The Soviet Union has supported Egypt's claim that it can legally blockade the Strait of Tiran in the Gulf of Aqaba while the U.S. has taken the stand that there should be free passage for all ships, including Israeli, through the strait.

WORDS ARE TOUGH

Fedorenko said:

"The professed words of the United States in favor of free navigation all over the world are at variance with its criminal, practical deeds all over the world.

The Soviet ambassador said American planes bombed the Turkestan Friday at 11:40 a.m. Moscow time in a harbor 50 miles from Haiphong. He said two crew members were critically wounded, one of whom died a few hours later. With the exception of a Cypriot vessel, there was no other ship in the harbor, he said.

"The ruling circles of Washington ceaselessly come forward with preachings about their love for peace, justice and international law, but they abrogate to themselves the right to dictate to other states," Fedorenko said.

Israeli Ambassador Gideon Rafael told the Council his country is "determined to make a stand on the Gulf of Aqaba."

"Nothing less than free passage is acceptable," he said as the council resumed long debate on the Middle East crisis.

ISRAEL HAS BACKING

Adib Daoudy, Syrian assistant secretary-general for political affairs, charged that "Israel is leading the world to the brink of catastrophe" only because she is assured of strong backing by the U.S. and other "benefactors and protectors."

"In the face of the so-called declaration of the freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba and the threat to use American force against us, what can the Arab countries be expected to do," he asked.

"Our attitude is purely defensive in nature and legitimate in its motives. If Israel alone or with others' participation carries out aggression in the Gulf of Aqaba or elsewhere, the Arab governments are determined to react strongly and unitedly to defend their territory."

Debate on the Middle Eastern situation started in the unusual Saturday session but voting on rival proposals before the council was postponed until early next week.

The 10 non-permanent members of the council — including Canada — planned a weekend of intense diplomatic talks on a compromise plan being pushed by India and Ethiopia which would appeal to Israel and the Arab countries to avoid inflammatory actions.

Escaper Takes Gun

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Karlos Hegedus, 27, a B.C. penitentiary inmate here as a witness in a county court trial, stole a .38 revolver today and escaped from an RCMP detachment jail.

Police said Hegedus is considered "extremely dangerous" and was serving a four-year sentence for discharging a firearm at an RCMP constable in November, 1966.

MOUNTIE DIES IN CLIFF FALL

BURNABY (CP) — A young RCMP constable plunged to his death over a cliff early today while chasing a prowler in Burnaby, a neighboring municipality of Vancouver.

The dead policeman's name was withheld.

Police said the constable, only a few months out of training, disappeared while he and partner Constable Bob Yakubchuk were chasing youths following a complaint.

A search was held through the night when Const. Yakubchuk reported his partner missing. The body was found early today about half way down a 200-foot-high cliff.

BROADSIDE REBUTTAL TO BERGER

Don't Rock Boat, Strachan Tells NDP

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

BURNABY — Close to 425 delegates at the New Democratic Party's largest convention this morning were mulling over an implication that they were on the threshold of power if only they don't rock the leadership vote tonight.

This suggestion was the underlying theme of a speech by NDP Leader Robert Strachan Friday night, who used his 15-minute annual report to make an expertly subtle broadside rebuttal to leadership challenger Tom Berger's criticisms.

About two-thirds of the convention gave him a standing ovation as he began his speech. The other third kept their seats — some refusing even mild applause.

The delegates will choose between the two men tonight in naming their leader for the coming year.

This decision obviously dominated all thoughts even as the convention gingerly proceeded with its routine business this morning.

Norman Levi was re-elected by acclamation for his second term as provincial president as both camps decided he was a neutral in the leadership battle but sharp contests were expected later today in election of four vice-presidents.

The delegates also this morning approved resolutions favoring the principles of a government guaranteed annual income for all citizens, collective bargaining rights for provincial civil servants and establishment of a provincial housing authority.

Although making no direct reference to the contest in his Friday night speech, and even praising the work of all freshman MLAs including the rebels, Mr. Strachan was obviously appealing for support tonight.

His most telling point was a comparison between the last two provincial election campaigns.

In 1963 — when Mr. Berger was the top strategist behind a soft-sell but costly $40,000 campaign — the party lost strength and was saddled with crippling debt.

Mr. Strachan dwelt on the contrast in the 1966 campaign which was mainly under his direction.

"With (NDP) provincial office expenditures of only $25,000, we faced a powerful Social Credit machine that bragged it was going to wipe us out and spent almost $500,000 trying to accomplish just that," he said.

"More than 250,000 voters supported NDP candidates on Sept. 12 and we increased our percentage of the total vote from 28 per cent to 34 per cent and increased our members elected from 14 to 16.

"A similar increase in our percentage of the total vote could make us the government after the next election."

Mr. Strachan, without identifying them specifically, answered his challenger's criticisms that he over-emphasizes legislative tactics at the expense of internal organization and fails to spend enough time with the grass roots.

He said throughout last September's campaign he worked for other candidates throughout the province, even while the premier and five cabinet ministers visited his own riding in a determined bid to unseat him but he was "re-elected for the sixth time due to the loyal party workers" who performed voluntary work in his riding.

An outburst of applause indicated his point had registered.

Mr. Strachan also enumerated a long list of his attendance at public and internal party meetings and efforts to spread the NDP word to a variety of organizations including native Indians, labor groups and university student bodies.

He said the NDP kept the government off balance during the last session "from opening day in the arena at New Westminster when the public booed the government for refusing to support my motion for a Hansard until closing day when I had to remind the government they had forgotten to pass the supply (appropriations) bill."

He also listed 10 policy programs devised under his leadership, from industrial development to chronic care, which he said could be implemented immediately by an NDP government.

"It is because of this constant effort over the years, that many people are now saying that the New Democratic Party is ready to form the next government of British Columbia," he said.

To emphasize the point, Mr. Strachan said the party's new organizing team (which largely supports Mr. Berger) went into the Cariboo byelection last fall and almost defeated Attorney-General Robert Bonner because it was building on the efforts of a decade.

He recalled that in the 1957 Cariboo byelection, won by Socred William Speare, there were no large NDP cadres but virtually only himself and the candidate to work as door knockers.

"Cariboo constituency is an example of what can be done, in a few years, to build a constituency from a minimal position to a point where there

Cautious Blessing On Harbor Location

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

POWELL RIVER — A major urban renewal scheme for Victoria's waterfront received the cautious blessing of the deputy minister of municipal affairs Friday.

J. Everett Brown indicated the government would probably look with favor on the proposal, unveiled earlier this week by the convention centre committee, which would see a multi-million dollar face-lifting instituted in the area bounded by Government and Wharf Streets, Bastion Square and the Causeway.

Mr. Brown made the statement in answer to a question by Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

The deputy minister had just completed an address to delegates attending the 18th annual conference of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities.

During his speech he urged municipalities to approach down town urban renewal schemes with caution.

"Most attempts to save down town are dominated by panic reasoning," he said. "We should not look at down town as it was used in the past, but should seek new uses.

"Much of the effort (in the past) has been misdirected."

Ald. Edgelow asked the deputy minister if the thought the suggestion that a convention centre by built on Wharf Street as part of a massive urban renewal scheme was a good idea.

"Yes I do," he replied, "that more nearly represents what I have been trying to say. It would be a natural use for that area."

The convention centre plan, presented as one of five proposals by Clyde Savage last Wednesday, calls for a full multi-purpose centre to be built on the present Ocean Cement site.

It included tentative plans for extensive development in the surrounding area.

"Mr. Brown's reactions was very pleasing," said Ald. Edgelow. "I realize that he does not speak for the government but it's nice to know he likes the idea and it gives me great hope that the centre will be built there."

If the area is approved as an urban renewal project the federal government will pay 50 per cent of land acquisition and clearing costs with the other 50 per cent shared equally by the province and the city.

Federal and provincial officials have stated publicly that they would like to see the Bastion Square urban renewal project extended.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Victoria Faces Gut Decision In Siting Centre

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Now comes the time for what has aptly been termed "the gut decision" on the proposed convention centre.

The centre, as has been explained several times in detail, could be built on either one of four sites in the city. The convention centre committee, led by Clyde Savage, has done a fine job in detailing the pros and cons of the sites.

The ball is now in city council's court.

No easy decision faces them; and therefore we must go along with Mayor Hugh Stephen when he says he doesn't intend to be stampeded into an early choice. When the talk is in the $5 or $6 million bracket, it pays elected officials to be cautious.

But being cautious is one thing; being afraid to incur the wrath of one segment of the population another. We hope the cautious approach does not develop, as it so easily can, into apathy and the ultimate shelving of the report presented Wednesday morning.

As stated in a news story Wednesday afternoon, the committee avoided making a specific recommendation as to where the centre should be located. But their leanings showed through in a few places and there is little doubt that they strongly favor the waterfront location on Wharf Street.

And that, although it seems to have taken a long time to get around to it, is where the gut decision comes in.

It has long been accepted that apart from the Causeway and the green lawns of the Empress and the Legislative Buildings, Victoria's harbor area is a mess.

Cluttered with commerce, often littered with debris from industry, it does little to enhance the front door of a sea-faring city.

The first polish for that somewhat jaded necklace Victoria wears, will come when plans for the motel-store-restaurant complex for the old CPR dock site are ratified. That's an old story now, but still very much alive.

Much though that project will do in the face-lifting department, it would be but a minor effort compared with what a modern convention centre would do for the other side of the harbor.

Cheek-by-jowl at present, the Black Ball Ferry dock and Ocean Cement, desirable and important though both industries are, do little for those with an eye for beauty.

In fact the entire area from the Causeway to Bastion Square is a mess.

It needn't be.

Mayor Stephen has long been an admirer of ex-mayor R. B. Wilson. Many are the occasions when in public he has praised the vision and the leadership of the man who guided the city to Centennial and Bastion Squares.

Now comes the time when he, too, can go down in the books as a man with vision and courage.

Wherever the convention centre is built it will do much for the city. But on Wharf Street it will do more, faster, than on any other site.

As part of a massive urban renewal scheme it would revitalize the entire area between Bastion Square, Wharf and Government and bring back the throb of life that section of the city knew when she was just a mewling child at the turn of the century.

An urban renewal scheme in that area — and we are fully aware of the difficulties facing such a proposal — would do more for Victoria than Centennial or Bastion or the planted malls proposed for Broad Street.

Not only would it bring new beauty to a zone sadly needing it, it would be a functional beauty rather than a dab of paint from an artist's brush.

First man on the firing line when the decision comes down to the wire will be Ald. Percy Frampton. He was appointed chairman of the council committee requested to sift the convention centre report and in turn report to council with definite recommendations.

We can only hope that he and his fellow committee members — Ald. Hugh Ramsay, city manager Dennis Young and Mr. Savage — will not be afraid of the future.

And we also hope that Mayor Stephen, while still in the background at present, will offer the forceful advice and the decision-making courage the predecessor he so much admires once extended.

To echo the words of the report: "Redevelopment of the waterfront from the Causeway to Bastion Square is the most significant renewal and rehabilitation project which could be undertaken to enhance the city's attraction as a resort and to secure and revitalize the commercial centre."

And to that we say "amen" in the hope that the men entrusted with our future agree.

across a small brush-covered hill was hit by 40 mortar shells. The marines, unable to dig shelter holes in the rockhard ground, lost three dead and 22 wounded.

During the battle, a former Viet Cong now working with the marines kicked away some rice mats floating on a paddy, revealing a group of North Vietnamese lying under the water breathing through reeds. The marines opened fire and killed 31 of the North Vietnamese.

A medical evacuation helicopter carrying wounded out of the valley crashed and was wrecked after being hit by a recoilless rifle shell.

MAJOR ENGAGEMENT

A U.S. military spokesman said the battle was the second major engagement the marines have fought with North Vietnamese troops in their current search - and - destroy operation Union Two.

The other occurred May 26 when the Americans reported killing 172 North Vietnamese in the same area while losing 28 of their own.

The operation is aimed at trapping North Vietnam's 3rd Regiment and the 21st Viet Cong Regiment, both known to operate in the area.

About 1,200 U.S. marines made an amphibious landing 21 miles northeast of Hue today in a move to cut one of the infiltration routes of North Vietnamese troops.

The U.S. command said no significant contact had been yet made with the Communists.

A SOUTH VICTORY

South Vietnamese troops claimed victory Friday over the Viet Cong's 808th Mobile Battalion in an engagement south of the demilitarized zone.

A spokesan said 150 of the 500-man Viet Cong detachment were slain in an assault by South Vietnamese paratroops, infantry and armor. Government casualties were not announced.

In the air war over North Vietnam, U.S. aircraft Friday renewed their attack on the main rail link with China, northeast of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

Air force fighter-bombers also struck three major rail yards and sidings. Pilots reported heavy damage to railway lines and cars.

U.S. pilots reported several dogfights with MiGs over the North, but there were no claims of downed aircraft.

is real promise of victory," he observed.

"We have now got rid of the $30,000 debt that has been such a millstone around our necks and organizationally we are all set to really roll, he said.

(The financial report told delegates an operating surplus of almost $2,000 has been achieved after stringent economy and re-organization of spending procedures, in contrast to perennial deficits.

(Membership report shows a growth of almost 1,000 to a current total of 8,500 and organizing plans laid to boost it to 10,000 by year's end with a 12,000 membership target set for next year's annual report.

(The organizing report said hiring of Michael Lewis, son of the party's national deputy leader, as a full-time organizer has been highly productive and a second organizer will be appointed this summer with a third to be added before the year is over.)

"There are many issues facing us, and many decisions to be made," Mr. Strachan wound up.

Although the convention has numerous resolutions and policy matters before it, it was obvious Friday all thoughts are concentrated on the first open convention battle for the leadership in either the NDP or CCF's history in this province.

A motion before Mr. Strachan's report to postpone tonight's leadership vote to Sunday in order to provide more time for regular convention business was quickly beaten down by the delegates and only a disultry debate revolved around a few emergency resolutions raised at the initial session.

Distracted by the nominating leadership race, the delegates sent back to committee resolutions which would:

- ● Protest any increase in draft beer prices or reduction in glass sizes;
- ● Urge the United Nations to send a fleet to the Gulf of Aqaba to break any Arab blockade and to ask Israel for permission to establish a UN force on her side of the Egyptian border.

Surprisingly, Kootenay MLA Leo Nimsick, the party's earthy firebrand, opposed both resolutions.

Worrying about beer prices "puts us in a bad light" and sending a UN force into the Middle East as suggested "is tantamount to declaring war on the Arabs," he argued.

Delegate Young At Heart

By Staff Reporter

BURNABY — How old is a Young New Democrat, the NDP convention here was asked Friday night in an obvious needle at Geoff Mitchell of Metchosin.

Ian Campbell, a delegate from Saanich and The Islands constituency, asked the convention chairman if there is any age limit qualification for membership in the party's junior branch.

Chairman Norman Levi asked him to be specific but he declined and the convention moved on to other business while Mr. Mitchell's cheeks blushed red.

Mr. Mitchell admitted to the Times he is 64 years old and was filling a delegate's seat reserved by his Esquimalt constituency for a Young NDP Club member.

"Our table officers decided to make sure our delegate quota was filled and when the YNDP didn't nominate any of their own members I agreed to represent them," he said.

Mr. Mitchell has publicly endorsed Tom Berger's leadership bid. Mr. Campbell is an ardent supporter of incumbent leader Robert Strachan.

"The young people have a perfect right to appoint Mr. Mitchell as their representative, although I'd like to push him off the roof of the Royal Towers because I know how he's going to vote," said fellow Esquimalt candidate Mrs. Isabel Reader.

Ask Ban To Reduce Smoking

POWELL RIVER — The Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities Friday asked the provincial government to step-up the anti-smoking campaign.

Two resolutions presented by Port Alberni called for a campaign to deter young people from smoking and a ban on cigarette vending machines.

The resolutions received unanimous support and will go to the September meeting of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities to seek province-wide support.

The resolution calling for a ban on vending machines also asks for regulations to "eliminate, modify or de-glamorize all forms of tobacco advertising."

Another Port Alberni resolution winning unanimous support calls for preferential fares for B.C. pleasure vehicles using the B.C. ferries.

"Any deficit arising from the operation of ferries or maintenance of bridges is defrayed by the residents of British Columbia," the resolution stated. "Therefore, pleasure vehicles bearing B.C. licence plates and the occupants should get preferential rates."

The three Soviet warships passed through the Bosporous with 200 yards distance between them, then picked up speed and headed for the dardanelles on their way out to the Mediterranean.

In warning Egyptians to prepare for any attack, the interior ministry told them to:

- ● Paint windows and headlights of their cars blue to cut down visibility from the air at night.
- ● Study first aid, firefighting and rescue work.
- ● Open windows, turn off lights and seek refuge in basements in case of air attack.

Interior Minister Shawar Gomaa also ordered police to begin training for anti-parachutist resistance.

The Cairo paper Al Ahram charged the appointment of Gen. Dayan, as Israel's defence minister meant that power had been taken out of the hands of Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol.

It called Dayan's appointment a "silent coup" which turned the Israeli cabinet into a puppet one.

Adjustments Made In Milk Subsidies

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has decided to permit adjustments of some quota levels for manufactured milk subsidies, it was announced Friday.

The Canadian dairy commission announced that it had been authorized to consider applications for supplementary quotas "to adjust serious inequities which would result from rigid adherence to quotas based on 1966-67 deliveries."

The government announced in March that quota levels for the 1967-68 dairy year starting April 1 would be based on the previous year's levels.

The commission also announced that the limitation of 50,000 pounds for a producer to be eligible for subsidy in the dairy year starting next April 1 will not apply to cream shippers.

It said there will be consultations with producer organizations on the minimum quantity of cream that will bring a subsidy next year.

The commission said it already is considering applications for reallocation of quotas in cases in where herds or farms have changed hands.

Other cases could not be adjusted immediately through quota allocation, however.

To All to Whom these Presents shall come or whom the same may in anywise concern,

Greeting:

a proclamation

DONALD S. MAXWELL, Deputy Attorney General, Canada. WHEREAS it is desirable and Our Privy Council for Canada has advised that a Proclamation do issue setting aside a week in 1967 to be known as "Veterans Week" to bring to the attention of Canadians the importance of the contribution made by members of the Canadian Armed Forces, particularly during the wars in which Canada has participated as a nation.

Now Know Ye that We, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council for Canada, do by this Our Proclamation

1. Set aside and name the week of June 11 to June 17, 1967, as "Veterans Week";

2. Recommend that on Sunday, June 11, 1967, memorial services be held in communities in Canada to mark the sacrifice made by those Canadians who gave up their lives in defence of freedom; and

3. Call upon all Veterans to wear on the said Sunday June 11, 1967, and during other observances and occasions that may be held during Veterans Week such insignia as gives evidence of their service to Canada.

Of All Which Our Loving Subjects and all others whom these Presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and to govern themselves accordingly.

Expo to Honor 10 Millionth Visitor Soon

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo 67, with considerably more than 9,000,000 visits under its belt, is getting ready to hail the 10,000,000th.

With warm, sunny weather in the works for the entire weekend, Expo expects to reach that milestone Monday.

The person who happens to make Expo's 10,000,000th visit will be greeted at the fairgrounds by a top official of the exhibition, and will be awarded a free air trip to any of a group of Canadian cities.

There also is to be a special scroll presented, plus a ribbon and a selection of Expo souvenirs.

The fair is about 4,000,000 visits ahead of the total that had been forecast for this stage in its career.

Today is United Nations Day at the fair. Some of the originally scheduled lustre of the day will have disappeared with the decision against attendance by U Thant, the UN secretary-general.

However, a holiday atmosphere prevails at the site, with temperatures under a brilliant sun hitting 79 on Friday and expected to go at least that high through the weekend.

The Friday crowds came in their droves, with 210,848 turning up at the St. Lawrence River site as of 12 midnight. Total attendance at that time, since the fair's formal inauguration April 27, was 9,203,537.

Expo had other Friday visitors—shad flies.

The large-winged nuisances turned up in limited numbers at the exhibition's administration building. There were few on the main section of the site.

Expo officials seemed hopeful that the phenomenon, an annual one on the river, would not take into anything massive. Some spraying of the river was carried out last year.

CAB DRIVERS PROTEST

Taxi drivers paraded their vehicles Friday near two of Expo's entrances in protest against the barring of cabs from one of the two Expo islands, St. Helen's. The parades caused at least one major traffic snarl.

Later, representatives of Expo and the cabbies agreed that taxis should be allowed back on St. Helen's, within carefully-regulated limits.

There also is a new addition to Expo facilities. Opened on the weekend's eve was Notre Dame Park, a 100-acre stretch of water and green area designed to afford a rest for footsore fair trekkers.

Cabbie-Killer Sentenced To Hang

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Herbert Mathew Myers, 19, was sentenced Friday to hang for the capital murder of 45-year-old taxi driver James William Johnson near Cache Creek, Jan. 24.

An all-male jury deliberated two hours before entering the verdict. It recommended clemency.

Myers stood impassively as Mr. Justice McIntyre set Aug. 29 as execution date.

Asked before sentence was passed if he had anything to say, Myers replied "nothing."

CONFLICTING EVIDENCE

The jury had heard conflicting evidence from two psychiatrists about the sanity of the accused.

Dr. R. Whitman of Vancouver, called by the Crown, said he had examined Myers May 20 and found no evidence of disease of the mind.

Dr. Whitman agreed with defence witness Dr. Dwight Moody of Prince Gerore, that Myers is not a normal person.

"But what is wrong with him does not constitute a disease of the mind," said Dr. Whitman.

Dr. Moody testified Thursday that Myers was "destitute of the things that would prevent him from acting this way."

ADMITS KILLING

Defence council F. W. Elliott of Quesnel told the jury he was willing to admit the killing of Johnson and of Smithers taxi driver Eugene Scott Prince, 23, a night earlier.

He said his sole defence was that for a 24-hour period Myers "was not capable of appreciating the quality of his act."

Evidence was that Myers got into Prince's taxi on the night of Jan. 23, had him drive out of town and shot, clubbed and robbed him the next night he got into a cab in Cache Creek, told Johnson it was a "stickup" and shot him when Johnson grabbed for the .22 calibre pistol he was holding.

Johnson was shot several times in the right side of his body.

The Crown proceeded only on the charge involving Johnson's death.

Second Mystery Bombing

MIAMI (UPI) — The second mysterious bomb blast in the Miami area this week destroyed two cars and damaged 15 others early today in a parking lot at a luxury apartment complex in North Bay Village.

The explosion apparently was touched off in a convertible. It destroyed the convertible and the car parked alongside it.

Officials said the owner of the convertible could offer no possible motive for the blast.

Earlier this week another mystery explosion wrecked the inside of a Miami Beach restaurant.

Stream Flooding Closes CP Line

REVELSTOKE (CP)—Flooding streams, swollen by rain, melting mountain snow and a slide, have closed the Canadian Pacific Railway line and several traffic routes.

A west-bound CPR freight crashed into a slide that covered the mainline 15 miles west of the eastern British Columbia community Friday night.

A small river apparently blocked by the slide, flooded both the railway and the trans-Canada Highway.

Passengers from a later west-bound train were taken around the slide area by bus, presumably before the highway was flooded.

There were no reports of injuries.

Highways department officals said the highway would be reopened by noon, but they said the CPR might be closed today and possibly part of Sunday.

Meanwhile, high water in the North Thompson River closed highway 5 which follows the river north of Kamloops. The highways department said there was river water over the road between Avola and Blue River, about 100 miles north of Kamloops.

The Blackpool ferry, about 70 miles north of Kamloops, was forced to suspend operations as a result of the high water.

Buzzing Birds Bug Beak and Barrister

ST. JOSEPH, N.B. (CP) — Two swallows flew into a courtroom in this Westmorland County community Friday and interrupted a trial of a woman charged with converting public funds to her own use.

Trial of Margaret T. Keith, a former postmaster at River Glade, N.B., was adjourned after the two birds entered through an open court room door while Mrs. Keith was testifying on her own behalf.

They buzzed the 12-member county court jury while Deputy Sheriff Herman Cook tried to shoo them away.

"This is for the birds," defence lawyer Leonide H. Cyr of Moncton said when it became evident the intruders had no intention of leaving. They were perched on a window sill when the trial was adjourned until today.

Mrs. Keith, a widow with two children, was charged following an investigation of irregularities at the River Glade post office in 1965 involving about $1,100.

MARCHERS PROTESTING ALLEGED U.S. ATTACK

MOSCOW (Reuters)—About 200 demonstrators marched on a U.S. exhibition scheduled to open in Leningrad today, protesting an alleged attack by U.S. aircraft on a Russian merchant vessel in North Vietnam, a U.S. embassy spokesman said here.

He said a telephone report to the embassy told of a placard carried by one of the demonstrators which referred to a dead sailor.

Earlier today, the official Tass news agency charged that a sailor aboard the ship died of head injuries Friday when American aircraft fired on it in the North Vietnamese port of Cam Pha.

The spokesman said the opening of the exhibition was called off when none of the invited guests arrived. U.S. charge d'affaires in Moscow, John Guthrie, who travelled to Leningrad for the opening, was refused an audience with the city's mayor today, the spokesman added.

THREE-YEAR TERM

Army Rebel Goes to Jail

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Capt. Howard B. Levy, U.S. Army doctor who refused to train Vietnam-bound green beret medics, was dismissed from the army today and sentenced to three years in prison for disloyalty and disobedience.

Defence requests that Levy be allowed to remain free pending appeal were denied. Levy was taken into custody in the courtroom and left in handcuffs.

The sentence included dismissal from the army, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and three years at hard labor.

The court took two hours and 20 minutes to decide on the penalty. Levy could have received up to eight years.

Levy's lawyer, who had warned that a conviction might create a martyr for the peace movement, failed in attempts to prove that the army doctor's disobedience was justified on claims that Green Beret troops committed war crimes in Vietnam and that Levy's medical ethics took precedence over army orders.

Levy stood with hands clasped behind his back as the verdict was read by Col. John S. Baskin, president of the court, after nearly six hours of deliberation by the tribunal.

After hearing "we find you guilty" five times, Levy turned and took his seat at a table. His face showed no emotion. On a front row were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Levy.

"Please don't ask me anything," said Mrs. Levy.

Levy, who had taken part in Negro voter registration drives in this area, was convicted of making statements disloyal to the United States with the purpose of promoting disloyalty and disaffection among troops with Negro soldiers being a primary target.

The court martial convicted Levy of:

1. Wilful disobedience of an order between Oct. 11 and Nov. 25, 1966, to establish and operate a program to train Green Beret medics in diagnosing and treating skin diseases.

PROMOTED DISUNITY

2. Making disloyal statements, designed to promote disloyalty and disaffection. The Army charged Levy with saying the United States was wrong in Vietnam, that he would refuse to serve there, that Negro soldiers should refuse, and that special forces troops were "liars and thieves and killers of peasants and murderers of women and children."

3. Making disloyal statements to special forces troops.

4. Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman by writing to a soldier in Vietnam in 1965 and opposing U.S. policy as "a diabolical evil."

5. Advising, counselling and attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of duties by the soldier in Vietnam.

Dozen Deaths Charged Against New York Boy

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A teen-ager has been convicted of both murder and arson in the deaths of nine children and three adults in a fire that destroyed the Yonkers Jewish Community Centre.

Thomas Ruppert, 18, showed no emotion as a jury of 10 men and two women convicted him Friday on 12 counts of first-degree murder, 12 counts of murder during commission of a felony and one of arson.

Sentencing was set for next Friday. The defence said it would appeal.

Ruppert, who had been a part-time janitor at the centre, was arrested almost a month after the Dec. 20, 1965, fire.

Ruppert disappeared after the blaze and was found in Grasslands Hospital, in nearby Valhalla, undergoing court-ordered psychiatric treatment involving a charge brought against him before he was 16.

Clergyman's Appeal Lost

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church of Canada Friday dismissed an appeal by Rev. Harry MacKay against his 1965 removal from a Richmond Hill church after he delivered a sermon on sex.

Mr. MacKay and two supporters asked the Toronto conference to intervene but a committee ruled that the appeal should be dismissed on the basis of church bylaws.

Mr. MacKay ran into trouble with his congregation with a comment that sexual intercourse outside of marriage is not always wrong.

He may still carry his appeal to the General Council, the United Church's highest court.

Irate Landlords Stone City Hall In N.Y. Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — A riotous mob of 600 landlords stormed city hall Friday hurling rocks and smashing windows after a vain attempt to induce Mayor John V. Lindsay to soften rent-control laws. Two women were injured.

"We want to see our hippie mayor," a leader of the mob shouted.

The demonstrators got nowhere with Lindsay, who refused to see the leaders. The landlords were incensed over city hall efforts to end a strike of building service employees in some 1,000 rent-controlled Manhattan apartment houses.

The mayor accused the landlords of inviting the walkout so as to wreck rent controls.

Six glass door panes were smashed at the entrance to city hall, and a thrown stone cut the leg of Edie Radley, 28, an assistant secretary to Lindsay, who was standing 25 feet inside the foyer.

Outnumbered police turned in a riot call and at the height of the melee 150 officers fought the mob. There were two arrests.

Thousands of lunchtime strollers were attracted to the scene by the commotion.

DECLARE EMERGENCY

Earlier in the day, Lindsay declared a health emergency as a result of a week-long wage strike by 15,000 members of Local 32-B, AFL-CIO Building Service Employees. He ordered sanitation men to cross picket lines and begin carting away tons of garbage that had gone uncollected because of the walkout.

Lindsay toured areas of Manhattan to see for himself how the garbage cleanup was progressing. He returned to city hall to find landlords demonstrating behind police barricades, waving placards that read: "Rent control is killing us."

The strike of superintendents and employees of rent-controlled Manhattan apartments began May 26. It cut off elevator service, mail deliveries, garbage disposal and heat and hot water for an estimated 130,000 families.

Local 32-B demanded that landlords meet the terms of an earlier contract signed by 4,000 other Manhattan apartment owners, not under rent control. It provided an $18-a-week increase over three years of wages that averaged $85 a week.

CULTURAL lag in Canada, compared with U.S. was explained in Toronto by Judy LaMarsh, secretary of state. Private benefactors give aid in U.S. But in Canada dependence is on government, she stated.

Arab Groups Protest

OTTAWA (CP) — Arab communities across Canada will step up activities and move closer together in the wake of reports that Canadian volunteers are going to Israel, the president of the Arab Community of Canada said Friday.

Dr. George Haggar, 32, of Waterloo, Ont., said in an interview he has sent a letter to Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin asking for a statement on the government's position on Canadians enlisting in foreign military forces.

"All we want is for the government to invoke the law and apply it to both sides," said Dr. Haggar, a political science professor at Waterloo Lutheran University.

Dr. Haggar, who led a protest group on Parliament Hill Thursday during British Prime Minister Wilson's visit, said the group was "trying to force the hand of the government" on this question.

To Stimulate or . . .

GOVERNMENTS HAVE AN ADvantage over individuals and private organizations when it comes to planning expenditures. They can turn the old maxim around so that it reads "A penny spent is a penny earned." Thus a government deficit such as Finance Minister Sharp proposed in his budget speech can be seen as a method of pumping funds into the economy which will invigorate it and allow Canadians to earn more.

What causes concern, therefore, is not that there is to be a budgetary deficit but rather its size, its timing and the fact that it is to be the eleventh in an unbroken string stretching through both good years and bad.

The crucial question, which will be answered in time, is whether Mr. Sharp has judged correctly that the need to stimulate the economy overrides the possibility that a deficit will increase inflationary pressures. It should be noted that the largest portion of the budgetary deficit does not work its way into the economy. Of the estimated $740 millions excess of spending over revenues, approximately $439 millions will be siphoned off into various pension, unemployment insurance and old age security funds and other resting places. The remaining $301 millions, the deficit calculated on a national accounts basis, will be the additional flow of funds pumped into the Canadian spending stream.

The inflationary potential of this flow is debatable. Mr. Sharp has predicted a gain in the Gross National Product of 6½ to 7 per cent, that is to about $60 billions. The $301 millions national account deficit, therefore, will represent only about half of one per cent of the GNP and by itself could be considered only a minor inflationary factor. Its effect, however, may be increased by the fact that in the previous year, while there was a budgetary deficit of $428 millions, on a national accounts basis there was a surplus of $140 millions, and the year prior to that, there was a national accounts surplus of $568 millions. The amount of extra government expenditure going into the economy is thus somewhat more than appears at first glance in comparison with the last two years during which inflation was a distinct problem.

The total budgetary deficit also has another inflationary implication although not so immediate. This results from the need for the government to borrow heavily to meet its budget requirements, with a likely consequent increase in interest rates and a tighter money market. The inflationary effect of high interest rates is slow but pervasive and eventually works its way into almost every part of the economy.

Mr. Sharp is obviously banking on two things in thus coolly risking his reputation on a calculation that inflation is not a major threat. One is that the economy will not overheat as a result of either domestic or foreign pressures. The other is that the nation will become more productive and more competitive vis-a-vis the rest of the world in which it sells the major share of its goods. He has a third string to his bow, the power to raise taxes at a later date if inflation does become a distinct danger. Mr. Sharp has prudently left that course of action open although it is to be hoped that it will not be necessary.

A Mounting Problem

THE CANADIAN MENTAL Health Association, in the course of a country-wide informational campaign, offers some sobering statistics on this phase of the national health.

We are told that mental illness disables more people than all other diseases combined; that 30 per cent of any community's population has suffered at least temporary disability from this cause; that one-tenth of the Canadians born this year will have resort at some time to a mental clinic or institution; that 5.4 million people in this country suffer from "disabling disorders"; that at any given time some 75,000 Canadians are undergoing institutional care.

These are startling figures to readers unfamiliar with the inroads of mental stress in our era. We are told that 100,000 children are acutely ill with mental disturbance, but that there are treatment facilities for only 400; that there are at least 230,000 alcoholics in Canada, 5,000 narcotic users; that absenteeism because of mental illness, along with accidents, alcoholism and physical illness resulting from emotional causes cost Canadian business and industry an estimated $1 billion a year.

Such facts are bad enough. But the Association adds the equally pertinent information that our approach to the problem is more illustrative of the 19th century than of today. There is little public recognition of the extent of the problem, little appreciation of the limitation of treatment facilities and of the great strides which must be made in diagnosis and treatment.

Funds provided by governments of various levels tell the story. Research in mental problems is given $1 million a year. But agricultural research receives 30 times this amount, defence research 60 times as much. On a basis comparable to that of the United States we should be spending some $20 millions a year on mental illness research. And in addition to research, there are urgent national needs for bed accommodation and post-treatment centres.

The CMHA directs its efforts towards improvement of treatment and rehabilitation for mentally ill persons, towards the prevention of mental illness, towards promoting research and organizing all allied agencies in the most effective attack on the problem.

The funds must of necessity be mainly provided by federal and provincial governments, and this requires an informed public to see that their legislatures are alert to the need.

Over the Side

MR. GRANT DEACHMAN HAS drawn Parliament's attention to a developing situation which should concern the mushrooming number of pleasure boat operators in this part of the world.

He is disturbed, as are many residents of Vancouver, by the volume of garbage dumped by small craft in the Strait of Georgia.

"As our wealth grows and our leisure increases," he says, "the number of small craft sailing in this area is increasing at a tremendous rate. All kinds of new facilities are needed, and the use of these craft needs to be brought under a certain measure of control because the point is being reached at which they are beginning to pollute the Strait of Georgia."

Garbage, says the Vancouver-Quadra member, is washing up on beaches where people have built permanent homes and cottages. He suggests action by the minister before dumping practices become entrenched.

His proposal is timely. Man has acquired a reputation for fouling his environment. He is moving increasingly to water to enjoy himself. If, in the process, he makes the water unattractive, he loses, as do the owners of waterfront homes and cottages.

The drive now is for more and more facilities — marine parks, marinas, launching ramps, coast guard protection and the like. It is proper that they should be provided, but with their provision should come a corresponding acceptance by the boating public of a responsibility to protect the water and the shore from pollution.

English-language Canadian publicists are emphasizing repeatedly that Expo 67 is the result of collaboration among the federal and provincial governments of Canada, the municipal administration of Montreal, foreign countries, workers and labor organizations, etc. Perhaps it is because of this emphasis that Jean-Noel Tremblay Quebec minister of cultural affairs, accuses politicians of wanting to sell Confederation through Expo's success.

As far as we are concerned, it is ages ago that we bought Confederation in the sense that we still believe in the possibility of co-existence, in a life of harmony among Canadians of all origins provided that the people who are not of our ethnic group are willing to recall the facts that we are the discoverers, the developers and the settlers of Canada. And that this, without making us superior to our fellow-citizens in 1967, should guarantee the respect of our language, of the religion of the most of us, of our customs, etc.

If we have bought Confederation in the sense which we have just explained we do not believe that success of Expo is owed to Confederation.

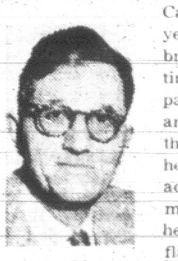
Expo is not a federal or international gift to French Canada. It is being held in Montreal first and foremost because of the stubbornness of Mr. Drapeau, of the diplomatic talents of Mr. Pierre Dupuy, of the organizing genius of Mr. Robert F. Shaw and of Col. Edward Churchill.

ARRESTED FLIGHT

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

An Irresolute Rebel in a Non-Quest of Ease

THE tragedy of my neighbor, Mr. Horace Snifkin, would be a private affair if more than a million Canadians, according to latest statistics, were not in the same desperate straits. His tragedy is the tragedy of the nation, or a large part of it, in this happy centennial year. The thing occurred suddenly, almost casually, as major crises commonly do. It occurred, to be precise, at Mr. Snifkin's summer cottage when he and his wife were suffering their regular breakfast hate-in. On that particular morning the domestic temperature was even lower than usual because Mrs. Snifkin had just committed her annual mass murder, by poison.



Hutchison

The genocide of innocent mice always distresses Mr. Snifkin and this year he had failed to remove the poison in time. All the mice who lived through the winter in the cottage were dead and Mr. Snifkin, as an accomplice to the crime, could not forgive himself.

It was then, in the silence of the hate-in, that he decided to leave his lakeside camp and start a new life. So he drove secretly to the village and placed his property in the hands of Archie Binns, the real estate agent, for sale at any reasonable price.

Decision

After almost half a century of ownership, toil and manly pleasure in the great outdoors, this was a shaking decision. But like countless other Canadians, Mr. Snifkin made it on the spur of the moment. He was finished forever, he told Mr. Binns, with the tyranny of the great outdoors.

There were other reasons, besides the mice murder, for Mr. Snifkin's stern resolve, reasons that every camp man in Canada will appreciate at this time of year. As Mr. Snifkin outlined them briefly to me, he was old, depleted and tired of cutting firewood, clearing trails, painting boats, building guest houses and, above all, entertaining guests from the city who never raised a finger to help him and complained about the accommodation. In his lifelong war with mother nature she had finally won. All he wanted was rest in a comfortable city flat.

Thanks to the wise policies of the state, he said, inflation had so greatly increased the value of his camp that its sale would easily finance his retirement. Some ignorant young couple, unaware of the misery before them, would buy the camp at a ridiculous price and live to regret it, but that was their lookout.

Mr. Snifkin would be lying on the winter beaches of Hawaii surrounded by luscious maidens with guitars while back in the Pacific coast woods the new camp owners would be burning wet brush in the snow and mending leaks in the roof. Or he would be touring the art galleries of Europe and drinking deep of culture too long neglected.

Better still, Mr. Snifkin thought he might devote his remaining years to public service, possibly as a school trustee or alderman. He might even aspire to the Canadian Senate, for which he felt himself perfectly qualified by old age, an ignorance of government, the need of a substantial pension and certain assistance to the Liberal party.

Warming to these prospects, he reminded me that he had sometimes actually voted Liberal, had once driven party voters to the polls and written a letter to the press denouncing Mr. Diefenbaker. This record, he felt, would appeal to Mr. Pearson when the next Senate seat was open. Most senators had done less.

Or if the prime minister judged that some other man's claims were stronger there would be ample opportunity for Mr. Snifkin to pursue a second career more distinguished than the first. Once he was free of harsh physical labor his accumulated wisdom could be codified and given to an eager world in a book which might well start an intellectual revolution.

After all, Professor Marshall McLuhan had made a fortune and had become the most famous of Canadians with a theory far less profound than Mr. Snifkin's. I asked for a short explanation of this theory but Mr. Snifkin was too wise to reveal it before he had secured a copyright. In any case, he added, no theory could be popular and profitable if the public understood it, as demonstrated by Professor McLuhan. But if it was beyond public understanding, if it could never be explained, then the whole world would instantly embrace it and pronounce its author a genius.

Having spent a winter staggering through the McLuhan book, as through a tangled coast jungle, Mr. Snifkin thought he knew all the tricks of the prophet's trade.

Deliverance

It only remained to sell the camp. Mr. Snifkin's spirits rose as he contemplated his blessed deliverance from labor and responsibility. Best of all, he could abandon the half-built guest house started last year and due to be completed before next autumn. His sigh of relief moved me deeply.

You know the end already. This morning the real estate agent arrived with a young couple who offered Mr. Snifkin a price at least twice what he had expected. Naturally, he refused it as quite inadequate, indeed preposterous after his half century of toil and improvement.

What price, the agent asked, would be acceptable? Mr. Snifkin thought for almost ten seconds and said he might, just might, take a million dollars if it were paid in cash before noon, half an hour from now. And when I last saw him he was finishing the roof on the new guest house and whistling merrily in the dim twilight.

Letter to the Editor

No Comparison

I was most interested in the comments by Elizabeth Forbes in her column of May 31st regarding my review of The Prime Ministers of Canada, 1867-1967.

I have read Mr. Hutchison's book, and not only is there a copy on my own bookshelf but there are, as she suggested, several volumes in the University library. And moreover, I believe I reviewed the book in the Times when it first came out.

It is not that I was unaware of Mr. Hutchison's book as she would suggest, but rather that I thought The Prime Ministers of Canada, 1867-1967 should not be mentioned in the same breath with Hutchison's Mr. Prime Minister. The former contains thumbnail sketches. There is no attempt at analysis, there is no revelation of new material, there are no new viewpoints expressed. The presentation, in brief, was a series of thumbnail sketches, no more, no less. As such I could compare it to no other that I have read.— R. H. Roy, Associate Professor of History, University of Victoria.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

Meanwhile the Fires of the Refugee Problem Smoulder

IN the midst of an explosive Mideast crisis, it is difficult for diplomats to think seriously about healing the deep wounds which have inflamed Arab-Israeli relations for nearly 20 years. There are much more urgent tasks at hand. Yet when there is no crisis, the temptation is to let sleeping dogs lie. It is a bit like the old saw about the leaking room which could not be fixed in the rain and did not need repairs when the sun was shining.

Frye

Until something is done about the underlying causes of Arab-Jewish conflict, the world is likely to be carried periodically to the brink of war, and perhaps one day hurled over the precipice.

Of all the wounds which inflame Arab-Jewish relations, the refugee problem is the most gangrenous. More than 1,000,000 men and women who once had satisfactory or comfortable lives on what is now the Israeli side of the armistice line have been subsisting for nearly 20 years in hovels, caves or miserable UN encampments, having fled or been driven from their homes during the 1948 war. The UN budget for their support is seven cents per person per day.

Bitterness

Some of these refugees can literally look across the frontier and see their former properties. Their bitterness has never eased, and is being passed along to their children. There is no sign that time will ever heal the problem.

This bitterness and belligerence is a principal immediate cause of the present crisis.

It is refugees who, at least in the first instance, made up the guerrilla bands whose depredations inside Israel led to threats of Israeli reprisal against Syria—threats which, in turn, precipitated Nasser's eviction order for the UN peace army and his subsequent blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba.

It was refugees in Gaza who were involved, this past week, in the first shooting incidents along the frontier. The so-called Palestine Liberation Army, which is goading both the U.A.R. and Syria toward war, is made up largely of refugees.

Israel will almost certainly have to buy back, in a bargaining process, the freedom of navigation and relief from guerrilla terrorism which she obtained in 1956 at the point of a gun—and has now lost at the point of a gun.

The alternative to negotiating would be to go to war once again. But the Arabs are stronger today, and more united, than in 1956, and they have fuller Soviet backing. They are no longer the pushovers they were a decade ago.

The United States and others are pressing Israel to negotiate, and she apparently has agreed to try. But there is really only one major thing Israel can give in such a negotiation: Readmission and (or) compensation of the refugees.

During the period of massive immigration into Israel, the argument that the Arab refugees could not be readmitted because there was no room for them had great force for the Israeli government. To take back Arabs and refuse admission to Jewish exiles was unthinkable in Tel Aviv.

Now, however, the flood has subsided. Immigration was down from a peak of 240,000 in 1949 to 31,000 in 1965, and there were nearly 8,000 who left Israel that year.

Only if the Soviet Union should open its gates and let some or all of the 3,000,000 Russian Jews migrate would there again be this kind of lebensraum problem in Israel—and such a decision by Moscow is unlikely in the extreme.

Other objections to taking back the refugees never had full validity. Israel professes to fear they would be an unmanageable security problem, but she has dealt effectively with a smaller Arab minority.

Transformation

Moreover, the refugees are a mounting security problem for Israel now, where they are, crossing and recrossing Israel's borders. Inside Israel, they would be within easier range of the security police and the whole political atmosphere in the Midwest would have been transformed.

Some years ago an American diplomat, Dr. Joseph E. Johnson of the Carnegie Endowment, worked out a compromise solution under which refugees who wished to return to Israel, and stay—quite possibly, in the event, a small percentage—would be let in. The remainder would be compensated for their lost property and helped via a massive economic development program, to make new and productive lives in the Arab world.

In return for helping implement this plan, Israel could reasonably insist on free passage, not only through the Gulf of Aqaba but through the Suez Canal as well. The principal motive for guerrilla terrorism by Arab refugees would be removed.

American help in the development program could restore shattered Western relations with the oil-rich and strategic Arab world, slowing or halting alarming Soviet advances there.

It is difficult to see how to get from here to there. But the alternative to trying is for the world to go on staging periodic jamborees on a flaming keg of Mideast dynamite.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Just north of Pike Lake along the power line right-of-way, there are some very interesting land folds and flora.

Here the camas has re-established itself on the rock covered slopes.

The stonecrop with its star-like flowers and many-hued leaves now dominates the ground. Growing among them you can find the little cancer root with its single flower and naked stem. Look on the shady side of the rocks to spot this unique little plant.

There is a little stream turning and twisting along the valley where small open places have been grazed. Growing on the banks you will find violets ranging in color from the sprawling yellow to some that are almost pink. Here the skunk cabbage leaves are short and stunted and the fleshy "club" with its bristly seed pods stand out.

In places beside the creek the ninebark predominates and there are several clumps of the Douglas Maple with its three to five-lobed leaves, many of which are blotched with a bright red dot.

Stop on one of the high rocky knolls and look on either side of the clearing. One side is still the old Douglas fir forest, while on the other it has been logged.

The logged area shows a different pattern of growth. Here the many hued broad-leaf trees predominate—willows, alders and maples show up strongly, while many kinds of shrubs give variety in color. There are many arbutus trees growing with them and the shiny leaves and the bare trunks provide a contrast.

There are a number of burned out snags scattered in this area. These are the homes of woodpeckers. If you stay awhile and watch, you will see the pileated woodpecker has its nest in a lone tall snag. As it leaves the nest on a hunting foray, it gives out that loud wick-wick-wick ending with a sharp kee-yer.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

It was another week of agonizing tension in the Middle East, but each day without shooting seemed to increase the chances of a peaceful solution in the current dispute.

At the same time all the fury and bitterness generated by threats and charges on each side made it more likely the Arabs and Jews will resort to war sometime in the future to settle their differences.

At the moment the crisis boils down to what Israel's allies intend to do about Egypt's blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba. Israel has declared she will act alone to force open the sea lane to her vital Red Sea port of Elath, but it is apparent she is counting on her friends for help.

The posture taken by Israel's principal allies is ironic.

France, after playing a leading role in the 1956 Suez adventure which sowed the seeds of the present trouble, declared virtuously she would not take part in any joint action involving the use of force.

And the United States, still blasting away with both barrels in Vietnam, was urging everyone to exercise restraint.

Britain, who also got her fingers burned in the 1956 invasion, was sticking this time to careful diplomacy too.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson flew to Ottawa for talks with Prime Minister Pearson and then on to Washington to meet President Johnson.

Britain and the U.S. issued a declaration to the effect that the Gulf of Aqaba is an international waterway and must be kept open for ships of all nations. It is obvious, however, that President Nasser will not respond to mere words and the key question is what steps will be taken to enforce the declaration.

The Western powers continued to hope that the answer will come from the United Nations, but chances of this appeared slim. The 15-nation Security Council could not even agree on the wording of a simple resolution urging a "breathing spell" in the Mideast to cool off tensions.

And the Soviet Union, backing the Arab cause, could veto any move to create a UN-sponsored convoy to Elath to break the blockade.

Meanwhile, the Arabs and Israelis continued to gird for war.

Many Israelis were pressing the government of Premier Levi Eshkol for less restraint and more decisive action against Egypt. Their morale was boosted when Eshkol named as defence minister the flamboyant Gen. Moshe Dayan, hero of the 1956 campaign at Suez.

At the same time most of the Arab nations buried their rivalries in the common cause against Israel. King Hussein of Jordan, a longtime foe of Nasser, flew to Cairo to sign a mutual defence pact with Egypt.

The Arab oil-producing nations are meeting this weekend to draw up a common policy to cut off supplies to any nation supporting Israel in a military conflict.

Premier Youssef Zeayen of Syria has already threatened to blow up oil pipelines and set fire to wells in the event of war.

Canada, one of the leading peace-makers in 1956, was ruled out of a similar role this time when it was on the receiving end of some harsh words from Nasser.

The Egyptian president said Canada was taking a pro-Israel position and demanded that the 720-man Canadian contingent with the UN Emergency Force in Gaza get out immediately. It did, within 48 hours.

And the final insult came from the tiny Arab oil country of Kuwait which closed the doors of its Expo pavilion in a huff. Other Arab nations may follow suit.

Briefly:

The Liberals held four Quebec seats in federal byelections but lost Sudbury to the NDP.

The Progressive Conservatives led by Premier Robert Stanfield won their fourth straight general election in Nova Scotia, winnig 40 of the 46 seats at stake. The Liberals won the other six.

Nigeria Tearing Apart Through Tribal Division

LONDON — The seven-year-old Federation of Nigeria has finally split asunder. Since January 15, 1966, when the country's civilian government was overthrown by a miltiary coup, the unity of the African giant with a population nearing 60,000,000 has been increasingly tenuous.

For long there was hope that a compromise could be reached on the link between the country's four regions — particularly the Eastern Region — and the federal government in Lagos. This is basically the issue on which the country has split.

By declaring the East to be the independent Republic of Biafra, Lieutenant Colonel Odumegwu Ojukwu — the bearded, highly articulate strong man of the Ibo people — has shown that he sees no possibility of an accommodation between the views of the Ibos and those of the federal government.

Colonel Ojukwu was given a mandate for secession by his consultative assembly on May 26. He did not act on it immediately. But in the meantime the head of the federal government, Lieutenant Colonel Yakubu Gowon, declared an emergency and put into operation his contingency plan of dividing the four regions of Nigeria into 12.

COL. GOWON
. . . fights separation

For the East, which under Colonel Gowon's order became three regions, the crucial point was that the Ibo people would lose the main oil territory of their region — the swampy areas of the Niger Delta, which are inhabited by a number of minority non-Ibo groups. Colonel Ojukwu warned that a "bloody conflict" would follow if the federal government tried to enforce this division of the East, but now he seems to have pre-empted the issue by seceding.

Held Funds

Colonal Ojukwu was been laying the foundations for the East's secession for a long while. Federal revenues collected in the region were appropriated, 10 key federal installations were taken over — including the ports, airways and the electriticy industry (the only installation which did not run at a deficit) and Colonel Ojukwu openly called on all Easterners in the police and prison services to return home.

The declaration of independence by the East is now certain to bring "home" as many as a million Ibos, in addition to the 1,800,000 who fled to the East after the massacre in the Northern Region last summer.

It was this massacre, and the subsequently-discovered murder of General Ironsi, the Ibo who has led the federal government after the January coup, which led the Eastern Region to put up the barricades against domination by the vast Northern Region, which had earlier dominated the civilian government of Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa.

No Going Back

From last summer onwards Colonel Ojukwu held out for a loose assocation between the component parts of Nigeria; he constantly said there was no going back to the old federal idea. And until recently the dispute was between the East on the one hand, and the federal government and the rest of the country on the other.

But of late there has been a shift by the Western and Mid-West regions over to the Eastern conception of the regions' powers vis-a-vis the central government.

Some observers see Colonel Gowon's sudden move to turn Nigeria into 12 regions as an attempt to head off the new alignment of the West and Mid-West behind the East. Under Colonel Gowon's plan, the huge Hausa-dominated North divides into six regions, while the West and Mid-West remain virtually intact.

However, the speed with which Colonel Gowon was forced to act, and the subsequent secession of the East have brought a further twist to the situation. What the West and Mid-West will do now is of great importance, but they certainly cannot relish the prospect of more scope for domination by the North.

The Western Region, which was the main bone of contention during Nigeria's 5½ years of civilian rule, is militarily too weak to offer resistance on its own to any attack from the North. During the 16-month crisis, it has been thought to be holding the balance of power between the feuding North and East.

The man responsible for the alignment with Colonel Ojukwu is Chief Obafemi Awolowo, the leader of the Yoruba people and head of the banned Action Group during the period of civilian rule.

Supports East

Chief Awolowo told a recent meeting of Western Region leaders that he supported the East over the question of revenue being allocated strictly on the basis of the area of derivation. The meeting endorsed Chief Awolowo's views and went on with the resolve; "in the event of any of the component units seceding or being forced out, the Federation, as we know it, shall cease to exist;" in which case, the resolution went on: "Western Nigeria shall automatically become independent and sovereign."

The Western Region has no particular love for the Ibos of the East as such, but it fears domination by the North even more. The mid-West, which is the newest and smallest region and unlike the others has no one dominant tribal grouping, has a rough harmony of views with the East over association with the central government and over revenue, but it has always thrown in its lot with the Federal Government for keeping Nigeria together.

The fact that the Mid-West is in the firing line of any hostilities between its neighbors, the North Region and the now-independent East, put it in the most invidious position of all.

China Attempting To Recoup Prestige In Middle East

By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post

HONG KONG — Communist China is apparently trying to use the current Middle East crisis to improve its own weak position among the Arab bloc countries.

In a series of statements issued within recent days, Peking has called Israel "a tool of U.S. imperialist aggression," while reaffirming China's support for the Arabs.

The Chinese have also accused the Soviet Union of playing "the role of chief accomplice in U.S. imperialism's activities to intimidate the Arab countries by force and exert political pressure on them."

Among other charges, Peking's official People's Daily asserted in an editorial monitored here that Washington's insistence that the United Arab Republic keep open the Gulf of Aqaba is "an undisguised threat of war."

Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi told a group of Arab diplomats in Peking: "Your victory against imperialism is also our victory. It is the Chinese people's internationalist duty to support you."

The diplomats present were the envoys of the United Arab Republic, Algeria, Syria, Iraq, Yemen and Morocco as well as a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Prestige Down

In the opinion of analysts here, these hollow propaganda stereotypes reflect the decline of Chinese prestige in the Middle East since the Suez crisis of 1956, when Peking's stock among the Arab nations was relatively high.

At that time, the Chinese rushed shipments of iron and steel to Cairo while offering to supply the Egyptians with "volunteers" to fight against the combined British, French and Israeli force.

Peking enjoyed another brief period of popularity among the Arabs in 1960, when it initiated a program to train Algerian guerrillas then battling the French for independence.

The low point in China's relations with the Middle East came in October, 1965, when the Chinese boycotted a second attempt to hold an Afro-Asian conference in Algiers. Peking's influence, such as it was, has never recovered from that moment.

The slight gains Peking scored by backing the Syrians in their friction with the Egyptians were largely vitiated last summer, when the Syrian government did nothing to impede the U.S. Embassy in Damascus from giving asylum to a defector from the Chinese legation there.

The Chinese have also marked some points by promoting extremist elements in the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has an office in Peking. For the most part, however, this has been an exercise in propaganda.

Over the past decade, the Chinese failure to secure a durable foothold in the Middle East has stemmed, among other things, from Peking's inability to provide significant aid, its refusal to tolerate Arab neutralism, and its harsh attitude towards Moslems inside China.

With Moscow

Except for a pro-Chinese faction in Lebanon called the Party of Socialist Revolution, nearly all the Arab Communist movements have sided with Moscow in the Sino-Soviet dispute.

The most promising of Peking's potential allies in the Middle East, U.A.R. President Nasser, disenchanted the Chinese by his involvement with "neutralist" blocs such as the non-aligned countries conference that met in Belgrade in 1961.

Further, tension developed between Cairo and Peking late in 1965, when pro-Chinese Egyptian Communists were accused of plotting to kill Nasser. The chief of the New China News Agency in Cairo was recalled on the charge of financing the conspirators.

Compared to the Soviet Union, China has only been able to afford insignificant amounts of aid to the Arab countries.

Little Trade

Peking's trade with the Arab nations has been paltry. The major deals have included the purchase of Berliet trucks, produced under French licence in Algeria and Morocco.

In the mid-1950s, China began making religious appeals to the Arabs through Burhan Shahidi, a German-educated Tartar from Sinkiang province who headed the Chinese Islamic Association.

Among his activities, Burhan led a mission of Chinese Moslems to Mecca in 1956, inviting prominent Arab personalities to visit China in exchange. In radio broadcasts beamed to the Middle East, Burhan also asserted that the Koran justified "resistance to aggression."

Those 'Able Executives' In the Canadian Senate

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — Next time I look in on that hive of inactivity, the Senate, my scorn will be slathered with respect; indeed, even tinged with awe.

Waring

Senator, Donald Cameron brought about this change in me. In a spirited defence of the Senate, he wrote recently that "Any one who takes the trouble to examine the record will find that in addition to their duties in the Senate, most of the members of that institution are engaged in running some of Canada's largest businesses."

Now, it seems a little strange that senatorial moonlighting should be the gauge of senatorial worth, but that's what the man implies.

"Many of these men are acknowledged by their peers in the business community to be among Canada's ablest executives in business, industry, the professions, and education," wrote Senator Cameron, who does his senatorial moonlighting as director of the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Senator Cameron could say the same thing about the Rotary Club — but Rotarians aren't paid $15,000 a year to serve the public interest.

So let's have a look at these senatorial tycoons. There are 102 members of the Senate, but because the mortality rate is high, and because prime ministers like to dangle senatorships before they award them, the Senate is rarely up to authorized strength.

There are currently seven vacancies, but Senator Cameron says that "most" of those senators still surviving are running big businesses. "Most" means more than half, or at least 46.

I've checked through the biographies of the senators as published in the Parliamentary Guide, and I can find only 17 senators whom I'd put in the top middle executive echelon, or higher.

There are eight industrialist: Senators Aird, Beaubien, Cook, Gelinas, McCutcheon, Molson, Patterson and Rattenbury.

A cut below industrialists are businessmen, some of them lawyers too: Belisle, Haig, Macnaughton, Sydney Smith, Thorvaldson, and Willis.

Then there's Sen. Bourget, a consulting engineer, Sen. Cameron, an educationalist, and Sen. Davey, an out-of-work football league commissioner.

As they say in horse show biz, that is your class sir.

The only tycoons I recognize are Patterson and Molson. Sen. McCutcheon is a former tycoon — he used to run E. P. Taylor's Argus Corp. — but right now he's convinced that what was good for Argus Corp. will be good for the Tory party, so he's offering for the leadership.

In announcing his candidature he made one comment on the Senate: that an appointed Senate "may be becoming obsolete."

However helpful it may be for businessmen to be on the inside of government, I wonder if part-time senators are the answer to Parliament's crying need in this year of legislative crisis?

If we required them, by constitutional amendment, to be elected every four years, we'd likely have a lot fewer tycoons in the Senate. And a lot more hard working senators — of which there is a small minority now — who would make the Upper House earn its keep by easing the perpetual legislative log-jam in the Commons.

When the Deep Purple Falls Over Drowsy Mountain Walls

By ART STOTT

The years, the weather and lack of adequate upkeep have left the sundeck of the old boathouse decrepit. Paint has scaled off, flooring has warped and, in one corner, water left undrained has set up a patch of rot. This is scarcely the well-kept expanded verandah where visitors in Sunday clothes sat to chat in an earlier day and tea was served graciously.

Stott

The surroundings have deteriorated, but the magnificent view of the Olympics changing color at dusk remains, and the sights and sounds of the summer beach are clear to the eye and the ear.

We sat there this week on one of those too infrequent evenings on Victoria's waterfront when the air is warm and still, when nature breathes a sort of benediction on our part of the world. The fragrance of new-cut grass came, bleeding from the mowed lawn and the rough ground where a neighbor was showing an old skill with a scythe.

The lady of the house, who has pretty well mastered her surprise at anything on or in the water since an amphibious motor car nearly ran her down cruising Shawnigan lake, was only mildly startled by activity in our section of the bay.

The monsters from outer space who shook her credulity turned out to be merely a couple of skin divers, carvorting above the eel-grass and floundering down to check the size of crabs. She noted with mild interest only the small outboard whipping along beyond the kelp line, estimating that it probably went faster than my boat at its best. These were small distractions in an evening of repose — the kind of evening that invites retrospect in this location.

While she watched the ungainly manoeuvring of the merry skin divers, my eyes and mind wandered across the water and the years to High Rock.

The woods I knew above the big stone shoulder when it was boyhood's swimming hole, have gone now. The brush has made way for lawns and cultivated gardens. The wild honeysuckle, from whose blossoms we drew a small drop of nectar, and the tiger lilies, spotted orange in the shade of willow and conifer, have been displaced by cultivated flowers.

The fire-blackened crease in the rock itself, a sort of tribal gathering place for boys trying to become men, is weathering to a more subdued hue and the flames, smoke and embers that were elements of an adolescent rite no longer dance, play or glow. Fires are not permitted there any longer.

Nor are they, in a casual way, on the beach, though refractory youth occasionally sets them and runs away before the police and firemen arrive. The sands above the tideline are log-covered — no place for the wrestling of young romance that long preceded the formal love-in. Sharp glass from a broken whiskey or beer bottle adds menace to the ground for the bare feet of little toddlers, as do the nails protruding from boards of rafts broken up by the play of waves.

There is still, however, a fort or two constructed in joy by youngsters from driftwood — rude shelters that are the homes of fancy for their builders and occupants.

A small redhead, playing in one briefly in the late hours of daylight, could find there the miracle of the submarine for his even more miraculous journeys through the deeps — and without moving from the spot.

Much that we took for granted, and unconsciously cherished, on the beach has departed. Civilization, or part of its veneer, has smothered some of the primitive and simple enjoyments. Fire is taboo. The custom of the waterfront which made rowboats drawn up over the logs inviolable, which guaranteed that a stack of bark or beachwood properly piled would be left untouched for later collection, no longer prevails. The rules of an earlier time have been forgotten.

Yet the serenity of a warm evening, the peace of the distant mountains, the happiness of young children in their fanciful games, remain. At this point civilization and progress have yet to destroy them.

It must be frustrating to civilization and progress.

The Hon. John Gilbey— International Quality Controller

Embarking on one of his frequent voyages overseas, the Hon. John Gilbey talks about his unique job as Gilbey's International Quality Controller—and why it takes him to every corner of the earth:

"My gin has been the best gin in the world for no less than 110 years," says the Hon. John Gilbey. "It is my job to make sure that Gilbey's London Dry matches the original English standard no matter where it is made." So he travels to the 39 countries where Gilbey's London Dry is famous, and he samples the gin that carries his name.

"Wherever I taste Gilbey's London Dry," he explains, "I expect to find the subtle flavour that people call . . . the perfect balance for mixed drinks."

Next time you see Gilbey's famous frosty bottle, remember the Hon. John Gilbey and his job as Gilbey's International Quality Controller. And as you taste the gin with the perfect balance for mixed drinks, bear in mind his proud words: "This is my gin! For no less than 110 years it has carried my family's name. Gilbey's London Dry is the gin with the perfect balance for mixed drinks. And I shall make sure it stays that way."

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

It is not unusual, in fact, perfectly normal, for people involved deeply along certain lines to be unaware of what is happening around them in other fields.

But it is a little startling to discover something important has been going on in one's own area without one being conscious of it.

I did certainly know that a German singing group was active in Victoria in the 1860s. But I didn't know that it had a descendant, born exactly a hundred years after the founding of that first choir.

It seems that the Victoria Harmony Choir with about 45 voices came into being in November of 1961, being got together by Mrs. Gretel Adam.

But that is not all.

There is, I discover, also an organization known as the German North Pacific Singing Federation (Nordpazifischer Saengerbund) whose history goes back to 1851 in San Francisco.

The Victoria Harmony Choir is affiliated with this organization and in collaboration with it will, this year, be hosts at a 21st song festival involving groups from Seattle, Portland, Spokane and Vancouver.

June 22 to 25 are the dates and the festival will take place in the Crystal Garden and McPherson Playhouse.

Choral Groups Sprang Up

From its beginning as a German male choir in mid-19th century San Francisco, followed by the formation of eight more German-language choirs in the area, the North Pacific Federation emerged as singing choral groups sprang up all along the Pacific Coast.

The first German choir north of San Francisco was founded in Portland, Ore., in 1858 and a short time later, the Concordia Choral Group started up in Spokane.

The pleasure of singing old country songs in their native language inspired German groups in Seattle, Everett, Bellingham and Walla Walla in the 1890s and at the turn of the century the Federation came into being.

Seattle was the scene of the first North Pacific German Song Festival in 1901.

Since that time festivals have been held every four years—latterly every two—in different Pacific Northwest cities.

In 1962 the 19th was held in Vancouver, the first time in a Canadian city. At the 20th, held in Portland, Victoria was chosen for the 21st festival as a gesture to Canada's birthday.

Principal objective of the North Pacific Federation is to maintain musical fellowship among the German choirs in this area and to keep alive German culture with its unsurpassed musical heritage.

It is not known when exactly the old Victoria German choir of 1861 ceased to exist but Mrs. Adam's Victoria Harmony Choir made its debut in the Federation at the 1962 festival in Vancouver.

At present it is under the direction of Dr. Heinz Kilian, a highly qualified musician who has worked with the Duncan Musical Club and other Island organizations.

Erwin Koslowski is president of the choir.

On the evening of June 24 the Victoria group will be joined by about 200 singers from Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Vancouver and other cities in a grand concert at McPherson Playhouse.

This will follow a competition between eight choirs June 23 at the Crystal Garden. A dance and banquet will also be part of a truly festive occasion.

There is something particularly pleasing about the idea of an ethnic group celebrating the birthday of their new country in this way.

Festivals of the arts for which their countries are noted highlight one of the important ways in which they enrich the culture of their adopted country and its people.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

Plans are in the making for a Vancouver Island Battle of the Bands in Victoria later this month even though an unofficial rule says that the bout must take place in the home city of the title holder.

Present holder of the Island crown, giving them the right to title themselves Vancouver Island's top pop music group, is a Nanaimo outfit, The Cry For Justice.

As it stands now it will be a two-band battle with the Cry For Justice and Victoria's Mixed Emotions.

Other Victoria groups The Blues By Five and The Gulliver's Travels have inquired into making it a five or six band effort but the promoters backing the show haven't yet decided what path to follow.

It seems pointless to have a ruling limiting future battles to Nanaimo when there is really no one around to enforce it. So with that in mind promoters are going ahead with plans to bring the Cry For Justice down to this part of the Island for the first time.

Anyway, even with all the confusion that seems to be connected with this Victoria battle two things are for sure.

One, four judges from the mainland will officiate giving an impartial vote and secondly the crowd reaction won't enter into the scores as it did at the recent bout in Nanaimo between the Cry For Justice and the Mixed Emotions.

Bastion Picks Lively Spoof For Summer

Bastion Theatre is already more than 400 season ticket applications along toward its goal of 2,000 subscribers for next season. As many as 20 orders a day are coming in.

As the summer musical at the McPherson Playhouse, Bastion Theatre is presenting Little Mary Sunshine, a light-hearted lively spoof on musical comedy itself.

Set in the Rockies, it has dashing forest rangers, ferocious Indians, a faithful hero and of course, Mary — everyone's little ray of sunshine.

Vanessa Lax plays the title role and leads are sung by Peggy Walton Packard, Dan Christian, Barry Grimshaw, Gordon Limbrick, Ian McIntyre and Ross Petty.

Director is Peter Mannering.

HIS ELECTRIC AUTO SWEET MUSIC TO NOSE

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Everybody talks about the electric automobile as an anti-smog measure, but look who has done something about it: Jascha Heifetz.

The car owned by the violin virtuoso can go 60 miles per hour but must be recharged after 50 miles.

Everything Must Mesh . . . Soon!

Victoria secondary schools are rushing to complete their contributions to the elementary schools' centennial production Journey For Two.

The historical, "time tunnel" type play was written and produced under department of education auspices by Tony Burton and David Allan. More than 30 other school districts are producing the pageant in many parts of B.C. In Victoria the show opens Tuesday playing through Saturday and is sponsored by the Greater Victoria School Board.

Mount View Secondary school is constructing scenery and art students of Bill West at Oak Bay Senior Secondary are painting it. Esquimalt home economic students are working on costumes; Victoria Secondary art department has designed the programs and poster work and the same school has arranged ticket distribution.

Tickets for the 3,795 seats available through the six performances at Oak Bay Junior Secondary School are only obtainable through the schools.

Rehearsals are moving into the final stages now. Until this week Mr. Burton has been going from school to school and rehearsing individual groups. Now the Oak Bay school stage is the scene of action as the separate scenes are being welded into a whole play.

The story tells of two students, kept after class to write an essay, who travel in imagination through Canada's history.

Wyck Porteous of Sir James Douglas School plays the boy and Margaret Dijack, of North Ward, the girl. Hundreds of elementary school children are used in scenes which include dancing, singing and oral speech. Don Stagg from Central Junior Secondary is in charge of music for the production; physical education supervisor Nancy Ferguson directs the dancing and Mrs. Janet Sinclair of Macauley Elementary the choirs and speech.

Victoria Central Productions is in charge of lighting.

Festival Group To Meet June 13

Annual meeting of the Greater Victoria Music Festival Association will take place Tuesday, June 13, at 8 p.m. in the First United Church Assembly Hall.

The executive would be interested in hearing opinions, criticisms and suggestions and stress the meeting is open to all interested persons.

Some of the lunch time wiseacres have been working on our Maitre d', Leslie. It's the same old question, only the answers are changed.

"What's going on behind the board fence in your parking lot?" He doesn't get a chance to reply.

"IT'S A SUNKEN GARDEN FOR RAISING CANE."

"A SCOTSMAN LOST A DIME AND HE'S DIGGING."

"IT'S A SKATING RINK FOR MIDGETS."

"IT'S A BARBECUE PIT FOR DO-IT-YOURSELF DINNERS."

"IT'S A TRAINING SCHOOL FOR MAITRES D'."

Then Leslie patiently explains we are building a special area for sales meetings, conference rooms and private receptions. That's the cue for the man at the window table to call Leslie over.

"What's going on out there?" he asks.

After Hark, Hark the Lark She Knew She Was a Singer

By BERYL PROUDMAN

"Never you mind dearie, you just leave it to me." With these comforting words and a reassuring pat on the shoulder Gladys Pearcy assumes yet another of her neighbour's problems.

There is a firm reliable kindliness about her which shows in everything she does, and many children who today are realizing the satisfaction of singing and singing well would probably never have achieved such satisfaction had they not been taught, persuaded, cajoled and encouraged by Gladys Pearcy.

She understands a singer's feelings for she herself has known stunning disappointment and the elation of success.

As a child in a Devon hospital she was, typically, singing to cheer the other patients when a visitor, hearing her, suggested that she should try for a place at the Royal School of Music in London.

Song Contest

Having taken his advise and won a place she had to resign the scholarship after a short time because of ill-health — a keen disappointment.

When she was only twelve she journeyed up to London to compete in an All-England under-eighteen vocal contest. With her singing of Hark Hark the Lark she won that contest and the right to sing in the famed Albert Hall.

Another of her proudest moments came in 1954 when she was asked to sing before Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower in a concert at the Y.W.C.A. in Washington.

Gladys left England to come to North America in 1945 when she accompanied the Barkway family as nurse to their small daughter.

When asked where she intended to spend her summer holidays this year, a mischievous gleam came into her eyes; she shrugged, spread her hands and said:

"I don't know, I don't like to plan ahead, it takes all the pleasure out of it. I'd rather decide one night and be off next day."

Impulsive

It was this same spur-of-the-moment impulsiveness which prompted her to enter the Albert Hall competition. At that time she was living near Sidmouth, Devon with an aunt and four boy-cousins.

The boys teasingly "dared" her to enter the contest and as a "dare" she entered and won.

This impulsive trait which is so endearing can, on occasion be rather disturbing. Many a young mother has stifled an involuntary moan at being told at noon that her child was to sing at two dressed in her white frock.

Gladys Pearcy has very firm ideas on children, music and education. She feels that every child should know the pleasures of music and should be encouraged to participate in musical activities.

She also feels that young children should be allowed to learn as much as possible while they are young enough and eager enough to take everything in.

"Let them learn" she pleads, "For their fresh young minds can assimilate far more than we usually give them credit for."

Homework

A result of this firm conviction is that many of the children who begin their learning in St. Paul's Nursery School are notably successful in later years.

A child who at four is used to taking home homework assignments just like those of his older brothers and sisters will learn skills and working habits which will stand him in good stead in the world outside the nursery school.

Wherever she goes Miss Pearcy attracts children to her. Even when she was in Washington as Nanny to the family of Capt. Groos she was also running a small private kindergarten for Canadian families posted there.

Junior Choir

Soon after she came to Victoria she started her nursery school at St. Paul's and a year or two later founded the junior choir which, for many years sang at the 9:30 church service.

Her ideas about educating the young child to his capacity were vindicated at the first public appearance of her Wee Folk's Glee Club.

When this group of tots first clambered onto the stage they looked so small and cute that many people who had come to listen to music groaned and the tired adjudicator seemed to wilt.

That such small children could sing at all was doubtful, that they should sing well, impossible.

Yet they performed so well that the adjudicator sat up and the audience smiled delightedly at the sound.

Miss Pearcy has trained all sorts of choirs over the years.

Third Row

One year she even persuaded (some say bullied) a group of her "mothers" to sing. This choir of mothers feeling rather isolated and foolish stuck up there on the stage scanned the audience for an encouraging smile.

Suddenly they found Miss Pearcy. She was sitting in the third row conducting with her head; indicating crescendo and diminuendo markings by raising or furrowing her eyebrows.

Though best known for her work with choirs she has also done significant work with young soloists.

Here again her ideas are somewhat revolutionary. Many teachers feel that it is unwise to train yong voices. The undeveloped voice is a delicate instrument and may be ruined if it is allowed to strive for effects beyond its compass.

Miss Pearcy by careful selection and supervision of exercises has taught many young people to sing artistically. She is aware of the danger of overtaxing the young voice but sees no reason why some of the skills required for singing should not be learnt young.

By her continued success in this field she has convinced many parents of the usefulness of early voice training kd this year the festival adjudicator was moved to remark that he would have to change his conventional ideas on this matter in view of the excellent educative work done by Gladys Pearcy whose pupils were successful in almost every class.

What Is Money?

To Gladys Pearcy money and music have nothing in common. Her help has been available for years to those who needed it and never would she let a lack of money stand in the way of some student who wished to learn.

To her money is mainly useful not for buying, or security and comfort for the future but music and books and extra enrichment supplies for her students.

Maybe, one day, those who feel grateful to her will find some practical way in which to repay her; in the meantime she feels repaid by the satisfaction of achievement.

Anyone who helps so many people in so many ways must be very well organized — wrong. Gladys seems to be almost completely disorganized. She can't be of course or she would never arrive at the right place at the right time with the right music as she almost always does.

There are two theories about her organization. One is that her system is so complex that, like Einstein's theories it gives the impression of haphazard chance to the uninitiated.

The other is that some special guardian angel spends all his time watching over her and making sure that the luck of the gods, that special protection which prevents children from suffering the accidents their actions deserve, goes with her wherever she goes.

Two Theories

Having said that she is a teacher, a musician a magnetic charmer who draws out of the child whatever he is capable of, you then find out that she is also a qualified R.N. and an excellent midwife.

The key to her success lies in one thing. She loves children so wisely that no matter how bad or unproductive a child may seem to others she sees something that is good in him.

Having seen what is best in him she draws it out and develops it until he too knows the satisfaction of realizing his potential.

Contemporary Farce For Theatre Guild

Canadian playwright George Blackburn has created something different in the way of comedies with his A Button is Missing.

A completely contemporary farce, it will be presented by Victoria Theatre Guild for a week's run starting next Saturday at Langham Court Theatre.

One of Victoria's favorite actors, Ken Bostock, stars and the play is directed by Edna Kowalchuk.

On Monday evening, June 26, there will be auditions for casting next season's first two plays, the classic farce, Charley's Aunt, and the brilliant contemporary Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

The Langham Court stage and newly equipped coffee bar will be used for the simultaneous auditions. All parts in both plays are open to auditioners.

An army of member-gardeners descended on the theatre this week and put in half a day giving the grounds a neat and attractive summer look.

SYMPHONY BOX OFFICE OPENS JUNE 12

Musical Thrills . . . Top Artists

On June 12 Victoria Symphony box office opens at Eaton's for two weeks only.

During that period an advance sale of season tickets will take place for the most exciting series of concerts ever unfolded by the Symphony Society.

The series of six recitals by the solo artists at McPherson Playhouse will also go on sale.

Four different series purchase plans for the gala international season — the symphony's 27th — will be available.

BEST BUY

Shoppers for musical thrills can take the whole series of 10 which is certainly the best buy because it offers a wide variety with all the great artists and special events at a maximum discount.

Or they can take the six gala concerts with internationally noted soloists or the four masterwork concerts with soloists and the Victoria Choral Society.

Or they can make up their own series of six, choosing from the 10 pairs.

A handsome brochure of entirely new design is now available giving full information and including a mail order form.

Music-director-conductor Laszlo Gati's busy schedule with Victoria Symphony will be laced with flying visits to Calgary, Montreal and Paris where he is to make guest appearances.

Italy, Soviet Russia, America, Canada, France, Spain, Rumania and Poland have provided the world with the notable soloists who will appear here with the symphony and also in recital.

First concert of the season at the Royal Theatre — an all Beethoven program — will star the Italian violin virtuoso, Pina Carmirelli.

This extraordinary artist was personally selected last season by Rudolf Serkin to perform all the Beethoven piano and voilin sonatas with him at Carnegie Hall.

Pianists to be featured are Marina Mdivani, the brilliant young Russian winner of the Marguerite Long and Jacques Thibaud Competition in Paris; Elvira Lobe, Rumanian-born Canadian pianist who recently had a great success in a Wigmore Hall recital; Victoria's own internationally acclaimed Robin Wood and the great Witold Malcuzinsky, one of the most noted interpreters of the music of Chopin.

Considered among the finest of American cellists, Paul Olefsky, former solo cellist of the Philadelphia Symphony, plays here in November, and Christian Ferras, foremost French violinist, in January.

Ferras was exclusive violin soloist with von Karajan in recordings. Their recording of the Brahms Violin Concerto won the Grand Priz da Disque for 1967. This is the concerto that Ferras will play with the Victoria Symphony.

Christened "king of the harpists", by the London Daily Telegraph, Spanish harp virtuoso Niccanor Zabaleta who has played at all major music festivals around the world and with most major symphonies, will be guest soloist in February.

In December Rodney Webster's Victoria Choral Society and soloists will be heard in a performance of the Messiah, and again in April in Mozart's Requiem and Haydn's Lord Nelson Mass.

The six recitalists to be heard between October and March are Mdivani, Olefsky, Ferras, Zabaleta, Lobe and Malcuzinsky.

Robin Wood will accompany Olefsky, Ferras and Zabaleta at the piano.

After June 24, the symphony box office will close until the early fall.

Band to Play For U.S. Trip

A spring concert, proceeds of which will go to help finance a trip to the Portland Rose Festival, will be given Sunday at McPherson Playhouse by Victoria City Police Youth Band.

The band, which was formed early in 1965, is directed by Flight Lieut. Wilfred V. Boyce, C.D., LRAM, ARCM.

It has 45 boys and girls aged 13 to 21.

The band will present a varied program starting at 2:30 p.m.

LAYTON SAYS:

Writing Poems 'In' Like LSD

PERIODS OF THE MOON, by Irving Layton. McLelland and Stewart Limited. $5 cloth, $2.50 paperback.

Reviewed by Gwladys V. Downes

Irving Layton needs no introduction to readers of poetry in Canada. This is his eighteenth full-length volume and it demonstrates once again that he is one of the most competent writers we have.

"Competent" sounds as though it had pejorative connotations, but I am using it in a more profound sense.

Mr. Layton succeeds in conveying complex emotional states and experiences to the reader with very little fuss, much sincerity, and an economy of means which avoids the more mannered devices of typography and language that hide, so often, a sad poverty of the imagination.

Since Layton has been characterized by critics as a rebel, it is refreshing to watch him launch out in his introduction against this very weakness of the imagination, and the debasing of poetic values which he feels are characteristic of the literary scene during the last few years.

"For several crazy reasons the writing of poetry has become immensely popular. It beats the taking of marijuana and lysergic acid as a coveted status symbol and is even more super than a beard to identify oneself as a rebel and a nonconformist . . . I say there's no harm in that because authentic poetry will survive the inundation of sewage rushing from the burst mains of pseudo-poetry."

Dr. Downes has published poems and translations in many Canadian periodicals. Her collection of poems is entitled LOST DIVER.

The rest of the introduction, which is even more vigorous than the quotation, makes it quite clear that Layton knows exactly what he is talking about, and that he writes, in his own special voice, within a long tradition.

It is not a simple one, but a compound rather of the mixing of Hebrew and North American influences in a clever, sensitive boy transplanted from Rumania to Montreal at a very early age. The almost inevitable prejudices, emotional biases, and reactions resulting from this are obvious throughout all Layton's work. And yet, except as soil from which poetry springs these factors are irrelevant in judging the quality of the results.

Since Layton's sensibility is such a complex one, the poetry arising from it is of necessity a reflection of many elements. Occasionally, these combine into a lyricism as pure as Donne's or Pound's:

> "and then you addressed me > as light moving swiftly > from chair to table > to lie folded there like > a white napkin.
> the light stirred like > some living thing > and fell on the wristbone
> of my right hand."

Although on different subjects, "The Ballad of the Stones," "Light" and "The Wave" represent an equally successful interplay between experience and language.

But, a more characteristic note is found in "Mahogany Red." Layton is very conscious of the march of time as it affects his sexual performance and this poem contains the musing of an aging man (he is in his fifties) on his relationship with his present wife. It is a good example of the various sides of Layton—his frankness, his realism, his irony, and above all, his self-awareness which, even as it watches the poet writing, is conscious of the "bitter, inaccurate" poem which grows out of th situation,

> "It is sad to be an > atheist, > sadder yet to be one with > a limp phallus.

There is much more variety in the volume than these intimate personal statements might suggest, although Layton is rarely absent from even his most impersonal descriptions. Poems of strangers glimpsed on a beach, poems of and to friends, satires, poems of pity, everything is grist to the mill.

I wonder, however, if the volume would not have been better for a little pruning. Individual poems can be successful, and yet too many on the same theme, or on themes already treated by other poets using a similar vocabulary, tend to weary the reader, no matter how interested he is. Layton appears to have been caught by his very competence into producing vignettes, particularly of European scenes, which lack the personal flavor characteristic of his best work. He falls a prey, also, to a certain sentimentality (you don't move a reader to tears by talking about tears), as well as an irritating flipness.

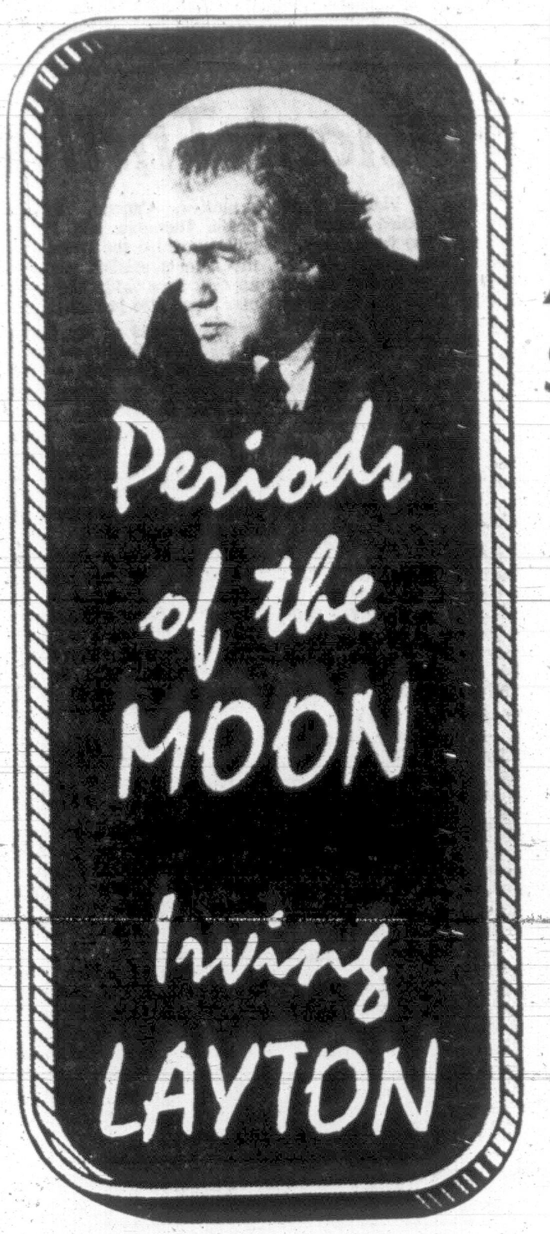
Another characteristic which bothers me is his habit of using his sexual vocabulary (characterized recently by Alfred Purdy as "medical") in poems where it seems to have no poetic function to perform at all. I could be wrong about the "menstrual red" of the traffic light in "Rules," but unless it is meant purely and simply as a symbol of freedom in language it seems to run counter to the thought of the poem itself—the poets freedom, not from tre deepest natural rhythms of living, but from mere rules and regulations. I suspect Layton got caught here by a casual association he just couldn't resist.

Nevertheless, this volume is an excellent introduction to Layton if you haven't read him, and an addition to your library of Canadian poets if you have. The preface is worth reading for its own sake, because, apart from its enthusiasm, it brings to our notice once again that the successful poet must be a maker of poems and consequently, a continual critic of his own.



SURPRISING attack on rival writers is launched by poet Irving Layton, 54, in preface to new slender volume of verse. Book is reviewed at left.

THE FEBRUARY PLAN by James Hall Roberts. George J. McLeod, Ltd., 1967. $5.75.

THE TIME OF THE HAWK by Andrew Tully. George J. McLeod Ltd., 1967. $5.75.

Reviewed by MARJORIE MENHENETT

These are both variations on the spy novel, and both, following the political trends of the moment, are laid in the Far East.

Andrew Tully's Time of the Hawk projects itself into the U.S.-Vietnamese future and concerns itself with the efforts of an American Senator, Brooks Baldwin III, to bring order out of a post cease-fire chaos.

Accompanied by his extra-competent aide and long-time friend Frank Dean, Baldwin has been sent to Vietnam by the president to discover facts and, if necessary, manoeuvre events so as to justify their party's continuance of a firmly anti-Communist stand. While some of the coincidences are on the incredible side (the senator, the president, and a high-born Vietnamese beauty appear to have collaborated in the intelligence work at some time in the not-so-dim past), the plot is cleverly conceived and the characterization is good. This novel makes entertaining reading.

Instead of following the current fad for the Vietnamese scene, James Hall Roberts, author of The Q Document, sets his new novel The February Plan, in Japan, and does a variation of the Fail-Safe theme, the contemporary nightmare.

Determined to discover the facts behind the death of his serviceman son, Philip Corman comes to Tokyo to follow up a lead.

Met alternately with an official run-around or with an excess of information, which just does not correspond with the facts he does know, Corman finds that he is on the trail of an insane attempt by high-placed officials to end the Chinese Communist menace once and for ali. This too is an intriguing narrative.

Most Unusual Character

Hollywood Pilot: The Biography of Paul Mantz by Don Dwiggins is the story of one of aviation's most unusual characters — a stunt flyer, Bendix Air Trophy winner, who was killed in a plane barnstormer and movie pilot crash in 1965.

It is reliably estimated that Paul Mantz made more money with an airplane than any other pilot in the world. His main fame and fortune came from more than 30 years of making planes do suicidal things before motion picture cameras. Hollywood Pilot recounts in detail his many exciting adventures in the field of aviation. The book is published by Doubleday at $7.50.

An Island of Money Surrounded by Florida

THE SEA AND THE STARS, by Robert Wilder, Longmans, $6.95.

Reviewed by GRANT McORMOND

Robert Wilder has written many novels, among them, Wind from the Carolinas and Fruit of the Poppy. His latest, The Sea and the Stars, demonstrates his easy mastery of the narrative art.

It is the story of Stoddard Lathrop, known to his contemporaries as "an island of money surrounded by Florida," head of the Stalath Corporation, with its multi-million dollar holdings throughout the state, and builder of the twenty-million dollar Copa de Oro Club, designed exclusively "for rich millionaires." Thus The Sea and the Stars might be described as a success story, for if the rise of Stoddard Lathrop was not one of rags-to-riches, it was at least one from wealth-to-millions.

But Robert Wilder has also made of his latest novel something of a love story, but a love story with a difference. The beloved of the hero is no mortal woman, but the state of Florida itself.

As a young boy newly-arrived from New York, Lathrop, under the tutelage of his lawyer father, fell in love with the swamps and grazing lands, the sun-drenched beaches and off-shore islands of his adopted state.

From his love was born a dream of opening the area to those who longed for the warm and easy life the climate afforded.

Much of the material for The Sea and the Stars has been borrowed from the history of the various Florida boom-and-bust cycles based upon real estate speculation.

Stoddard Lathrop, however, was no speculator, but a man of vision, dedicated to the full realization of the tremendous potentialities present in the state. Ultimately, trucking companies, dairies, hotels, private clubs and housing developments were parts of the complex corporate structure he created.

This virtually uninterrupted march towards tremendous wealth and power is seen against the relieving background of twentieth century history.

From the idyllic setting of turn-of-the-century Florida, through the turmoil of two world wars and a depression, it is possible to trace the steady progress of the hero and his fortunes.

If, at times, readers are forced to question this uninterrupted span of felicitous activity, these pauses are momentary, for Robert Wilder's skill as a narrator tends to gloss over situations that a less proficient hand might render awkward, if not totally unacceptable.

Here is a story with no love interest, save the love of a man for a parcel of real estate; here is a tale wherein sex plays no significant part; here is depicted nothing sordid or degrading; here, in fact, is a story in the tradition of Horatio Alger, a story where the accumulation of wealth becomes an end in itself.

In spite of these qualities or deficiencies, most readers will find the book satisfactory light reading.

The story is well told; it moves swiftly; and it maintains interest through variety of action, vividness of setting, and detailed accuracy in character portrayal.

Sisters May Be One Girl

A. S. Byatt. THE GAME. London, Chatto and Windus, 1967. $5.50. Reviewed by Sheila Hogg.

The novelist is concerned with exploring "the dangers of imbalance between imagination and reality" within the individual's personality.

This forms the basis of the conflict between the Corbett sisters. Julia, a writer of domestic novels, is extrovert and realistic, while Cassandra, a slightly eccentric mediaevalist at Oxford, is detached from ordinary life. The Game is a rehandling of the traditional body-soul dichotomy. In fact, the sisters seem to be a dissection of one personality for closer analysis. It is this dissection which provides both the fascinating and the annoying aspects of the book.

Thrown into their past by having to return to their home when their father dies, the sisters rediscover the Game, a relic of their childhood and an example of their romantic natures rebelling against the practicality of an austere Quaker upbringing.

The Game consisted of an elaborately mapped chart on which clay figures competed. The rules and forfeits of the Game were largely the imaginative Cassandra's fabrication. But the Game meant more than the preoccupation of children; it came to signify the relationship of the sisters and the nature of Cassandra's life.

For Julia, the Game emphasized her feelings of exclusion and manipulation by Cassandra. It was a ritualized conflict of the two personalities. Now as adults, the ritual has faded but the antagonism remains. The sense of competing, making strategic "moves", and dominating in terms of personality pervades the novel as an effective framework.

The human counters in this Game, however, are too distinctly divided into the physical versus the spitual, the active versus the contemplative, to be convincing integral characters. It is too easy a division for the author's theme. One's reaction is to think of Julia and Cassandra as the two facets of a schizophrenic personality.

Although The Game is an interesting revelation of human character and relations, Mrs. Byatt's ideas on the problem of personality are not sufficiently embedded in the characters and their actions.

One of the results is self-consciousness particularly in the dialogue and the disturbing recurrence of snakes with a variety of possible symbolic significances. The parallel between Cassandra and the Lady of Shalott is not left implicit enough, and at one point there are rather obvious significances.

There is plenty in The Game to provoke thought; it is unfortunate that the ideas have so obviously classified the fictional elements of the novel.

SHE WOVE DREAMS FOR HER PEOPLE

A WALL AND THREE WILLOWS, by Najmeh Najafi and Helen Hinckley. Fitzhenry and Whiteside, $7.50.

Reviewed by Anne Logie

Najmeh Najafi is an Iranian woman of extraordinary merit.

Always a dreamer, but also an indefatigable realist, she has sought to introduce the villagers of Iran to the modern world. A Wall and Three Willows is a personal record of this woman's work in the outposts of Iran, her dreams, her joys, her moments of frustration and despair when her plans are stymied by government officials or by lack of sufficient funds.

Najmeh-jun, as her people called her, realized that changes in the villagers' habits must be wrought slowly, and that care must be taken to preserve their age-old and beautiful traditions.

She proceeded like the unsung ambassadors in The Ugly American, who maintained that a few chickens, or brooms with long handles, were just as important as, and more immediate than, intangible promises of economic aid.

After returning from her studies in the United States, Miss Najafi was called to the desert village of Bampoor, Baluchistan, near the Iranian-Pakistan border to establish a woman's program.

This program was one of several being carried out concurrently by the Iranian government, whose purpose it was to resettle the nomads and restore Baluchistan to the wheat producing center it once was. Najmeh found herself in an area where silent black tents, a village one day, were folded and disappeared without trace before the dawn of the next.

CELEBRATING new year Iranian fashion is writer Najmeh Najafi and her two children. Sprouting grain traditionally absorbs unhappiness of household.

Accompanying her were girls she had once trained, notably Pooran, a dwarfish hunch-back worker with the heart of an angel.

Gradually this team won the trust of the village women, established kindergartens for their children and introduced techniques for the purification of drinking water.

They then embarked on the more important projects of teaching the women the essentials of cleanliness and nutrition, the value of literacy, and how to use their skills in creating exquisite embroidery work to their economic advantage. Najmeh constantly claimed that the women's program was more difficult in many ways than the agricultural and irrigation projects, noting that "the heart of a woman cannot be plumbed and measured."

But Najmeh's greatest dream was to acquire a weaving factory for her cherished village of Sarbandan, near Teheran, and this is the project foremost in her mind throughout the book.

We are with her on all her countless trips to the village, feeling admiration at her quick psychological insight as she checks herself and allows every important decision to come from the lips of the village elders, and feeling sometimes critical, to our own amazement, of her total obsession with Sarbandan, to the point of neglecting her own family.

It is often difficult to keep sympathetic stride with a person of such single-minded dedication.

In collaboration with the American author Helen Hinckley, Najmeh narrates her story in simple prose, unfolding before us the traditions of Iranian life, the pride, ignorance and unbelievable poverty of the villagers.

It is not always a pleasant picture, but being a story of present day evolution, it brims with hope for the future. It is an education for those of us who live in a society of such affluence that it produces perfumes for men as its latest gimmick, to realize that a dark age is still in existence today where men and women have never taken a bath.

Essentially, this book is a portrait of courage and determination — the portrait of a woman whose mission in life often conflicts with her duties as wife and mother, but who strives to reconcile her roles and become like the three willows of a famous Iranian motif, which grow independently but interdependently to produce one shade.

AT ROYAL ROADS

Islander Cadets Among Graduates

Two Vancouver Islanders were among the 66-strong class of graduating cadets at Royal Roads Friday.

They were David Lowdon, son of Sgt. and Mrs. J. K. Lowdon, 531 19th Street, Courtenay, and Douglas MacQuarrie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan MacQuarrie, of Wellington.

The graduating class, along with 100 other cadets, was inspected by Chief of Defence staff, Gen. Jean V. Allard.

In his address the general said the soldier of the future must be familiar with the physical sciences, business management, economics, welfare, law, and even medicine.

Said the general: "Professionalism in the military is coming into its own, and is certainly more respected than it used to be.

"I envy you your future."

With several hundred parents and friends of the cadets looking on, the general further commented: "The basic qualities of the military have had to be enlarged.

"We are obliged to pioneer in strange new operational environments."

Gen Allard presented the Governor General's silver medal for highest second-year academic standing to cadet F. B. Smith of Etobicoke, Ont.

Cadet Wing Commander K. R. Moulden of Dundas, Ont., received three awards: the Lieutenant-Governor of B.C.'s medal for the cadet who made the greatest contribution to the reputation of Royal Roads during the preceeding year; the H. E. Sellers' award for the cadet chosen Wing Commander; and the Canadian Army Award, presented to the best second-year army officer cadet.

Anyox Old Timer Passes

SIDNEY — A pioneer link with the vanished copper town of Anyox, B.C., was severed Thursday.

Theodore Andreas "Teddy" Kastoft, died here in his 89th year. His funeral was this afternoon.

Teddy Kastoft was a vital figure in the company town built by Grandby Consolidated just after the turn of the century on Observatory Inlet, just 18 miles from the Alaska border.

He was the man at the wheel, or the man doing the repairs, or the man handling the lines when the company tug Cuprite was in action. He was a smiling man.

DANISH-BORN

The youngsters in town thought his name was a nickname drawn from his duties and he was referred to as Teddy "Cast-off." So great was his interest in the young people that he never corrected them.

Most of them never knew that Kastoft was a Danish name, that Teddy had been born in Copenhagen. He lived 55 years in Canada, 49 years in B.C. And in the First World War, he went overseas with the famed 54th Battalion, CEF.

It was an experience that partly disabled him. After he left Anyox (a year before the town disappeared in 1935 when the copper became too expensive to mine), he lived in retirement.

He and his wife Jean, who survives him, lived at Comox before coming to the Sidney area five years ago. His greatest enjoyment has been chance meetings with people he knew in Anyox.

Many of them attended his funeral today at Sand's Chapel in Sidney. Except for his wife, his relatives, a brother, a sister and several of their children, still live in Denmark.

Rev. O. L. Foster addressed mourners who looked on Teddy Kastoft as a symbol of happy days in the north. Sidney branch of the Royal Canadian Legion, Comox friends and friends from Sidney Old Age Pensioner No. 25 also were well represented.

Sports Contest At Glenlyon

Tom Payne was the overall individual champ during Glenlyon Preparatory School's annual sports day competition at Windsor Park.

Payne took top honors in the 100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, hurdles and broad jump open events.

Tom Larsen and Gordon McGee shared top honors in the under-13-years division, Martin Screech led the under-11 juniors and Richard Wilson was the top performer in the under-nine age group.

Bingo Profitable

LADYSMITH—In the past 15 years Ladysmith Kinsmen Club has raised $60,000 for local charities—most of it from bingo games.

They hope to make more Tuesday evening when a $1,500 cash bingo is run by the club at Cassidy Drive-in Theatre.

Kinsman Ray Hardy is in charge of the project.

First Baby Special Guest

LAKE COWICHAN — The first baby born in Lake Cowichan district at the turn of the century will be special guest at the centennial baby show June 20.

The woman who has this distinction is Mrs. Art (Gladys) Howe and she will present trophies at the show.

The show will be judged by three public health nurses, and the new community hall will be decorated with a display of old remedies for baby ailments.

One of the Kinette organizers, Mrs. Mary Neva, said: "What they prescribed as cures for babies decades ago are considered shocking today."

Latest event added to the eight days of centennial celebrations at the Lake is a Firemen's Sports Day June 25.

Lake Cowichan volunteer fire department has invited neighbours Mesachie Lake, Youbou and Honeymoon Bay to compete.

LIGHT and SIGHT

"Let me take it to the light," you often say when you want to see something more clearly. Whether you wish to read a telephone book, thread a needle or buy a piece of cloth, good clear light helps you to see it in its true detail and colour. Adequate illumination is one of the first requisites of good seeing. Normal eyes need it, and suffer ill effects without it. But near-sighted eyes demand an abnormal amount of light to give sharpness to their vision. Proper lighting can do much to preserve your vision, but it is only one factor. Your eyes deserve the most careful and regular check-ups. Have your eyes examined regularly and you will be rewarded with the greatest gift of nature—good vision.

How come the Cunningham delivery boy is a girl?

If you've ever called Cunninghams during an emergency, you wouldn't ask.

We've realized for a long time, that when somebody gets sick, mother is usually the first one there. It's a built-in sense of urgency that women seem to have.

And our delivery boys have that kind of understanding in difficult moments because every one of them is a girl. Some of them are even mothers.

Remember last year, during the flu epidemic, when the snow was up to your knees? Every single one of our prescriptions got through. And most of our girls had to work 15 to 18 hours a day to do it.

That's loyalty even we didn't expect.

And that's why you'll find a pretty face behind the wheel of every Cunningham car.

At Cunninghams we care.

Evils of Shorter Hours Proclaimed

By AB KENT
Business Editor

A management-inspired warning about the evils of shorter working hours was sounded this week in Vancouver by the Commercial and Industrial Research Foundation.

The foundation, working to advance the provincial economy and improve relations between business, labor, government and the general public, says the 37½-hour week introduced through B.C. would mean an immense hike in the total wage bill and bring either a freeze or a drop in living standards.

KENT

Since labor already has a foot well in the door as far as reducing the work week is concerned, the warning comes perhaps a little late.

Last year's carpenter strike-lockout was based on the issue of a 37½-hour week, bringing it to prominence.

Further attention was focussed on the short week when electricians began to enjoy it early this year.

But it was nothing new by any means. The 37½-hour week was an established fact 15 years ago in the printing industry mechanical trades, followed by B.C. locals of American Newspaper Guild about five years later.

Other wage contracts signed in this province both before and since — for large and small unions — have included provision for a 37½-hour week.

The foundation claims that unions themselves present conflicting attitudes to the shorter week, some seeing it as a means of acquiring more overtime, thus more take-home pay.

But the original premise is that a shorter week will reduce working time and should open the door to more employment in order to maintain or boost production.

The foundation says the crux of the issue is in the initial labor cost when take-home pay remains unchanged and the work week is cut.

It becomes incumbent upon industry to introduce methods that will continue to increase production as employees enjoy greater benefits negotiated on the basis of a rising economy.

But the study further points out that unions often contend there is room in profits to pay for a shorter week instead of increasing prices of goods and services produced.

"However, the added cost of a 37½-hour work week is roughly equal to the net returns of shareholders," the study said.

Therefore a price hike or increased productivity is necessary.

B.C. coal production during April slumped to 58,475 short tons against 74,430 in April 1966.

But coke output rose by 716 tons to 14,384 short tons during the month.

Sheba Copper Mines Ltd. and Sumitomo Metal Mining Co. have reached agreement whereby the Japanese firm will spend $648,000 on copper prospecting in B.C. by 1970.

The Sheba property is located in the Kamloops mining district. If prospecting proves out, the Sumitomo company would finance production for export to Japan, in the process expecting to acquire 60 per cent of Sheba's equity.

Sumitomo takes 3,700 tons of Canadian copper concentrates per month.

A drop in risk capital would occur with significant cutting of profits, and risk capital is vital to contined economic expansion, the foundation said.

The increased employment aspect gets little support from "management, government and most economists," the report declares, and it goes further to say the shorter week is self-defeating.

Because of the inflationary aspect of the shorter week with unchanged pay, technological change will be stimulated, partly to reduce labor content in production, the foundation said.

It concludes that since B.C. wages last year rose 7.6 per cent against 2.6 per cent increase in productivity, now is scarcely the time to go for further "wage increases" by shortening hours of work.

Nonetheless, all sections of labor — as consumers in a nation of consumers — are interested in getting the most out of an intrinsically rich country, lured on by the pull of leisure activities covering the widest scope in the history of man.

One of five B.C. areas in which exploration crews are working for Silver Standard Mines Ltd. is the Kelsey Bay region, where last year a geochemical survey showed high quality copper mineralization. Greater widths have been established since but more sampling is needed before the real value can be set out. The other areas being examined are all on the mainland.

'No Authority To Fix Prices'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has no authority to fix prices of farm machinery, but will give consideration to any recommendation put forward by Dr. Clarence Barber, who is conducting an inquiry into the industry, Agriculture Minister Greene said Friday.

Replying in the Commons to Conservative whip Reynold Rapp, a Saskatchewan grain farmer, Mr. Greene said Mr. Barber had not been given a deadline for his inquiry, but an interim report might be requested.

The Conservative House leader, Michael Starr, asked Finance Minister Sharp to appeal to farm machinery manufacturers to hold prices down.

Mr. Sharp said his appeal in Thursday night's budget speech was to industry in general to keep prices down for the benefit of the economy, but he did not want to select any one industry.

13 ATOMIC PLANTS PLANNED

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Thirteen nuclear electrical generating plants will dot the Columbia River basin by 1985, Norman Gilchrist, Spokane area manager of the Bonneville Power Administration, said here Friday.

Within 10 years, the nuclear plants will be going up at the rate of one a year, he said.

WEEK IN MARKETS

Five-Week Slump Almost Wiped Out

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A late-week surge on Canada's major stock exchanges was almost enough to pull the markets out of a five-week slump.

At Toronto, however, a heavy wave of profit-taking in the dying minutes of Friday's session spelled the difference between a gain and a loss.

As a result, the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, fell .74 to 163.26. It had reached 163.93 at mid-afternoon.

At Montreal, the market fared better and the index dipped only .22 at 162.20.

A number of analysts said the surge Thursday and Friday was due to technical factors resulting from a heavily oversold position and not to any news developments.

They said the markets were following the general trend on the New York Stock Exchange, which scored one of its best gains of the year Thursday.

In the last two weeks, North American exchanges have come under heavy selling pressure as tension increased in the Middle East.

ANTICIPATED BUDGET

Analysts also said Finance Minister Sharp's budget had little effect on the markets because the changes were anticipated by the investment community.

However, they are divided in their opinions as to whether or not the market has bottomed out. Some feel the markets will continue to undergo correction while others say they have consolidated their positions and are ready to launch another rally.

At Toronto, bank issues took it on the chin for the third consecutive week. Some brokers have suggested bank profits may be reduced as a result of increased interest payments on savings accounts.

Royal fell 1¾ to 78 and Montreal 1¼ to 63¼. Imperial-Commerce, which announced plans for a five-for-one stock split, also dropped 1¼ to 67. The stock had been up to 68½ at mid-afternoon Friday.

Canada Cement fell 1½ to 41½, Texaco 1 to 27, Moore Corp. ¾ to 27¼ and Alcan ⅜ to 31⅞.

On the plus side, B.C. Sugar advanced 2½ to 36½, Beaver Lumber 1½ to 37½ and Algoma Steel 1 to 26.

GOLDS MAKE GAIN

Golds, the only major group to advance, climbed 4.57 on index to 171.58. Brokers could give no reasons for the group's move.

Dome gained 2 to 48¾, Giant Yellowknife 70 cents to 8.95 and Kerr Addison ⅛ to 15⅛.

Hudson Bay Mining highlighted base-metal activity and rose 3¼ to 63. Inco added ¼ at 100 after touching a high of 101½ in Friday's session. Denison backed off ½ to 69¼ and Rio Algom ¼ to 32¾.

Among western oils, Hudson's Bay declined 1⅛ to 31¾, Dome 1 to 54, Great Plains ⅞ to 11 and Pacific Pete ⅝ to 13½. Scurry-Rainbow advanced 1⅜ to 23¾.

On the speculative side, Silverfields jumped 95 cents to 4.70. Silver issues have strengthened following a recent announcement that the U.S. government is restricting its sales of silver because of dwindling stocks.

Supervisor, Education-Extension Program
The University of British Columbia

The Extension Department of the University of British Columbia invites applications for a staff member to fill the position of Supervisor, Education-Extension Program.

The responsibilities involve the planning and administering of courses, conferences and seminars in the field of education for teachers, school administrators, counsellors, school trustees and other persons or groups interested in the discipline of education. This position requires very close consultation with members of the Faculty of Education and cooperation with a number of organizations such as the B.C. Teachers' Federation and the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

The candidate should have successful experience in education, either in a teaching or an administrative capacity or both. He or she should be familiar with recent developments in the field. In addition, he should possess an ability to work effectively with others and be a competent organizer. Candidates must have a Masters degree, and preferably a doctorate or the equivalent in experience. The starting salary will be in the range of $9,000 - $12,000, depending on the qualifications and experience of the successful applicant.

Applications, containing a resume of education and professional experience and names of references, should be mailed as soon as possible to the Director, Extension Department, The University of British Columbia.

SERVING MINE

Fraser Lake Instant Town

FRASER LAKE, B.C. (CP)—Two years ago 100 people lived in this community in north-central British Columbia. Today there are more than 1,100.

The reason: molybdenum, and a new provincial government policy designed to prevent ghost towns.

Large deposits of molybdenum were found on the shores of Francois Lake, 15 miles from here. They're being developed by Endako Mines Ltd.

It would have been simpler for Endako to build a company town right outside the mine gates. But such a town would have no reason to continue to exist once all the ore was mined. It might have become a ghost town.

The municipal affairs department encourages and sometimes nudges mining companies into attaching any new accommodations they need on to an existing community.

And so, Fraser Lake, which was named after explorer Simon Fraser by one of his lieutenants in 1806 and was an unincorporated community until 1965, got a modern shopping centre, a large hotel, fire hall, skating rink and paved roads.

Unlike most instant towns, Fraser Lake has other potentials. The government sees it as a possible tourist centre because of abundant fish and game resources in the area. Almost 100 moose were killed on the CNR line in one recent year.

Further insurance against Fraser Lake losing its reason for existence is a new lumber mill employing 100 men.

Endako recently handed over to the new municipality $350,000 worth of water supply system, sewage disposal equipment and a sewage treatment plant—all for $100.

The company will also sell 70 acres of land for a future subdivision to the municipality at cost.

With the rapid growth in population, Fraser Lake officials predict the town will have 2,500 residents by 1972.

COMPANY RE-OPENS MINE WHERE 15 MEN MET DEATH

NATAL, B.C. (CP) — The Balmer North Coal Mine where 15 men died in an explosion April 3 has been reopened and 90 men are working in the area, Crows Nest Industries Ltd. reported Friday.

Mine manager J. E. Morris said 35 of the men are mining and 55 of them are cleaning up and making improvements to prevent another disaster.

He said the company has already made two major changes in its safety procedures and plans a third.

The number of water sprayers to keep coal dust to a minimum have been increased and fine-ground limestone dust is sprayed in the tunnels to reduce the combustibility of the coal dust.

He said the company plans to install water barriers shortly that would cushion the shock of any explosion and absorb heat rapidly.

The 15 men were killed in the mine when a gas explosion ripped through the tunnels.

ANTI-FAG CAMPAIGN BOOSTED

WASHINGTON (CP) Cigarette manufacturers in the United States who advertise their brands with radio and television commercials may in the future be assuring free air time to groups opposing smoking.

The Federal Communications Commission ordered Friday that stations broadcasting cigarette ads must provide an unspecified amount of time to anti-smoking programs.

The order said stations could try to sell time for the anti-smoking programming. But it said if no sponsor could be found, the time would have to be provided free of charge.

May Car Sales Take Jump

DETROIT (AP)—U.S. automakers, after four months of sales that dismally trailed the 1966 pace, had the best sales month in May in more than a year.

Last month's sales, preliminary reports showed Friday, showed a healthy eight-per-cent increase — 47,600 cars — above sales in May of the year before.

The 823,797 vehicles that rolled out of dealer showrooms in May outnumbered those sold in any month back to March, 1966, when customers bought up 853,978.

General Motors led the surge with 471,530 vehicles sold, up 18 per cent — 70,041 — from May, 1966. Chrysler sales hit 121,547, up six per cent from May of last year, and American Motors had sales of 22,602, a 5.4-per-cent increase from May a year ago.

Only Ford Motor Co., second largest of the U.S. auto builders, had sales still lagging behind last year's May rate. Ford sales of 208,117 were down 18 per cent, or 28,928 cars, compared to May, 1966.

YOU can be a proud builder of Victoria's new BOYS' CLUB . . .

What sort of city will our Victoria become? The answer lies with the men of tomorrow who are boys today. Look around you. Wherever you see a boy, you see a city's future in the making. Doesn't it make sound sense to invest all the leadership, guidance, character-building and inspiration we can in such a future?

That's what The Boys' Club of Victoria is all about: giving everyday practical expression to its philosophy—"It's Better to Build Boys Than Mend Men." Shaping, through its broad program of education, handicrafts and recreation, the Victorians of tomorrow.

Artist's Drawing—Courtesy Wagg & Hambleton, Architects

300 local boys are enrolled in The Boys' Club. Hundreds more are seeking membership. More space, more facilities are badly needed. That's why one of the most exciting community ideas ever promoted in Victoria is now under way—the provision of a new, bigger and better home for The Boys' Club, so that hundreds more boys can be trained to become the fine, upstanding citizens of tomorrow.

The land is available. The plans are all drawn. Much of the $310,000 needed has already been donated or pledged. All that's now needed is your helping hand, holding forth those much-needed last-minute dollars that will signal the construction "go-ahead."

It's a great project. A truly worthwhile investment in Victoria's future. And you can help build it.

BUILDING FUND TARGET: $310,000
Already Donated or Pledged: $251,100 (81%)
(Including estimated grants)
STILL NEEDED: $58,900 (19%)

The new Boys' Club will be located on a half-acre site next to the Yates Street Firehall on property (valued at $45,000) provided by the City of Victoria at a nominal fee of $1 annually.
The new structure will accommodate up to 1,200 youths and is designed to meet the present and future schoolboy needs of this area. Total cost of the new building, furnishing and equipment is $310,000—the final target of this appeal.
The Boys' Club has been a member agency of the United Appeal of Greater Victoria since 1962. The United Appeal has approved this expansion program, but does not provide funds for capital building. For this, we must turn to the community. $251,100 of the total (including estimated grants) has already been subscribed by individuals, organizations and business firms. We now urgently need the remaining $58,900 so that work on the new building can start. May we count on your support?

TELECASTS ARE TARGET . . . . . . BILL WOULD BAR OWNERSHIP, BLACKOUTS AND INTERRUPTIONS

Politicians Clamp Down on Sports Exploitation

By DAVE BRADY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A bill has been introduced in the house Thursday to end the commercial exploitation of sports telecasts.

A spokesman said the measure reflected the irritation of congressmen as fans as well as legislators.

Three Democratic members of the commerce committee Richard L. Ottinger of New York, John E. Moss of California, and John D. Dingell of Michigan — sponsored the legislation which would:

- Prohibit any network from owning any interest in any professional football, baseball, basketball or soccer team, or in any person or organization engaging in the promotion of professional games or matches the latter clause designed to prevent a network to set up or operate through a holding company.
- Prohibit the selective blackout of any professional sports event, including golf, wrestling and boxing, but not including a blackout of the city where the event originates. (The latter clause pertains to local blackouts, such as for football games, which were sanctioned by previous legislation.)
- Prohibit the interruption or suspension of football, baseball, basketball, hockey, soccer, golf, wrestling, or boxing matches to permit broadcasts of any advertisement.

Periodically, similar bills have been offered since 1953 without passage, but the spokesman noted that the networks usually have been deterred by the threats.

In respect to the first section of the bill, CBS owns the New York Yankees; NBC recently bought Arnold Palmer Enterprises, and Madison Square Garden-RKO general sports presentations has arranged television of fights.

Selective blackouts became a matter for congressional concern when the mayors of Chandler, Tucson, and Phoenix complained about telecasts of the Muhammad (Cassius Clay), Ali-Zora Folley fight.

In 154 other cities the bout was shown on conventional or free television. But in the hometown areas of the fighters — the Arizona cities and Louisville, Ky. — the bout was carried on closed circuit TV in the belief that those markets would generate more revenue. This prompted Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D—W. Va.), chairman of the commerce committee, to call for action.

Interrupting of games at the expense of the viewer for commercials moved Rep. Ottinger to introduce legislation. He cited published reports that soccer players had been ordered to feign injuries or disputes to provide time for commercials; and a report that coach Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics had been fined for refusing to call a time out to permit a commercial. "Phony" time-outs in hockey also were criticized.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

Thinking out loud on the first Saturday in June . . .

Death stalks each one of us, soon or late, but we tend to forget about those whose associations we held close.

When a stone wall at Riverside, California, closed the doors on Billy Foster's stay with us last February, those who knew him well and those who admired him from afar, sincerely sympathized with his widow, Beverly and her three children.

A fund was set up for the children, the Billy Foster Educational Fund. At first donations flowed. But memories are short. The Niagara dwindled into a trickle.

Not everyone forgot.

Ten days before the Indianapolis 500, the phone rang in the Victoria office of G. Fitzpatrick Dunn, the fund's honorary trustee.

The caller inquired about the fund, asked how Mrs. Foster and the children were "making out." Then he asked Dunn if he could come to Indy.

Besides the 33 starting drivers, there would be crews for each car, owners, USAC (United States Automobile Club) officials, writers and automakers there — friends of Billy Foster.

"I'm raffling a motorcycle," the caller said. "Beautiful machine. Tickets are going very well. Some of the boys are buying entire books and putting them in the name of Billy's children. There won't be any expenses, not even for the bike. And I want to give you the cheque for the fund."

Overwhelmed, Dunn said he would be there. Then he said good-bye and hung up. And back in Indianapolis, 2,500 miles away, Mario Andretti, the pole driver in the 500, went out to sell more raffle tickets . . .

The Age of Common Sense: Prep school athletes in this borough run, jump and skip under legislation which is adequate but, like any set of rules, not so perfect it can't be improved . . . in the Inter-High met, f'r instance, any student under 19 years on Sept. 1, at the beginning of the school year is eligle to compete . . . But senior matriculation (Grade 13) students are not . . .

By any interpretation, an oaf who is 19 and in Grade 10 (because he can't handle the course or because he won't apply himself) is eligible.

Concurrently the youth who hits the books and doesn't snore through biology and the new math can't run for Gee Whiz High if he's 16 and in Grade 13.

If this doesn't penalize the industrious student-athlete and pamper the coasting clod then Twiggy is a boy . . .

Claremont is the only school in the local inter-high community with a Grade 13 which may explain why Sports Council directors did not move this year to amend the eligibility clause.

Having Claremont's Grade 13's (among them Chris Lott and Greg Beaveridge) in this year's annual track and field meet might not have resulted in any significant change in the final standings.

Oak Bay won because it's athletes trained and performed resolutely.

But that is not the point.

A boy who has trained diligently and shown the same dedication in the class does not deserve to be penalized for the very virtues high school teachers encourage . . .

No other track meet on Vancouver Island bars Grade 13s whether they have beards, run in puttees or are nine years old.

The Sports Council at it's annual meeting this month, can demonstrate that it has an awareness of the "age of reason" by throwing out the ban on the Grade 13s.

Signs of the times: The Daily Racing Form, available for 50 cents in Vancouver, now sells for 75 cents here . . . rising costs is the explanation.

It's a nice, clean, non-pornographic publication, but it isn't what you need at all.

The form only tells you where the horses have been. If you find a publication that tells where they are going, please call me at 382-3121. Leave a number.

CANADIAN SKEET

Shootoffs Needed To Decide Crowns

ST. JANVIER, Que. (CP)—Skeet shooters thrive on shootoffs although they admit the sudden-death competitions are the only ones that really make them sweat.

"There'll be a lot of nervous stomachs tonight and sweating aplenty tomorrow," said an official at the Canadian and Quebec skeet championships after Friday's shooting produced ties involving nine men and four major titles.

The sudden death shootoffs scheduled for today provide only part of the action with a field of 280 shooting for honors in the 12-gauge competition.

Friday's activity was confined to 20-gauge shooting in which five men shot perfect rounds in ideal conditions, forcing a shootoff for the Canadian open and closed titles and the runner-up spot in each.

All of the finalists are veteran shooters: Charles Boardman of Morrestown, N.J.; John Woodward of Pittsford, N.Y.; Jack Pattyn of Detroit; Bill Rudyk of Oshawa, Ont., and Paul Laporte of Montreal.

Laporte's score was tops among provincial entries and won him the Quebec title.

The only other major title to be decided Friday was the women's 20-gauge event, won by Sally Hubbard of Saginaw, Mich. She shattered 98 of her 100 birds.

OVER-ALL LEADER

In the team competition, the Oshawa combination of Nelson Star and Rudyk posted a near-perfect 199, tying the veteran Montreal pair of Willsie and Laporte. They also are to shoot off today.

In all of the shootoffs, shooting continues until a competitor misses a bird. He drops out and the others continue until all but one person have been eliminated.

Dominic Piscitelli of North Haven, Conn., has shattered 296 of 300 birds over the last three days to lead in points towards the high over-all crown.

The competition concludes Sunday.

Looking almost like wild man, Oklahoman Bob Dickson gets down to ground level for serious business of checking roll of green for putting attempt at Formby, Eng. He defeated Californian Ron Cerrudo, 2 and 1, today in 36-hole final for British Amateur golf championship after eliminating Britain's Gordon Clark 4 and 3 in Friday's semi-finals. Cerrudo reached final with 19th-hole win over Texan Marty Fleckman. After first 18 holes today, the match was all square. (AP Wirephoto.)

Clay Changing Mind on Draft?

(Times News Services)

Cassius Clay and several other Negroes prominent in sports are scheduled to be in Cleveland Sunday amid speculation that Clay may be considering changing his mind on military induction.

Clay refused to be drafted last month and was stripped of his heavyweight boxing title.

Jim Brown, who has been trying to persuade Clay to make the move, also is to be in the huddle. Brown is a former Cleveland Browns fullback.

A spokesman said that others scheduled to attend include Bill Russell, coach of Boston Celtics; Bobby Mitchell of Washington Redskins; Lew Alcindor, star of the UCLA basketball team; John Wooten, a guard for Cleveland Browns, and Gale Sayers of Chicago Bears.

Clay says he will meet Alvin Lewis in a 15-round exhibition bout at Detroit on June 15. His first bout since being stripped of his title will come three days before he is due to face trial on the draft refusal charge.

In Toronto, forward George Armstrong announced his retirement from hockey and it is obvious the Maple Leafs may have to look more to their young players than they expected.

If Armstrong stands by his decision, the defending Stanley Cup champions may wind up losing three key veterans when the next National Hockey League campaign opens. Goalie Terry Sawchuk and 20-year ace Red Kelly are also expected to end their playing careers.

Kelly is to coach Los Angeles Kings, one of the six new NHL expansion clubs.

One of the main reason's for Armstrong's decision is the belief that manager-coach Punch Imlach will not protect him in the league draft next Tuesday in Montreal.

However Imlach refuses to recognize Armstrong's decision.

Armstrong will be 37 in July.

Elsewhere and otherwise . . .

HOCKEY, although out of season, also was the talk here and there . . . Seth Martin of Trail, regarded by many as one of the outstanding goalies in amateur hockey, has signed a contract with St. Louis Blues, another new expansion team in the NHL . . .

Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens for the past three years, has been elevated to vice-presidency of the National League team . . . Howard Hamilton will take over as general manager . . . Cariboo League executives have "approved in principal" the franchise application of Kamloops, a fixture in the Okanagan Senior League . . . And Flin Flon Bombers, who wheeled in the Manitoba Junior League last season, will be invited to side in with the new Western Canada Junior circuit . . .

FOOTBALL, also not in season, crept into the picture with a number of signings . . . Veteran defensive end Norm Rauhaus signed his 12th pact with Winnipeg Blue Bombers . . . Toronto Argonauts picked up signed forms from quarterback Wally Gabler and halfback Larry Ferguson . . . The defending Grey Cup champions Saskatchewan Roughies signed three imports . . . They are Ernie Buzzell, a quarterback who appeared in a pre-season exhibition game last fall, and linemen John Quaccia and Walt Odegaard.

MIDGETS BACK AT SPEEDWAY

The mighty midgets, small in size but big in go-power, come roaring back to Western Speedway tonight.

The souped-up little cars are taking over for a racing program that starts at 7:30 with time trials. Youngsters under 12 will be admitted without charge.

Three New Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Lions of the Western Football Conference have announced the signing of middle linebacker Dwayne Czupka, a first-string offensive and defensive player at Utah State for the last two seasons.

Offensive guard Allan Landmark from Eastern Washington State University and fullback Fred Sosa, a member of the all-army champions while he was in the U.S. Marines, were also signed.

WEIGHTLIFTING RECORD

MOSCOW (AP)—Mikhail Shabeyev of Russia set a world weightlifting record in the middle heavyweight division by pressing 372.6 pounds in a competition at the city of Perm.

Century Regains Tie For Runner-Up Berth

Century Inn tripped Nelsons 12-8 Friday at Heywood Avenue Park to move back into a tie for second place in the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League standings.

Ron Swinney and Gord Rutherford each batted in two runs for the winners in a wild contest that featured 23 hits and 11 errors.

Century collected 11 hits and committed six of the errors. Nelsons rapped 12 hits and made five miscues, four of them by third baseman Larry Meyers.

Meyers and Don Smith each drove in two runs for the losers.

Prospects Improved For Soccer Sanction

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Ken Macker, commissioner of the National Professional Soccer League, predicts his 10-club circuit will gain official sanction by the end of this year.

Macker met Friday with Sir Stanley Rous of Britain, president of the International Football Federation, plus soccer delegates from 25 nations.

"The prospects now are better than ever before because we have made a definite offer," Macker said. "Recognition will be achieved and, I forecast, by the end of this year."

The offer, Macker explained, was a $25,000 membership fee, 4 per cent of each team's gate receipts plus 10 per cent of television income, all to the United States Soccer Football Association.

"In addition," Macker said, "We are ready to pay $250,000 recognition fees to USSFA on behalf of our 10 teams."

Bitten Once, Reds Not Shy Second Time

By Associated Press

Lightning struck Atlanta's Jay Ritchie the second time around and although he had to wait awhile for the thunderclap, Cincinnati manager Dave Bristol is not complaining.

Ritchie fought his way out of a bases-loaded none-out jam leaving the Reds' winning run stranded on third base in the ninth inning Friday night, but when he climbed out on the limb again in the 11th, Vada Pinson didn't let him off.

Pinson's fourth hit of the night drove in Tommy Helms with the winning run and lifted the first place Reds to a 5-4 comeback victory over the slumping Braves.

In other National League games, St. Louis Cardinals edged Chicago Cubs 2-1, Philadelphia Phillies topped Houston Astros 5-3, and Pittsburgh Pirates rapped Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3. New York Mets' game at San Francisco was postponed by rain.

AARON HOMERS

The Braves were leading 4-3 on Hank Aaron's two-run homer which erased a 3-2 Cincinnati edge in the ninth. But the Reds struck back quickly. Tony Perez jolted Pat Jarvis with a leadoff double. Deron Johnson's triple tied the score and put the winning run on third with none out.

Tommy Helms was purposely walked and then Ritchie came on to walk Art Shamsky intentionally. That set up a force play at any base, but Ritchie didn't need one. He struck out Leo Cardenas and Don Pavletich and then got Floyd Robinson on a pop fly, stranding the runners.

It remained 4-4 until the 11th when Helms opened with a single and one out later, moved to third on Cardenas' hit. Pavletich walked, loading the bases.

Ritchie fanned pinch hitter Jim Coker for the second out, but Pinson ended his charmed life with a game-ending single.

Joe Torre had three hits for the Braves and drove in Atlanta's first two runs.

WILLS SPARKLES

Lou Brock socked a two-run homer and Steve Carlton pitched a three-hitter as the Cardinals nipped Chicago.

The Cubs' only run came in the eighth when Ted Savage rapped his first homer of the year.

Ex-Dodger Maury Wills drove in Pittsburgh's tie-breaking run with a seventh-inning triple as the Pirates stopped the Dodgers. Wills, playing in Los Angeles for the first time since being traded, had two hits and scored twice for the Pirates.

ROOKIE SENSATION

In the American League, the name of Tom Phoebus was put up front and centre.

A 25-year-old rookie righthander, Phoebus checked in with his third straight shutout for Baltimore as the Orioles blanked Washington Senators 12-0.

That pushed his season record to 4-1 and gave him five shutouts in six major league career victories—he was 2-1 last season.

Detroit Tigers clubbed New York Yankees 9-5 and took over first place in the American League when Kansas City Athletics outlasted Chicago White Sox 6-4 in 13 innings. Boston Red Sox shaded Cleveland Indians 2-1 and California Angels took Minnesota Twins 2-0 in the other games, all at night.

Phoebus struck out five, walked seven, gave up five hits and had base runners in every inning. But he left 10 of them stranded.

Frank Robinson gave him home run supoprt, his 15th, and a double. Andy Etchebarren also had a homer in the 14-hit Oriole attack.

KNUDSON'S world of GOLF

I slept on the floor most of the winter, not because I couldn't afford a room with a bed, but because of my doggoned back.

You may think that golfers, because of all their complaining about various ailments are hypochondriacs. Maybe so. All I know is that a good number of the fellows on the tour do have legitimate back trouble. I had to have back trouble sooner or later, the way I swing a club, and it hit me last winter, just after I experimented by wearing a wedge in one shoe.

A chiropractor in Toronto discovered that one of my legs was half an inch shorter than the other and because of this, I couldn't stand square to the ball. The wedge was to correct it, but, after three weeks of wearing it, I could hardly bend. I drove home from a Florida tournament in December and when I got back to Toronto, I could hardly get out of my car. The wedge had tilted something and something was out of place in my lower back. After driving out to California to rejoin the tour, I couldn't bend far enough to touch my knees, so I discarded the wedge and started visiting doctors.

I saw a doctor every day for seven weeks in succession, trying to find an answer, and kept sleeping on the hard floors each night to relieve the pain.

Finally, in Tucson, Ariz., an osteopath designed an exercise for me that would allow me to put my back into place again myself. Usually, I have to do this every morning and every night. I lie on my back on the floor, slip my fist underneath the base of the spine, and raise my legs slowly until I hear a pop. I think I might have surprised a few people during the third round of the Dorval Open last March. My back slipped out of place and I had to lie down on the fairway and pop it back in again.

But I'm certainly not alone when it comes to back trouble. Sam Snead has had his spine fused. Gardner Dickinson underwent surgery and young Homero Blancas is currently fighting a back problem.

Golf isn't like a body-contract sport, all the pressure is on the back. Every time you swing you twist it and turn it. So, if you play a lot of golf and your back isn't good, be extremely careful.

GEORGE'S TIP

• HITTING LOW SHOTS

This can be extremely helpful when playing under a tree or into a strong wind. Move the ball back in your normal stance and keep the weight on your left foot throughout the swing. This causes a descending blow on the ball and, with practice, you will find that you can control it. The flight of your ball will be low whenever the situation calls for it.

Hill Would Enjoy 'Copycat' Handle

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Dave Hill would like nothing better than to be a copycat—to match Dave Stockton's pattern of success two weeks ago and he is halfway there.

Hill, a powerful tee shot artist, carried a four-stroke lead into today's third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open golf tournament. He had a nine-under-par 131.

That was the margin Stockton held in the same round when he won the Colonial Invitation at Fort Worth, Tex.

Challenging Hill as the third round began were three players tied with five-under-par 135s—Gary Player, Bruce Crampton and Chuck Courtney.

For Player, who returned to the tour recently after six weeks at his ranch in South Africa, the past two weeks have been amazing. He played well in losing a playoff to Miller Barber last week at Oklahoma City, and continued his sharpness here.

Crampton, who left the tour last week to study film and correct his swing, said his 66 Friday probably was his best round in two years.

Babe Hiskey, the tournament's leading putter, and Harold Henning, at 136, were chasing the top four.

Seventy-nine players at 145 or under qualified for the final two days—the second largest field on the 1967 tour.

Jack Nicklaus, a crowd favorite, here, qualified for the final rounds with a 77-67—144.

131—Dave Hill.

135—Gary Player, Bruce Crampton, Chuck Courtney.

136—Harold Henning, Babe Hiskey.

137—Steve Spray.

138—Alan Henning, Bert Yancey, Wayne Yates, Art Wall, Bert Weaver, Ron McCallister.

139—Ian Sikes, Bob Charles, Gay Brewer, Dave Marr, Dave Royer, Roger Ginsberg, Labron Harris.

MARGARET TODD

Shirley's Sand Shot Sealed Fourth Title

One of the next chores for some city jeweller will be the engraving of Shirley Naysmith's name on the city women's championship golf trophy.

And while he's at it, he might apply a fitting inscription on Mrs. Naysmith's sand wedge.

That would be the iron that sealed Shirley's fourth city championship.

The Gorge Vale golfer won it all Friday at Royal Colwood with a 3 and 1 victory over Victoria Golf Club's Marg Todd. Mrs. Naysmith's previous city title victories were scored in 1955, '60 and '62.

A brilliantly-executed sand shot on the 15th by Mrs. Naysmith crushed Mrs. Todd's hopes for an 11th championship in the interesting well-played final.

SQUARE AT TURN

For 13 holes, no quarter was given. It was all square at the turn and after 13 holes.

Mrs. Naysmith went one up with a par five on the long 14th.

Then came the title-determining 15th, a par three. Both finalists trapped their tee shots. Mrs. Todd exploded out of the sand nicely, but it couldn't match Mrs. Naysmith's shot.

Shirley's blast out of the trap rolled to within inches of the hole for a "gimme" par three. When Mrs. Todd's great putt for a half-saving three just lipped the cup, Mrs. Naysmith went two up.

Mrs. Naysmith closed out the match with a par on the 17th.

PLEASED WITH PUTTS

Both played well. Mrs. Naysmith was approximately three over par for the 17 holes played.

Their medal scores would have been even more impressive but for the fact each took a double-bogey five on the par-three fourth when they dropped shots in the penalty-incurring water hazard.

Mrs. Naysmith played a strong game in all departments but was especially pleased with her putting. She sank at least four "pressure putts" — in the five to seven-foot range — to keep on even terms with Mrs. Todd in the early going.

Flight results:

Consolation Flight—J. Lovitt (U) defeated E. Jackson (N), 4 and 3.

First Flight—D. Fukuyama (Col) defeated J. Fall (Cow), 7 and 6.

Third Flight—A. Dye (GV) defeated C. Holland (GV), 3 and 2.

Fourth Flight—D. Mann (CH) defeated M. Lou Poy (GV), 4 and 3.

Fifth Flight—E. Barnes (U) defeated M. Evans (Cow), 1 up.

Sixth Flight—P. Moody (GV) defeated J. Miller (Greg), 1 up.

FISHING REPORT

Campbell River Outlook Better

An end may be in sight to the disappointment that has been the lot of Campbell River salmon fishermen this season.

Coho salmon have been scarce in recent weeks and chinooks (springs) been in only fair supply but angling ears at Campbell River twitched this week with reports from Stuart Island, about 30 miles northward.

The news had it that most boats around the island were taking limits. Chinooks were grabbing herring offered by moochers, coho were hitting almost any lure and anglers believe the fish will soon move toward Campbell River.

Fishing for salmon in the Comox area remains slow and only a few flurries of good fishing have been reported from the Qualicum-French Creek section. Results have been better, although winds have been a problem, at Northwest Bay, where a family of four took 11 coho in three hours last weekend.

Fairly good fishing, mainly for coho, around the Flat Tops and Thrasher Rock is the word from the Nanaimo section and there are some encouraging signs at Sansum Narrows although coho appear to be in a biting mood only occasionally.

Saanich Inlet continues to rate as a good bet for anglers around the southern end of Vancouver Island. Big fish, mostly white chinooks, appear to be scattered around the Inlet but boathouse operators report the best areas seem to be along the Bamberton shore, off Todd Inlet, Indian Bay, Coles Bay and around Goldstream Island.

C. B. Sjoberg found one of the larger ones Thursday, landing a 20-pounder around noon off Chesterfield Rock.

Bluebacks are still around in fair numbers but appear to be moving out of the inlet.

Salmon have been more active during the past few days in Oak Bay waters, where some good chinooks have been taken around Trial Island and The Gap.

Coho are thinning out at Pedder Bay but chinooks are apparently moving into the area. A boat check at Pedder last Sunday showed 55 of 75 boats with fish. The take for the 55 boats was 75 chinooks averaging 12 pounds, six jacks, 62 coho and seven grilse.

DISTAFF GOLF

Medal Test Set Monday

With the city championship tournament completed Friday, distaff golfers will move to Victoria Golf Club Monday for a medal round for players with handicaps of 15 or under.

In a club competition at Uplands this week, Isabel Locatelli, Tess Noble and Eileen Biggs were the division winners in a "hidden hole" contest.

Esther Barnes and Irene Humphreys currently hold the doubles button at Uplands and Pat Goy holds the singles button.

Here are the starting times for Monday's medal test and a women's club competition Tuesday at the Oak Bay course:

Ryun Easy Winner With 3:53.2 Gallop

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sophomore Jim Ryun of Kansas bettered four minutes for the second time this year to win the mile with hardly any competition in 3:53.2 in the Coliseum—Compton Invitational track meet Friday night.

Ryun made a runaway after toying around in the first two laps, building a huge lead in the third lap and increasing it by 50 to 60 yards at the finish over a former Kansas runner, John Lawson.

Lawson was timed in 4:01.0, as was youthful Martin Liquori of Essex High School in Caldwell, N.J.

Ryun ran 3:54.7 in the Glenn Cunningham Mile during the Kansas relays recently. He holds the world record of 3:51.3, set at Berkeley, Calif., July 17, 1966.

Dave Bailey of Toronto was fourth in 4:02.2.

Bill Crothers, the Markham, Ont., pharmacist, won his specialty, the 880-yard run in 1:47.7.

CANADA GIVES UP CUP TO WORLD

NEW YORK (AP) — The Canada Cup, a coveted symbol of world golfing supremacy, will be renamed the World Cup, the president of the International Golf Association announced Saturday.

"World Cup," said James A. Linen, president of the group which conducts the annual tournament, "has become a more logical name for the tournament's top prize, which is competed for by teams of two top players from the golfing countries of the world."

The tournament has been played annually since 1953, with the United States winning eight times, including six of the last seven. Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer won last year in Japan.

The tournament this year is scheduled for the Club de Golf course in Mexico City, Nov. 9-12.

Tourney Champs Back on the Scene

Like a burglar returning to the scene of a crime, Nanaimo O'Keefes are coming back to the site of their biggest triumph of this softball season.

Winners of the recent Victoria Day tournament at Central Park, O'Keefes will be at the downtown diamond Sunday at 1:30 and 3:30 for a pair of exhibition games with Carlings, currently battling for the lead in the Senior Men's Open League.

Nanaimo juniors will also invade Central Park Sunday, stepping out on the lower diamond at 2:30 and 6:30 for exhibition tussles with Morrisons of the city Junior Men's League.

TIE FOR FIRST

In Senior League play Friday night, Carlings dropped back into a first-place tie as the oncoming Luckies squad set down winless Red Lion Inn 5-1.

Starter Bob Haldane and relief pitcher Glen Langsett combined to hold Red Lions to two hits. Langsett came in to stifle a rally in the second inning and yielded only one hit in the last five frames.

Manager Ed Senini hit two singles to drive home three runs for the Luckies. Third baseman Ernie Savoie and outfielder Jack Lundquist each stroked a double and a single.

Losing pitcher Geoff Hett, recently transferred to Red Lion from Colony Inn in a bid to provide better team balance, tripled home Dennis Beaulac with the loser's only run in the second. Beaulac had tripled to touch off the brief rally.

Herga Lies Still . . . Her Master Dead

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife Pat are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 29th in a series on their adventures.

Powindah is anchored in an ancient pirate haven.

We are north of Grenada, one of the Caribbean Windward Islands. Night has already fallen and the bay has assumed the quiet of a temple. Although no moon has yet risen the stars are so bright that the deck actually glows and the beach, some 30 yards away, is a swath of polished ivory.

Because there are no other vessels in the bay and the surrounding shore is deserted, one would expect silence.

It is not so.

A barracuda razors the surface. A turtle using slow motion leaves the beach for the sea and you hear its sudden gasp for air. There is also the Caribbean's eternal dialogue with the powder sand rim of the beach and with the summit of a coral reef less than a pistol shot distance from Powindah's anchor. It was this reef which provided our evening meal; a four-pound lobster.

Soft Glow

Below deck, kerosene lamps are casting a soft glow over the interior of the saloon.

Although we are in the lee of the island the trade wind sometimes scoops in through the skylight, making the lamps flicker and causing shadow and light to play over the features of the Haida Indian totem pole, so that momentarily it appears to have life of its own. It is the ship's good luck piece and stands upright as a pillar between the galley and the saloon.

The interior is constructed of teak, oak and oiled cedar. There is a coal-burning stove, which serves as a potato locker in the tropics, and on top of it sits a ten-shilling wind-up clock with the word Jock imprinted on its face.

Self-Satisfied

This timepiece has a self-satisfied sounding tick. There are several lockers for clothes, a place for charts, a framed color picture of the British Columbia coast and a brass clock and barometer set that were given to us the night before we sailed from England. The inscription on the two-by-two-inch brass plate between them reads:

POWINDAH
John and Pat
Best wishes for a very successful voyage
John Russell
Yacht Herga, England
July, 1966

I know the inscription by heart. On this night it has special meaning, for the 23-year-old Englishman who followed Powindah's wake to this very anchorage.

Under sail his 30-foot schooner looked like a cross between a Chinese junk and Egyptian felucca yet he could handle her blindfolded. His life had one goal: to sail Herga out to British Columbia via the West Indies and South Pacific.

It was the Herga who escorted us on our trial cruise down to England's enchanting West Country. It was the Herga who appeared suddenly out of the night off Dartmouth Harbor, running before a full channel gale, and led Powindah in between the marks to a safe anchorage. It was the Herga that beat us hands down on the race back from Cherbourg and won the bottle of Mumm's Cordon Bleu. It was she who sailed in company with us that first horrible night across the

'Camelot' Dig Ready To Resume

Work will start again in July at South Cadbury, Somerset, in an attempt to discover if it was once the site of King Arthur's legendary Camelot. Last year's digging on the hilltop near the town of Yeovil produced pottery, jewellery and other evidence that the site was a large sixth-century encampment.

Evidence produced by using advanced scientific equipment may, it is thought, lead to the discovery of the remains of a great hall. Archaeologists and historians are excited at the prospect, and an appeal has been launched to provide funds for continuing the excavations.

The legend of Arthur and his knights has fascinated and puzzled people for centuries: what is reputed to be the king's round table can be seen in the Great Hall at Winchester.

SWINGING LONDON

A new exhibition devoted to Swinging London promises to be one of the big attractions at Madame Tussaud's famous waxworks this summer.

The subject is the people, fashion and sound associated with London and the complete exhibition has been designed by Michael Haynes, who is known for his work on the Churchill museum at Chartwell. It will be open until October, and "pcp" personalities such as the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Twiggy and Sandie Shaw are represented with the use of photographs, drawings and sculpture.

The traditional wax medium, which has made Madame Tussaud's famous throughout the world, will not be used, but nevertheless the exhibition will be in the Tussaud tradition of reflecting the fashion of an age.

... TRAVELS WITH JOHN MANNING

English Channel, broadside to a gale, as we made for Le Havre and safety.

"Where have you been all this time?" asked John, when Powindah finally bumbled into port.

"Thought we'd better run under trys'l. Things seemed pretty bad out there. That sail doesn't give us much speed." I gave him excuses as fast as I could think of them. He just laughed. "Bad? That was the best sail of my life ... splendid! Splendid! Didn't you get the same thrill scooting across those breakers?"

I had to admit I didn't. "Well, perhaps you'll develop a better taste for it." He was being serious. "My crew were sick as dogs," he said. "Can't understand what gets into people. I steered the whole way and when I called down at midnight for a good lash-up of food they didn't answer. The three of them were lying around like zombies, scared stiff. I told them they were far safer than being ashore and driving a car down the M-1."

"Well, did you get your food?"

He gave me an incredulous look. "Of course! When the others made no move toward the galley I simply lashed the helm hard over, let the boat look after herself and cooked a super meal ... bacon, sausages, a whole can of beans and part of a loaf of bread. Nothing like a good lash-up to keep a man going."

'Inert Bods'

The gale held on for another two days. Herga's crew balked at sailing home through it and were promptly put aboard the next ferry bound for England. John went back singlehanded. "It'll be good practice for the Atlantic," he said. "No good cluttering up the boat with inert bods."

Yet, this hard-core seadog who would climb any mast in sight just for the pure joy of it, actually had tears in his eyes when Pat bid him goodbye. As he sailed away he hoisted the Canadian ensign we had given him for use when Herga reached British Columbia. "I'll see you in Canada!" he roared.

Now, the Herga lies still, tethered end to end between mooring piles on an English river. There is a growth of weed on her hull; her varnished brightwork is cracking, peeling away under the rains and her halyards have the tempered greyness of hemp long left to the weather; as though they had been used but once: like ropes on a sailor's coffin. For her master is dead—killed in a head-on car crash the day before Christmas.

I take an after-dinner cup of coffee into the cockpit and sit there. At moments like this it still feels hard to believe that Powindah has brought us five thousand miles.

Victoria is still 13,000 miles distant but the boat has already fulfilled something of her pledge to Herga who escorted us over the longest mile—the first one.

Harlem Home For Poor And Wealthy

Harlem is a word that is known throughout the United States — indeed throughout the world. But how many persons who have heard of Harlem really know what it is like?

Now, reports the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau, visitors to New York can see and learn about the real Harlem on a new four-hour bus tour of the famous Negro community.

Harlem has been included as part of sightseeing bus tours in the past. But the Penny Sightseeing Company, owned and operated by Negroes, saw a need to start an in-depth tour to give visitors "a true picture of Harlem."

Most people think of Harlem as a slum area. The new tour does not avoid the existence of slums, but corrects this impression by showing that Harlem is also rich in culture and history. The tour also points out that Harlem has an extraordinarily high number of churches. In fact, one block—111th St. between Lenox and Eighth Avenues — contains no less than twelve.

TOWN HOUSES

Geographically, Harlem is an area of 5½ square miles which runs from 110th St. to 168th St. on Manhattan Island. It is home for both the poor and the rich. For instance, Striver's Row, a group of 140 Stanford White town houses along 138th and 139th Sts., rival New York's traditional East Side brownstones for their beauty. They were built by D. M. King, the same architect who erected the base of the Statue of Liberty.

Harlem has churches of all sizes and denominations. Some are established in storefronts with a handful of people for a congregation. Others are huge edifices that date back to the early days of New York. The Cathedral of St. John the Divine, situated on 11½ acres of ground along Amsterdam Ave., was begun in 1892 and is still under construction. When completed, it will be the largest Gothic cathedral in the world with a seating capacity of 15,000.

New Insight On Vikings?

MONTREAL — Vatican archives in Rome will be opened to Norwegian scholars for a search which may shed new light on the presence of Vikings in Canada during the 11th to 14th centuries.

Access to Vatican records, hitherto closed, was arranged recently in the course of a visit to Pope Paul VI by King Olav V of Norway.

Traces of Viking settlement have been found in Newfoundland by the Norwegian explorer, Helge Ingstad, who recently visited Expo and gave a press conference there and later lectured in Ottawa to the Canadian Nordic Society and members of the Royal Canadian Geographical Society.

The Vinland Map, published two years ago by Yale University and dated in 1440, indicates detailed geographical knowledge of the Newfoundland Coast before Columbus.

Good Old London Meets You Half Way

In London there is something for everyone.

No matter whether your taste is for the simple life or for sophisticated joys, London will meet you half way. The cost and style of accommodation in and around London reflects the needs of the widest range of taste and budget.

London is above all a centre from which you can see the sights and seek a change of pace; within an hour you can find yourself with a salt-sea breeze in your face; or, if you prefer it, on the hearth of a country inn — at home with the locals.

Formalities for hiring or buying a car in Britain are few and simple. The average charge for the hire of a 4-seater car with unlimited mileage works out at about $67.50 per week.

A tremendous number of excellent motor coach tours are operated in Britain, ranging from half-day or whole-day tours from one particular centre round-Britain tours lasting two weeks or more.

There's a two day tour of the Shakespeare Country (Frames Tours) for $43, which includes all accommodation, bus travel and a ticket for the Royal Snakespeare Theatre. A day tour of Canterbury and the Dickens Country in Kent is $7.50. A three-day tour to the Cotswolds and the Wye Valley is $47 from Southdown Tours.

In addition to these bus tours there are regular bus and coach services throughout Britain. The cost of long-distance coach travel averages 2 cents a mile.

400 INNS

In every part of Britain you will find accommodation available — in inns, ($4-6 a night), comfortable hotels (in various price ranges, $5-18 a night), modern motels and youth hostels. Spring and Fall are the best times for road touring in Britain. Hotels are uncrowded; so are the roads. With over 4,000 roadside inns, and hotels to choose from, you can tour as you please without tying yourself to a fixed schedule.

South of the River Thames, England is a country of heaths, woods, farms, orchards, spacious parks and rolling chalk hills where skylarks sing. Here you can leave the roads if you wish, and follow on foot the ancient trackways which run along the summits of these hills.

Visit Canterbury with the historic cathedral-shrined and its many historic sites. Drive to the coast: see famous White Cliffs of Dover, then the picturesque towns of Rye, Winchelsea and Hastings (battle site of William the Conqueror's victory in 1066).

Stop at Chiddingfold, Surrey, Crown Inn dates from 1285, Edward VI (Prince and the Pauper) stayed there in 1552, from $8.25. Or, Cobham Kent, Leather Bottle, famous from Dickens' use of it in "Pickwick Papers". Dickens came often and lived nearby, from $6.

In Hampshire, deer and ponies roam wild among the immemorial oaks of the New Forest, and beyond is Dorset, delightfully rural, its grassy hills crowned by Iron-Age earthworks and mysterious burial mounds.

Island Asks Help

ST. KITTS, West Indies (AP) —The tiny Caribbean island of Anguilla was reported calm Friday as the central government of neighboring St. Kitts awaited British response to a request for assistance in restoring its authority after a revolt on Anguilla.

This special edition is the result of months of work by the staff members of your newspaper . . . a colorful souvenir of the centenary. Its four great sections are filled with features by distinguished Canadian writers and pages of pictures of current and historic interest to provide hours of enjoyment for family, relatives and friends. Here are only a few items of interest:

NATIONAL "Canada's Story," by Bruce Hutchison
"Sir John A. Macdonald, Hero of the Hour," by Ben Ward.
"The Races of the Nation," by Maurice Western.

PROVINCIAL "Booming British Columbia," by Harry Young.
"B.C. and Confederation," by Allan Morley.
"The Panhandle Double-Cross," by Raymond P. Logie.

LOCAL "A History of Victoria," by Arthur Mayse.
"The Day the Sheriff Seized the City Hall," by A. H. Murphy.
"The Indian's Place in the Centennial," by Robert Lane.
"Crime of the Century," by Cecil Clark.

Throughout the edition, Victoria's merchants and business firms have expressed their greetings and provided many interesting sidelights on the city's development over the past one hundred years.

Eight Defied U.S. In Mercy Mission To North Vietnam

Last March, seven men and a woman sailed aboard the 50-foot ketch Phoenix from Hong Kong to Haiphong with a one-ton cargo of medical supplies intended for North Vietnamese villagers.

The crew of the Phoenix were Quakers, with the exception of 30-year-old freelance film-maker Richard Faun, who was under contract to CBC-TV's Public Eye series to make a film record of the mercy mission to North Vietnam.

The result is Voyage of the Phoenix, a 60-minute color film record of the Phoenix and her crew—their voyage from Japan to Hong Kong to Haiphong, an eight-day stay in Haiphong, Hanoi and surrounding villages, and the return to Hong Kong. This sensitive, objective account of the mission and of the individuals who took part will be telecast Sunday at 10 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

The program attempts to show the emotions and the deep personal feelings of the Quakers as they braved treacherous waters in their small craft, sailing by dead reckoning; wondering whether they might be challenged by American or Chinese ships, and not quite positive about the kind of reception they would receive in North Vietnam when they did arrive.

The portion of the telecast showing the voyage is a graphic account of the hardships these Quakers endured on their mission of mercy.

Faun's film account of the Phoenix and her crew also contains striking footage filmed in Haiphong, North Vietnam's chief port; in the capital city of Hanoi; and in villages between and around the two cities. It includes an exclusive interview with Nguyen Duy Trinh, a vice-premier of Nort Vietnam.

The cargo aboard the Phoenix comprised $10,000 worth of medical supplies, purchased by Quakers with voluntary contributions and eventually handed over to the International Red Cross in Hanoi. Captain of the vessel was Dr. Earle Reynolds, who described the voage as "a humanitarian mission."

Bull of the Woods

The life and work of the modern logger, contrasted with the past, will be shown on Channel 2 on Saturday at 6 p.m.

"Bull of the Woods" is the title of the half-hour color documentary, filmed this spring at the MacMillan Bloedel Limited logging operations at Nanaimo River and Franklin River, Vancouver Island.

Contrasting scenes of modern logging and sawmilling with historic sequences recreated by use of authentic early-day equipment on display at the Cowichan Logging Museum, the film dramatizes the sweeping transition in B.C. lumbering methods and the life of the logger.

In the film, the great change in the life of the logger from a roistering nomad to a solid contributor to community affairs is seen through the eyes and memory of one man—John Westerholme, general foreman of MB's Nanaimo River logging division. He has worked in the woods for more than 40 years and has witnessed all the developments in methods, equipment and way of life documented in the film.

The Last Giant

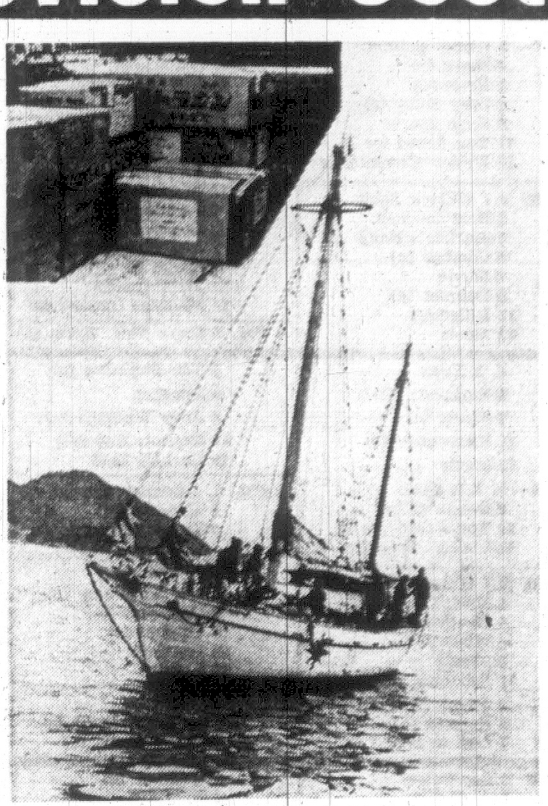
Part Two of "Michelangelo: The Last Giant," the two-part NBC News color TV program tracing the artist's life through his sculpture, paintings, architecture and writings, will be presented on the NBC Television network Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Peter Ustinov is the voice of Michelangelo, and Jose Ferrer is the narrator. Lou Hazam produced and wrote the two-part program, which was filmed in Florence, Seina, Bologna, Rome and Milan against the backdrop of the places where the artist lived and worked.

When the curtain fell on Part One, colorcast May 7, 1967, (repeat of Dec. 22, 1965), Michelangelo had more than a half-century to live. It closed with his painting of the Sistine Chapel. Part Two resumes after the work in the Sistine Chapel and ends with the artist's death a few days short of his 89th birthday.

Away We Go . .

Ronald Wayne, who has been nominated for a 1967 Emmy Award as producer of The Jackie Gleason Show, is producing Away We Go, the new musical-variety hour in color



IN MARCH a group of Quakers sailed from Hong Kong to Haiphong with a cargo of medical supplies for the people of North Vietnam. CBC's Public Eye series, Sunday at 10 p.m., Channels 2 and 6, records this journey which will begin Saturday on Channels 7 and 12 at 7:30 p.m. as a summer replacement for the Gleason series.

Away We Go stars comedian George Carlin and singer Buddy Greco, with Buddy Rich and his orchestra. A leading guest performer will be featured each week, with Sheila MacRae of The Jackie Gleason Show as guest on the premiere telecast.

Producer Wayne has been a member of the Gleason production company since 1959. When The Jackie Gleason Show made its debut in September, 1962, Wayne was appointed associated producer and in the fall of 1964 became producer.

Face the Nation

Miss MacRae sings and dances "A Salute to a Stool" and joins Greco in a duet, "A Man and a Woman," theme music from the movie of the same name. The entire cast joins in a spoof of show business awards and, performing his own introduction on the piano, Buddy Greco sings "I Will Wait for You" and "What the World Needs Today."

Roger Hilsman, assistant secretary of state for the Far East under the late President Kennedy, will be guest on "Face the Nation" Sunday at 12:15 on Channel 7.

The interview will be taped in Washington just before air time.

Hilsman served in the state department during the Kennedy administration's involvement with Cuba, Indonesia and Vietnam, first with the intelligence arm then as an assistant secretary. He has written numberous books and articles on foreign affairs and national defence. His latest book, "To Move a Nation," is scheduled for early release.

Hope

KOMO-TV's panel of distinguished clergymen has selected the subject of "Hope" for the final "Challenge", interfaith dialogue of the 1966-67 season to be presented over Channel 4 in color at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Dr. Lynn Corson, senior minister of the University Methodist Temple, will moderate the discussion on the importance of "Hope", as a creative resource in the world today.

VIC DAMONE
. . . host for 12 shows

Started With Success

Vic Damone "debuted" in his church choir at nine and his voice had hardly changed before he was singing in top nightclubs.

Vic, who will host 12 shows on the NBC Television Network's "The Dean Martin Summer Show" can trace his professional career back to 1945.

As a teen-ager, Vic was a winner on Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts." A backstage "kibitzer," Milton Berle, arranged for an audition at a popular New York club, La Martinique. Vic was signed for two weeks and held over for 11.

Before the end of 1945 Damone had been Andy Russell's stand-by on "Your Hit Parade," had his own radio show, and was signed for a starring engagement at New York's Paramount Theatre with Stan Kenton's band.

TWO ENGAGEMENTS

One success followed another as Damone starred in The Pet Milk radio show (1947) for two years and had top engagements at the Copacabana, the old Riviera, the Roxy and the Paramount again. In 1950, Vic was given co-billing with Guy Lombardo at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel's Starlight Roof.

He also was a hit at Hollywood's Mocambo, and producer Joe Pasternak signed him for the motion picture "Rich, Young and Pretty."

After a two-year hitch in the service, 1951-53, Damone appeared in two more movies, "Hell to Eternity" and "Crash Boat."

During the 1950s, Damone continued to sing at leading clubs, turned out hit records, and guested on television. His most recent million-selling records have been "On the Street Where You Live" and "You Were Only Foolin'."

In 1962-63 Vic starred in NBC-TV's summer series "The Lively Ones."

During the 1966 Christmas holiday season, Vic toured with Bob Hope's company in Vietnam — an experience that moved him deeply.

Damone could hardly believe the response he received in Vietnam. He was so profoundly stirred by the soldiers that he wants to return for another trip.

Damone and his wife, the former Judy Rawlins, make their home in Beverly Hills. An automobile accident nearly claimed the lives of both in 1964 and the experience left Vic a more reflective man. Religion has played an important role in his life since that time.

The Damones have three children: Perry, 12, Victoria, 2, and Andrea, 1.

Charlie Brown Is In Love!

Spring Fancy Hits Lovable Character Wednesday on 2, 6

Summer vacation is greeted with joy by most of the Peanuts gang, but it's a setback for good old Charlie Brown, in "You're In Love, Charlie Brown," an animated cartoon special to be presented in color Wednesday, at 8 p.m., on Channels 2 and 6.

This is the fourth in a series of half-hour animated cartoon specials involving the wise and witty young-old children from Charles M. Schulz's comic strip Peanuts.

It's the last days of school and Charlie Brown is determined to express his affection for his secret love, a little red-haired girl. The rest of the Peanuts are torn between sympathy for Charlie's attack of spring fancy and hilarity at his bumbling attempts to woo his light-o'-love.

Charlie neglects his homework, develops a chronic stomach ache, misses the school bus and winds up in the principal's office as he struggles for courage to offer his heart to the moppet siren.

The first TV dramatic appearance of Peanuts was A Charlie Brown Christmas, telecast in 1965. It won broadcasting's most distinguished honor, the Peabody Award, and also received an Emmy Award from the Television Academy. This special was followed in 1966 with Charlie Brown's All-Stars, and It's The Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown. All three received top ratings for the weeks in which they were telecast.

As Thousands Die

The apathy of the American public towards the Vietnam War will be one of the unusual points raised in a KING-TV News special report entitled As Thousand Die to be televised at 9:30 p.m. Monday, on Channel 5.

Narrated by KING News Analyst Herb Altschull, the program surveys public and world opinion through interviews with "the man on the street" and ranking foreign delegates to the United Nations.

For a pro and con view of U.S.-Vietnam policy, Altschull interviews William Bundy, assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, and Senator J. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Among the questions raised during the 30-minute report is why the war seems to have such a little effect on the public, even though for the first time in history television brings the realities of war right into the living room.

The program will also explore the importance or lack of importance of foreign opposition to U.S. action in Vietnam, and the apparent inability of the U.S. Government to force North Vietnam to the negotiating table.

Show of the Week

A one-hour, color variety special starring Juliette will be presented on CBC-TV's Show of the Week on Monday, at 9 p.m. on Channel's 2:6.

Juliette's guests on the show include French-Canadian singer Daniele Dorice, Spring Thaw's Dean Regan, musical comedy performer Myron Natwick and vocalist Vanda King.

One of the highlights of the show is a Centennial Salute, in which Juliette sings the Expo theme song Hey Friend, Say Friend; the title song from Don Harron and Norman Campbell's musical Anne of Green Gables, and Johnny Wayne's Charlottetown.

PDQ Coming

Three top Hollywood celebrities star each week with Dennis James on television's bright new comedy show — "PDQ." The color quiz will be seen Monday through Friday Channel 7 starting Monday at 3:30 p.m.

The new comedy-game show is played by two teams. The object is to guess a pre-specified word. James gives the contestants three letters to start, allowing five seconds for one of the teams to come up with the entire word. If neither does, an additional letter is provided until the word is identified, but point value decreases as each letter is added and high team wins.

Final event for each day is a bonus round played for a maximum of ten correct answers and up to $500 in merchandise.

Life of Gauguin

"Gauguin in Tahiti: The Search for Paradise," CBS News Special focusing on the impressionist painter's years in Tahiti, where he created as an artist the paradise he failed to find there as a man, will be presented in color Tuesday, at 10 p.m. on Channel 7.

JULIETTE appears Monday in a Show of the Week color special on Channels 2 and 6.

Sir Michael Redgrave will speak the words of Gauguin on the broadcast, which also recalls Gauguin's life in France and the reasons why he deserted his family for Tahiti.

Produced, directed and written by Martin Carr, the hour special was filmed in France and Tahiti.

Many of Gauguin's paintings will be shown, including those from private collections the world over and in museums ranging from the Hermitage in Leningrad to the Metroplitan in New York.

Carr based his script on Bengt Danielsson's book, "Gauguin in the South Seas," which won enthusiastic acclaim on its publication in 1966. The words spoken by Sir Michael Redgrave derive from Danielsson's book and from such other sources as Gauguin's letters (both published and unpublished) and Gauguin's books, "Noa Noa" (meaning "fragrance") and "The Intimate Journals of Paul Gauguin."

Political Fantasy

Canadian Prime Minister Robert Ghiberti is the central figure in a world crisis on the eve of a new millenium in the political fantasy 1999, the finale of CBC-TV's Choice of Futures series.

The one-hour colorcast will be seen Wednesday, at 9:30 p.m. on Channel's 2, 6. This original drama is written by Eric Koch; producer-director is Melwyn Breen.

The drama takes place in Ottawa on New Year's Eve, 1999, from 11 p.m. to midnight. Prime Minister Ghiberti (John Colicos) spearheads a last-minute attempt to involve the United Nations in the solution of a crisis caused by government suppression of an international student protest movement in Russia. By doing so, Ghiberti runs the calculated risk of antagonizing the world's two super-powers — the U.S. and U.S.S.R.- to the degree that a long sought-after major arms control agreement to take effect at midnight is seriously jeopardized. The super-powers firmly support unilateral Russian action to "solve" the student problem.

The crisis reaches a high point between 11 p.m. and midnight as Ghiberti receives support from the UN secretary-general and some of the other world powers but is subjected to stiff pressure from the U.S., Russia, and his partner in a coalition government Margaret Lattimer (Ruth Springford) who threatens to force an election if Ghiberti doesn't alter his course.

One of Ghiberti's chief supporters in this troubled time is Martin Desjardins, an aging but virile former prime minister and developer of a climate control process that made Canada's arctic regions bloom and earned him a Nobel Prize. Desjardins (Gillie Fenwick) counsels his young friend Ghiberti to stick to the course he believes is just, regardless of the potential consequences.

As midnight approaches, Ghiberti has two speeches prepared to deliver to the nation — one, a message of hope for mankind's future in the form of world government and law; the other, a foreboding forecast of a return to nationalistic rivalry and the menace of nuclear war.

Gene Roddenberry, executive producer and creator of NBC-TV'x space series "Star Trek," which begins its second season in the fall, reports that the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. has request films of any of the past season's episodes for permanent file in their air and space museum.

HOME GARDEN

Follow Rules, Reap Benefits

By JACK BEASTALL

Many home gardeners have this year made their first investment in a vegetable garden. Labor has been invested in preparing the soil and sowing the seed; money has been invested in seeds and fertilizers.

The long-range plan is to gain a profit in the form of flavorful young vegetables of a high nutritional value.

Jack

Even in a carelessly prepared soil and without any previous experience, the seeds will produce some kind of an edible crop, but with a little more care and a modicum of experience, the results will be considerably more gratifying.

Care in preparation and sowing comes from self-discipline; taking a little longer and doing a more thorough job. Experience only comes with time and involves observation, reasoning and experimenting.

Time can be saved by using the experience of others, by absorbing the methods that have served them well, and applying them after due evaluation and necessary adjustments to suit conditions.

EASY RULES

There are also definite rules that are easy to follow and can be applied by the beginner to increase the value of his investment.

One is spacing. Each plant, whether a lettuce growing above soil or a carrot growing below, must have sufficient room for proper development and its fair share of light and air.

The correct spacing is achieved by thinning, that is, the removal of seedlings which are crowding others. First we thin to a spacing of one or two inches while the plants are quite small, and later we remove alternate plants which are often of a usable size.

After each thinning it is wise to run along the row with the garden hose, applying just enough water to settle the soil around the roots of the plants that are left. This often means the difference between profit and loss.

EXTRA CARE

Experience has taught us that carrot thinning requires a little extra care. The carrot rust fly is attracted by the characteristic smell of the carrot, a smell which pervades the air for quite a distance when the foliage is disturbed.

To lessen the spread of the odor we always drop the thinnings into a can rather than let them die on the soil, and if they are not of a usable size, bury them in the compost heap, not throw them on top.

COVER THEM

Finally we work a little soil up to the plants in the rows so as to keep the tops of the roots always covered.

Leeks and onions are crops which most beginners try to grow, but often without spectacular success. Although both belong to the onion family their culture is opposite.

A good leek has six inches or more of white flesh, and this is obtained by setting the seedlings deep into the soil.

To do this, we make a hole six inches deep with a dibber and drop one seedling into each hole. The seedling may completely disappear, but that does not matter.

A quick run along the row with a garden hose will wash enough soil into each hole to cover the roots, and in a week or so the leaves will be showing above soil level.

NEVER BURIED

The onion must never be buried. The roots of the seedlings are set into the soil just to the point where roots and leaves meet.

Once the seedlings are established and growth is evident we start working the soil away from the plants, not towards them. As the bulbs increase in size they should be sitting on top of the soil like a tennis ball, fully exposed to light and air.

Shallots, like onion, must grow on top of the soil. They are pressed into the prepared ground to about one-half their depth, and when rooted the soil is worked away from the bulb so that it sits on the surface.

Peas are best planted in a trench the width of the spade and about three inches deep. Three rows of seeds, staggered, will fit this width, the seeds being pressed into the soil around one-and-a-half to two inches deep.

WORKED BACK

As the plants grow, the soil that was removed is worked back into the trench until the surface is again level. This gives the deep, cool root run so essential to a good crop of peas. It also protects the early sowings from frost damage.

Cabbages and Brussels sprouts like a hard, compact soil which was manured the previous year. Freshly manured, loose soil results in a lot of leaves but no tight heads or sprout buttons.

Cauliflowers need a richer soil, that is, a good compost and a general garden fertilizer, and the soil need only be firmed rather than compacted.

Turnips are not easy to grow here. The white Milan is sown in June when the soil is really warm, watered well, and encouraged to make rapid growth. They are used when nearing the size of a tennis ball.

The Laurentian purple-top, or Swede, is sown in mid-July for use in late September, some plants growing on until possibly mid-November. In some areas the balance, if any, can be left in the soil until Christmas; in others it is better to lift and store.

COLORFUL FLOWERS in simple pattern make attractive design for front and side yards. Low flowers and shrubs permit full glory of home to shine through. Flower color should not clash with that of house.

SIMPLE ADORNMENT BEST

By PAULINE GRAVES

Here is proof that although adornment on a house has its place, that adornment can be very simple. In fact, it can have more visual impact than elaborate designs because of the lack of distracting elements.

In the house shown here, designed by Cliff May and decorated by Jerry Alsobrook the flower pot ledge and the massive double door are the chief adornments.

With no windows, no draperies, no shutters or pediments on the front exterior, one sees immediately the strong, horizontal line of the colorful flowers echoing the low roof line above, and contrasting with the vertical doors.

There is embellishment on the doors, rows of three-inch square metal plates that enhance the doors and [illegible] part of its total design.

The wide molding around the door also adds to its importance.

Instead of a traditional garden around the edge of the house, the pot ledge, fifteen in[illegible] fifteen inches wide, raises the flower pots to a higher level and gives a low look to the house.

The absence of windows is due to the fact that the doors open onto a courtyard around which the house is built and the windows look into the yard rather than to the front or sides.

The same effect can be achieved without a courtyard, when rooms are planned to face the rear, and the garden becomes a part of the house.

WEEK'S WORK

Finish the setting out of annuals, and water frequently but lightly until established.

Even with light summer showers, all shrubs which have been planted this spring will need careful attention to watering at the roots.

Soil is drying out rapidly, and lawns need watering before they show signs of dryness and browning.

Shear the plants of rockery phlox, aubretia, iberis (the perennial candytuft) and yellow alyssum now that blooming is over.

Delphiniums and the tall herbaceous phloxes should have some of the weaker stems removed at ground level to improve those remaining.

Carnations, peonies and roses should be disbudded early if the blooms are wanted for June flower shows.

The more tender of decorative plants for patios and tubs can be put outdoors now—cannas, tuberous begonias, and some of the large house plants. Be careful not to expose the shade lovers to full sunshine.

Sow white turnips, also squash, marrow and cucumbers if not already in.

Squash will grow on shady side of block of sweet corn, so long as the site is open overhead and warm.

Big Building Project

OTTAWA (CP) — The man largely responsible for reshaping a couple of islands in the St. Lawrence River into Expo 67 has been handed another mountain to move — the Northumberland Strait causeway.

Col. Edward Churchill, 54-year-old former army engineer who had barely caught his breath after getting Expo up and open, has been picked by the federal works department to supervise construction and design of the nine-mile causeway to link New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Of his new job — the project carries a $150,000,000 price tag — Col. Churchill told a reporter Friday he wanted it "the moment I heard about it."

Building Faces Featured View

Cedok, the Czechoslovak Travel Bureau, will begin construction next year of a modern, new 600-bed hotel in downtown Prague on the right bank of the Vltava River.

The hotel is to be designed in such a way that most rooms will face toward Prague Castle, the city's number one centre of attraction.

New building activity in the High Tatras, is also planned by Cedok. The need for more accommodation has been accented by the completion of the most successful winter sports season in the region's history.

All of Cedok's interhotels and catering establishments in the Tatras were fully booked throughout the main part of the season, with more than half the visitors this year coming from the West, particularly from West Germany, Australia, Sweden and Denmark.

In addtion to more accommodation, the new building program for next season calls for a covered, heated swimming pool with poolside bar at the modern new Bellevue Hotel and new Finnish saunas and a Hunter's Chalet at the Grand Hotel Lomnica. Curling rinks for guests staying at High Tatra interhotels are also on the books for next winter.

NEXT SEASON

In addition to the three one-day coach trips out of Prague for tourists, details of which were announced last month, Cedok will again operate several longer trips this year to other parts of the country — one of them a 12-day tour of most of the country (cost, $172 U.S., including accommodation, transportation and all meals) — and will operate river trips on the Vltava.

Short river excursions, with departures five times daily, take you under Pragues' bridges and provide photographers especially with some fine new perspectives of the Czechoslovak capital.

LEAVE CAPITAL

For the more romantically inclined, there is an evening river trip on Wednesdays and Saturdays from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. with dining and dancing on board.

A third one is a day-long trip that takes you upstream as far as the lake formed by the Slapy Dam south of Prague. Boats leave the capital on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Friday's at 9 a.m., with return at 8:15 p.m.

A system of renting out rooms at the International Hotel in Brno during daylight hours (8 a.m. to 6 p.m.) at reduced rates (less than $1.75 Candian per person) has been introduced by Cedok. The purpose is to provide a special service to visitors who are passing through Brno and who may wish to enjoy a brief rest.

Master's Degree at 16 Her Aim

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — At the age of 14, when most girls are in junior high school and perhaps boy crazy, Edith Stern is a junior in college. She takes courses such as calculus 2, although she's never had calculus 1.

Edith learned to read at two. She skipped senior high school, and at 12 became one of the country's youngest college coeds, perhaps the youngest. Her IQ has come out in various tests from 154 to 201 — way up there.

How does it feel to be a genius?

"I'm happy," said the hazel-eyed Brooklyn-born girl. "How could I know how it would feel to be in college at any other age? This is normal for me."

At Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, the Miami girl has a roommate seven years her senior.

"I haven't associated with people my age in four years," Edith said. "I wouldn't be comfortable associating with kiddies."

Edith says she has no boy friends, "but that will come later."

She has no dates — "I haven't been asked, but that will come later."

Does she dance? "No, not really."

She smokes a pack of cigarettes about every three days, "and a few more before and after exams."

She doesn't drink, but "some day I'd like to try a cocktail."

Occasionally, in the life of a prodigy, there are movies, too. "I go about once every two weeks," Edith said. "I have no car, and when a girl friend wants to go, I tag along."

Mostly it's school work. Edith hasn't had a vacation since junior high school.

"I don't need one," she said. "I am happier this way. Anyway, I get a few days between trimesters."

Wearing dark-rimmed glasses, the five-foot, six-inch, 138-pound co-ed is scholarly and attractive.

Her 14-hour course includes French, chemistry and history, as well as calculus.

Edith reads about 10 books a week. She averages three hours daily homework.

When examination time comes, she said, "I am a master at cramming."

"I stay up most of the night. Get about three hours of sleep. Unless it's chemistry. Then I study for two or three days."

Edith hopes to have a master's degree at 16.

WINNIPEG 'HAPPENING'

Police Nab 25 Youths As Mob Jams Traffic

DEMONSTRATOR was plucked from high ledge of legislative building, led away in handcuffs. (CP Photo.)

WINNIPEG (CP) — A quiet demonstration at a city park turned into a traffic-stopping mob scene Friday night as hundreds of youths fanned out into the legislature grounds and downtown streets.

About 25 persons were reported taken to jail. Police withheld a statement until later today on the number charged.

The demonstration began at Memorial Park, a popular downtown gathering place on warm summer evenings, where several persons were arrested earlier this week for causing disturbances.

A small group of placard-bearers were joined by a swelling crowd as word of the demonstration got around. Some headed for the nearby legislature building and others swarmed to Portage Avenue where some mail boxes and garbage cans were overturned.

Witnesses said what damage there was appeared to be caused by an unruly minority. Others in the throng replaced the overturned objects.

YOUTH RUNS WILD

A climax was reached around midnight when a youth climbed up the walls of the legislature building and was chased around a narrow ledge by policemen.

Hysterically yelling that he only had a year to live and that he was going to be a martyr for the teen-age generation, the youth finally came to a stop on a four-inch ledge. Police called out the fire department's snorkel, but it took more than 15 minutes to move the snorkel's basket in position below the youth.

Every time the youth managed to duck the outstretched arms of the firemen a roar of encouragement came out of 1,000 gathered under the ledge. He was finally grabbed, given a cigarette to calm him down and hustled into the paddy wagon.

Police resorted to grabbing, shoving and pushing several times in vain attempts to disperse the crowd.

Several persons suffered minor cuts and bruises in the melee and one girl collapsed on Portage Avenue with an injured leg after being struck by a car. She was one of a group of teenagers staging a sit-in in the middle of the intersection of Portage Avenue and Memorial Boulevard.

Fire trucks were called out once to douse a fire in an overthrown trash can. Several trolley buses were stalled in downtown Winnipeg when vandals in the crowd pulled the cords loose from power lines.

HIPPIES STOP TRAFFIC

Portage Avenue between Memorial Boulevard and Main Street was turned into a traffic jam from midnight until well after 1 a.m. when the crowd had broke up.

It all started with a group of long-haired youths sitting on the park grass, some of them eccentrically clad. Some had guitars and were singing folk songs. Police were standing nearby.

Early in the evening a small demonstration caused a commotion. About 20 youths carried brown paper placards with such slogans as "Help stamp out police brutality" . . . "Help us get good jobs without changing our styles."

Just before 11 p.m. the crowd started swelling—in 30 minutes their numbers grew from about 400 to about 1,000.

When several of the youths started taking showers in the colored fountains of Memorial Boulevard police moved in and chased them out of the park.

One hoarse voice yelled: "Let's have a sit-in on the steps of the legislature." The crowd followed and in five minutes the monumental porch and steps were filled with youths. Hundreds more were standing around, unable to find a place to sit on the steps.

Police followed and removed them methodically from the steps. One escaped to the top of a construction scaffold against the building but was quickly pulled down and put in the paddy wagon.

The crowd then returned to Portage Avenue and for the next hour continued to impede traffic despite police efforts to break up the mob.

Aerial Bomb Expert Lord Tedder Dies

BANSTEAD, England (AP)—Marshal of the RAF Lord Tedder, who served in the Second World War as deputy supreme allied commander under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, died today. He was 76.

Tedder had been in poor health for some time. He was considered a brilliant military strategist in the co-ordination of air power with land forces.

During the North African campaign he originated the "bomb carpet"—using hundreds of planes to smash enemy minefields and other defences to clear a path for advancing infantry and tanks.

As deputy supreme allied commander on the formation of the Allied Expeditionary Force in Britain at the end of 1943, Lord Tedder was responsible to Gen. Eisenhower for the general control and co-ordination of Anglo-American air operations.

PUBLISHES MEMOIRS

Lord Tedder, who served in the Middle East before becoming Eisenhower's deputy, last year published his memoirs.

Titled With Prejudice, the book praised the RAF and attacked several wartime leaders including Field Marshal Lord Montgomery.

He was particularly critical of Lord Montgomery's handling of the Normandy bridgehead at Caen after D-Day, believing he should have moved ahead faster into France.

"I told Eisenhower that his own people would be thinking he had sold them to the British people if he continued to support Montgomery without protest," he wrote at the time.

Born in Scotland in July, 1890, Arthur William Tedder during the First World War fought in the trenches before being transferred to the newly formed Royal Flying Corps.

He was mentioned in dispatches three times and granted a permanent RAF commission in 1919.

TOOK MID-EAST COMMAND

At the start of the Second World War he was in the ministry of aircraft production before taking over command of the RAF in the Middle East in 1941.

Tedder was created a baron in 1946. From 1946 until 1950, he was chairman of the British joint services mission in Washington, and United Kingdom representative on the standing group of the miliary committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In 1950, he was appointed vice-chairman of the BBC, of which he already was a governor.

Tedder was married twice. His first wife was killed in an air crash and the second died after illness in 1965. He leaves two sons and a daughter.

MP Makes Plea For House Rest

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—As the temperature in the capital topped 80 degrees Friday, Government House Leader MacEachen told MPs a "realistic target" for a summer recess is the end of June.

He said the recess would come as soon as the main 1967-68 estimates are passed by Parliament. The estimates cover $9,700,000,000 in government spending.

Many MPs have already gone to their home ridings and the others are champing at the bit. Only about 100 of the 265 seats in the House were filled Thursday night for the budget speech, which normally draws a crowd.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) reflected the feelings of those who are still here Friday when he in effect begged for word on a recess.

Mr. Winch said he has been home for only one week since the parliamentary year began in January.

"Could we not get some definite indication as to what is going to happen with regard to a summer recess?" he pleaded.

NO NEW LEGISLATION

Mr. MacEachen said the main job is the estimates. No new legislation would be introduced before recess.

A resolution to have Mr. Justice Leo Landreville removed from the bench is expected to be introduced in the Senate Tuesday night. If it passes the Senate, the Commons will have to deal with it.

One spokesman for each opposition party will speak on the Sharp budget Tuesday in the Commons, then the budget debate will be adjourned until fall.

The other 19 sitting days in June will be mainly devoted to the estimates, Mr. MacEachen said.

Of about 27 departments, the estimates of only one—the post office—have been approved so far.

However, nine have been sent to committees, meaning a relatively brief time in the Commons unless there is a serious conflict.

Trouble could come in the form of the public works department estimates as a result of the federal decision to try to scale down the cost of the Northumberland Strait causeway.

WILL DIG IN HIS HEELS

All four Prince Edward Island MPs are Conservatives and at least one, Davie MacDonald (Prince), has said that he will dig in his heels on the estimates until the government guarantees that the huge project won't be delayed or ditched.

The postal estimates went through smoothly Friday, with Postmaster-General Cote promising to introduce legislation this fall to raise second-class mail rates.

Second class mail, mainly newspapers and magazines, was blamed for the $30,000,000 deficit the post office suffered in the 1966-67 fiscal year.

Man Jailed For Car Theft

A man who abandoned in Regina a car he rented in Victoria was sentenced to six months in jail for theft Friday.

Derwood McFayden of no fixed address had earlier pleaded guilty to the charge, blaming a domestic dispute for his troubles.

He was arrested in Edmonton and returned to appear in court here.

Pilot Decorates Pole

By KORKY KOROLUK

EDMONTON (CP) — A 43-year-old Edmonton pilot has completed a centennial project with a difference.

John Cameron, a pilot with 25 years' experience and 15,000 hours in the air, planted a centennial flay at the North Pole May 14, then stayed in the North "busy with additional flying" before returning to Edmonton Thursday to tell the story.

To plant the flag, Mr. Cameron had to land a single-engine de Havilland Otter aircraft on an ice floe and drift across the Pole.

But in an interview Friday, he called the landing "almost routine."

Mr. Cameron is employed by Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton, specialists in arctic flying.

FIRST LANDING

His landing is believed to be the first at the Pole by a single-engine aircraft.

He was accompanied on the trip by a team of four scientists that managed to pick up "quite a large bag of scientific information, the people in Ottawa will have to talk about that."

The scientists were Dr. Hans Weber and Axel Geiger from the Dominion observatory in Ottawa, Leif Lundgaard of Hamar, Norway and Bob Lillestrand of Mineapolis. All but Mr. Lillestrand are working on the polar continental shelf project, gleaning scientific information about the shelf.

Mr. Lillestrand, attached to the Washington observatory, was an observer.

Navigation was by the stars, using a special theodolite to take star shots during the constant daylight of the arctic spring. To take the shots the party had to wait as a fog bank lifted and rolled around them.

The party, in addition to planting the flag, dropped an electrical transformer to the ocean floor, 13,800 feet below, to mark the geographic Pole. It also made seismic, gravity and celestial observations, examined the ice and water, "and even observed the odd satellite."

530 MILES

The trip was made from Alert, N.W.T., on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island, 530 miles from the Pole.

On the first leg, Mr. Cameron and another Gateway Aircraft piloted by Harold Mordey, flew over the Pole to a camp 30 miles beyond where a team of scientists was working. From there, he hopped to within eight miles of the Pole, then took off again and landed just a mile from the pole.

"There was a lot of open water around," he said, "so we landed a mile away and just drifted over the Pole."

The ice floe on which he landed — after making six passes — was about 1,000 feet long — just long enough to permit a take-off.

From there, he hopped back to the 30-mile camp where the companion aircraft was waiting, refuelled from supplies dropped by another plane, then headed back to Alert.

The flying time each way from Alert was about six hours. The entire operation took just under 24 hours.

Fuel posed a special problem. The Otter's endurance normally is about five hours, so Mr. Cameron loaded three 45-gallon drums of gasoline into the aircraft cabin and transferred fuel from them to the plane's tanks by using a hand pump.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1967--PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Prince Philip, a durable rider who has taken his share of tosses, delivered himself this week of a statement that I thought would fetch a prompt challenge from the boots-and-saddle set.

"God invented a lot of animals," said Philip, still smarting from a polo toss, "and just about the most stupid is the horse."

This sounded like heresy to me, but a fervent Victoria horseman I have just consulted insists that the prince is merely stating an established fact.

"Any 1,200-pound animal that will be bluffed into letting a 160-pound man climb on its back and control its actions has to be stupid," the expert assured me.

But he didn't comment on what happens when the man isn't precisely a mental ball of fire either, and has only the vaguest idea how you go about bluffing a horse.

Anyway, there was no need for him to deal with that problem. From my own limited and unhappy experience with various steeds, I can furnish the answers. The sum of them is that the horse, who is bright enough to know when it has a soft touch aboard, does what it wants.

Most times, this is to tag along with the other horses if there are any about, a trait impressed on me by a monstrous wall-eyed brute named Sam.

Sam and I met outside a corral half a day's ride from a Kamloops trout lake which, unfortunately, couldn't be reached on wheels. We eyed each other for a hostile moment, then I got a foot in the stirrup and a fistful of scrubby mane, and scrambled up Sam's lofty side.

This he permitted. Then, while I was trying to remember what one did with the reins, Sam swung his head around, bared a set of yellow teeth, and attempted to bite my left kneecap off.

"Gentle as a kitten," the ranch-hand guide remarked cheerfully.

Except for the occasional sneaky attempt to bite, Sam gave no more trouble. We jogged out of the pastures and into the jackpine; climbed one height of land and descended another; and after an hour or two of this, I began to think that maybe we'd arrived at an understanding after all.

We topped that summit and were starting down, when one of the ranch guys pointed to a meadow below. A long-tailed equine stood there minding its own business.

"Wild horse!" he hollered, and took off at a run. In spite of a startled "Whoa!" from his passenger, so did Sam.

The wild horse made out well enough, but that scamper cost me a bloody nose, a fishing hat with two Big Bertha flies and a Black o' Lindsay stuck in the band, several welts from whipping branches, and a pair of saddle-sores each the size of a silver dollar.

Long after Sam and I parted company, I told my daughter about our association, which was a mistake.

She was then in the horse-stage that little girls go through, and in consequence, her sympathies were all with Sam.

But the chase down the jackpine sidehill did give me some unearned status in her eyes, and when she prevailed on us to check in at a dude ranch near Bridge Lake, nothing would do but that daddy should join in the trail ride.

They saddled up a beast that could have doubled for Sam.

"Gentle as a kitten," the ranchman said; but I wasn't buying this time.

By standing aside until the others were taken care of, I achieved a mount scarce larger than a donkey. My feet in fact, darn near touched the ground.

It didn't try to bite me, and I didn't interfere when it paused to nibble grass, and in this amiable understanding we had a pretty good trail ride.

Since then, I have been considered too dumb to associate with horses, a rating that suits me just fine. Far as I'm concerned Prince Philip can have 'em!

200 Bikes Made The Big Parade Even Bigger

By TED GASKELL

It looked as if every bicycle in the world was in Oak Bay this morning.

There must have been 200 in the Centennial Tea Party parade and without the bikes with their crepe paper and balloons, the river of color that flowed down Oak Bay streets would have been a mere trickle.

"They really took us by surprise," said Bert Kent, Tea Party chairman. "We expected about 30 or 40 but look at them. There must be 200 at least."

The Board of Trade, co-ordinators for the Tea Party, received 500 children's parade entries and most of them turned up.

REAL STUFF

In addition to the children's groups there were 27 units in the parade including four bands, district floats, sports groups, decorated cars. There were Union Jacks, Red Ensigns, pipes, tweeds, top hats, umbrellas. The Real Oak Bay Tea Party stuff.

And of course there were the Tweedys, riding in a 1947, wire-wheeled, right hand drive M.G. And you can't be more tea party-ish than that unless you happen to be a cucumber sandwich.

ROUTE JAMMED

Hundreds lined the parade route from Windsor Park and the village area along Oak Bay avenue was jammed with people.

The parade and the atmosphere that surrounded it gave promise of a good weekend.

The sun shone as the children assembled. Just before parade time at 10 a.m. the sun could barely be seen through the ten-tenths cloud and there was fear of rain. But it managed to hold off until the official tea party at noon when dignitaries were welcomed by The Tweedys.

FREE DANCING

This afternoon the Spectacle of Bands is scheduled with drill displays and baton demonstrations. There is free dancing tonight at Willows Park to the Mixed Emotions and the famous baron of beef will go under the chef's knife.

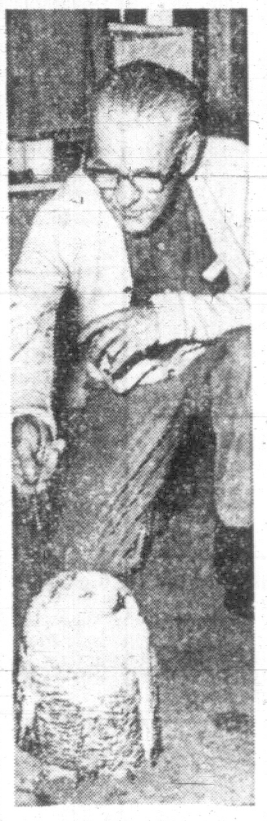
The Children's carnival runs this afternoon and Sunday, a really big day with a waterfront show which includes fishing derbies, sailing races, swimming races, log rolling, treasure hunt, kite flying and sky divers.

SUN RETURNS ON SUNDAY

Today's grey skies will give way to sun Sunday.

Gradually improving weather should produce a bright, warm day but the weather office warns westerly winds on Juan de Fuca Strait could reach 20 miles an hour.

And, says the weatherman, the outlook up-Island should be even better than the Greater Victoria area.



CHARLES KNILL

History Repeated As Man Meets Owl

In 1909 Charles Knill, then 10 years old, submitted a picture of himself feeding a mouse to an owl, in a photo competition.

Title of the picture was "When shall we three meet again?"

Fifty-eight years later, Mr. Knill and an owl were in a picture again. (Above.)

About 5:30 this morning Mr. Knill was awakened by crows making a racket in his back yard. Upon investigation he found about 20 of them attacking a snow-white owl.

A young student, George Puziak, staying with the Knills, rushed into the garden with a blanket which he used to capture the owl and carry it into the basement.

While resting in its new basement home the owl ate raw bacon and slept peacefully until the S.P.C.A. came.

The bird did not appear to be injured, said an S.P.C.A. official. It has been given to an employee as a pet.

Women Electors TO Play Safe On Next Report

Future reports by the Association of Women Electors will require executive approval before publication, Mrs. Dorothy Ray, president, said today.

Mrs. Ray said the executive had decided such approval would prevent the type of dissension which followed recent publication of the association's controversial education study.

The study, severely critical of the B.C. school system, sparked a debate within the association.

Mrs. Violet Berringer, a school teacher, charged the press had received the report at the same time as the membership and that no vote had been taken.

REPORT ONLY STUDY

Mrs. Ray said although these charges were true, this procedure had never been necessary in the past.

"The report was only a study; it required no vote as it made no recommendations."

"There was nothing wrong with the manner in which it was presented, but just to ensure that such a situation does not arise again executive approval will be needed."

Mrs. Ray said the proposed study into unjust treatment of school children will not be carried out.

"Most of the membership feels that the education report is complete as it is.

"We don't expect to take on any new projects until the fall."

Veterinarians Hold Conference This Weekend

About 40 to 50 veterinarians are attending a two-day province-wide conference at the Red Lion Inn.

Highlighting the conference this afternoon is a closed circuit televised operation of a cataract being removed from a dog's eye. The surgery will be performed by Dr. Gary Brian, a small-animal eye specialist from Portland.

Dr. G. H. Hamilton, president of the Canadian Veterinarian Association, is attending the conference.

Dr. Otto Radostits, from a Saskatoon veterinarian college, will be guest speaker Sunday afternoon after a business meeting in the morning.

Tonight a banquet and a dance will be held.

40 Fires Burning In B.C. Forests

B.C. Forest Service said Friday 60 new fires were reported in B.C. during the past week, 78 were extinguished and 40 are still burning.

In its weekly bulletin, the service said it had spent $44,900 fighting 371 fires so far this season, compared with $65,400 spent fighting 527 fires in the comparable period of 1966.

The service reported slightly higher fire hazards due to a general drying trend.

Two Boys Start Fire; Greenhouse Razed

Powder Drums Pop Like Fiery Torches

By DON VIPOND

Two nine-year-old boys playing with fire turned an ancient wooden boiler house in a Saanich greenhouse complex into a raging ball of flames Friday.

Two firemen were taken to hospital when hit by slivers of flying glass as the white-hot fire burst scores of greenhouse panes. They had minor cuts stitched up and were released.

The large wooden shed at 800 Vernon Ave., just 200 paces from the main firehall, was left a mass of charcoal.

Owned by Frank Wright of 1835 Feltham, its replacement cost was estimated at "several thousand dollars."

Saanich detectives said the boys have admitted lighting papers in the boiler house. Police will consider charges against the youngsters next week.

LEAPING FLAMES

Two youngsters turned in the alarm shortly after 5 p.m. Police blocked off Vernon Avenue as rush-hour traffic plugged Douglas Street while drivers gaped at the leaping flames.

The entire structure was a mass of fire by the time firemen arrived. They had it contained within 30 minutes but were mopping up for another 2½ hours.

Drums of inflammable insecticide in the building presented a freak hazard to the firefighters. Expanding under the intense heat, they popped their bungs and spewed flames like acetylene torches.

One fireman narrowly escaped injury when a drum burst open as he passed it and fired a 15-foot tongue of flame within two feet of him.

So close was the fire to the firehall that some of the hose lines were laid from a hydrant right in front of the station.

"It was the hottest fire I've ever seen in Saanich," said one police officer.

"Ever seen what happens when you throw a cardboard box on a bonfire?" was the way one fireman described it.

He said he had never seen a fire travel so fast. The entire building seemed to burst into flames at the same time.

The boilerhouse was surrounded by greenhouses and it was a combination of the intense heat and gases produced which set the glass panes popping.

Heating pipes were left sagging like licorice sticks in the ruins and rows of plants nearest the blaze were withered and flattened.

Two or three city firemen on their way home from work stopped to lend the 11 Saanich firemen a hand.

"We were very grateful," said an officer this morning.

Injunction Halts Egg Board

Vancouvr Island and mainland small egg producers have obtained an injunction to temporarily prevent formation of an egg marketing board.

The injunction is aimed at seeking recognition for the smaller concerns (under 500 chickens) when a vote is taken on formation of the board.

It was granted on the grounds an order-in-council relating to the setting up of the board was worded in such a manner that all egg producers should be allowed to vote.

However, the returning officer has apparently been instructed that only those with more than 500 head or more shall be given the vote.

The matter will be decided when the two sides appear in court. No date has yet been set for the court appearance.

Earlier this week, Dave Bradbury vice-president of Vancouver Island Egg Producers' Association, charged the proposed marketing board is "flagrantly twisting" its terms of reference to the detriment of the small producer.

PRODUCE PRICE

He said: "The terms of reference of the board are that they can regulate and control the distribution and marketing of eggs.

"This means they can stop the small producer-vendors or tell them to which packaging plant they may take their eggs.

"Instead of getting the retail price for his eggs he will get the producer price."

BURGLARS WORK HARD; TAKE $535 FROM SAFE

Thieves broke into the main office of Page Cleaners at 2929 Douglas overnight, dodging the burglar alarms and stealing $535 from a safe.

The burglars hauled acetylene tanks to the roof of the building and then coolly dragged the safe close enough to hook up a cutting torch before slicing into the safe.

Entering through a skylight they left an office door wired to a burglar alarm untouched, cutting a hole through a wall to get at the safe. It was then dragged to a point where hoses could be connected to the fuel tanks on the roof and the torch used.

WON'T PAY WAGES

Cafe Shutdown Over Holidays

Most Victoria area restaurants will close Labor Day because it will be too expensive to open.

This was stated today by William Webb, president of the local branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association.

Last month, the Board of Industrial Relations issued an order requiring employers to pay their employees for eight statutory holidays a year.

The order takes effect Aug. 1, making Labor Day — Sept. 4 — the first statutory holiday for which the new pay applies.

Mr. Webb said this means if a restaurant opens it must pay employees time and one half plus another day off with pay. If the restaurant closed, it only needed to pay one day's pay.

IMPOSSIBLE TERMS

"The majority of restaurants have decided they can't operate under those conditions," he said.

"The operator staying open is paying the cost from his pocket. It is impossible to operate under those conditions.

"The major ones would be open, and it will be the major ones that will be closing. I don't know what the tourists will do."

Mr. Webb also pointed out the old $1 an hour minimum wage (after three months work) was increased to $1.10 an hour on May 1 and goes to $1.25 an hour on Nov. 1. The three-month step-ups to the minimum rate were abolished.

Restaurateurs will meet in Victoria June 14 to see what can be done.

A new attempt to arrange a meeting with deputy labor minister William Sands, who is chairman of the Board of Industrial Relations, will be made.

When the statutory holiday with pay order was announced, Labor Minister Peterson said "it is a further advance in the board's program to raise labor standards for employees in the province."

Kuper Band Half Way To Expo

Kuper Island Indian Band fund has passed the $5,000 mark.

A total of $510 was raised for the fund Friday night when the Kuper Island Indians, assisted by Indians from the Duncan reserve and four sisters of St. Ann from the school staged a salmon barbecue at the Centennial Caravan location at Chemainus.

Friday morning the fund stood at $3,918.

Now it's over $5,000 with the barbecue donations; $200 from the Nanaimo Legion and between $300 and $400 in donations received at the school.

The band requires between $8,500 and $9,000 for the air fare to Montreal and accommodation and expenses there.

Donations are being accepted at the Indian school, S. J. Willis Junior High School here, The Times business office and any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Hearing to Set Price on Estate

An arbitration hearing will be held July 6 to determine the price Saanich must pay to expropriate the McRae Estate.

The estate, covering about 125 acres, comprises the Cedar Hill Golf Course and surrounding open land.

Lingua Mortua Jam Vivit—Dead Language Comes Alive

Studium linguae Latinae exhilarans est.

Studying Latin is thrilling.

So thinks lively, 24-year-old Anne Kemp.

And 56 of her Grade 8 students at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School agree with her.

For them, the dead language has come alive since last September when principal Horace Dawson initiated the course at the school.

Miss Kemp, top student in the education faculty at University of Victoria last year, intended to teach in senior secondary school.

But Mr. Dawson lured her to S. J. Willis by offering to let her teach Latin and English, her majors at university.

She's glad now she went there.

Not only does she teach Latin; she has also introduced students to the Greek and Russian alphabets in order to give them the feel of an inflected language.

"We cover as much or as little as they are capable of doing," said Miss Kemp. "There is no fixed curriculum and text. I give a minimum number of tests. We discuss whatever comes up."

Working that way, some students already can translate beyond the halfway mark in the Grade 9 Latin text.

Just as important, they enjoy their language studies.

Of the 86 in the class, 56 want to continue with Latin in upper grades. Trouble is, they may not be able to.

In Greater Victoria only Oak Bay and Victoria senior secondary schools offer Latin beyond Grade 10 level. Commented Miss Kemp: "I hate to see children get all fired up and not be allowed to continue."

What makes students "fired up" about a dead language?

Partly it is the understanding about Roman history, religion and myths that accompanies the Latin study that interests them.

Learning Latin also gives students a deeper sense and understanding about English by showing them the Latin roots of many English words in common use.

"But," said Miss Kemp," the big attraction is just the pleasure of studying something entirely different."

With Fashions Created in School Classes

STUDENTS PRESENT STYLE SHOW

There was as much excitement as the opening of a Paris couturier's spring collection — with a little more giggling behind the scenes.

It was the annual students' Festival of Fashion show in Victoria Senior Secondary School, sponsored by the Y's Menettes Club in co-operation with the Greater Victoria School Board.

All the ingredients for a first-run fashion showing were there — color and design from conservative to mod, the tension of competition as 70 young students from schools in the greater Victoria area promenaded around the stage in outfits they had created themselves in home economics classes.

The added pirouette before they left the stage was for judges Mrs. Ursula Redwood, Mrs. Ethel Piedt and Mrs. Ruth Ingram. Outfits had been prejudged for sewing details and workmanship; now all that was left was to see if the girls had fitted their garments well and had chosen designs to complement their figures, coloring and personality.

Excitement mounted as grade 11 and 12 students paraded in everything from evening gowns, modified bikinis and suits to mini-skirts, pant suits and nightgowns.

But the climax came when Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett presented a silver rosebowl, the grand prize, to Joan Alexander of Claremont Senior Secondary School.

The 18-year-old grade 12 student was wearing an exquisitely tailored coat of cloudy blue Munrospun, given added fillip with top stitching at the yoke. Adding the final touch was a trio of fabric-covered buttons at the front closing.

The win was a double one — earlier, she had been presented with first prize in the grade 12 coat and suit category.

First in the grade 11 coat and suit division was Donna Maxwell of Esquimalt Senior Secondary, for her long-jacketed suit in deep blue in double-breasted styling. Second was Val Byer, and third, Nancy Ratcliffe, both of Esquimalt.

Winner in the grade 11 dress category was Doreen Dye, Esquimalt, who was wearing a formal gown of printed orange and brown, topped by an evening coat in the solid orange color. Second was Florence Mayo, Mount View, and third Maxine Boyd, Oak Bay.

Heading the winning list in grade 11 lingerie and sportwear was Lynne Bissell, Oak Bay, in a modified bikini of muted rust, orange and brown, outlined wtih white and topped with a companion beach jacket. Donna Kemp, Mount View, was second, and Marilyn de Frayne, Oak Bay, third.

Runners-up to the grand prize winner in the grade 12 coat and suit competition were Marilyn McCoy, Mount view, and Barbara Allan, Oak Bay.

First in the dress category was Sandy Yuen, Oak Bay, who modelled a short straight-line dress in vivid magenta Thai silk with high stand-away collar and buttons marching to the hemline. Beth Hamilton, Claremont, and Elizabeth Hibberson, Oak Bay, were second and third.

An exquisite peignor set in palest pink Swiss organdy, trimmed with pink satin ribbon, gained first prize in the lingerie and sportswear section for Sharon Duncan, Victoria Secondary. Ann Burnham, Mount View was second and Brenda Evans, Victoria, was third.

Other schools competing were Belmont, Edward Milne and Mount Douglas.

Commenting on the fashions was Helen Beirnes. During the intermission, the guests were entertained with piano duets by the Misses Paulette Howard and Pat McLeman.

Show convener was Mrs. Clifford Joyce and wardrobe coordinators were Mrs. D. E. Hawthorne and Mrs. R. G. Gilchrist. In charge of publicity was Mrs. J. W. C. Arlidge.

Mrs. John Duncan is Y's Menettes president.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Gifts With a Purpose Delight June Brides

By Penny Saver

Wedding month is here again and this means that it's shower season. Guests by the dozens are stymied by the problem of what to give their favorite brides. Everyone knows that it is many a bride's misfortune to be presented with a number of gifts which, after being used once, are quietly stored in a bottom drawer or closet and never seen again. If you're like me you're willing to spend quite a bit of time shopping in hopes that yours won't be a misguided gift.

The other day I came across one store that contained dozens of gift ideas. One of these was an attractive wastebasket and tissue dispenser set. This matching set is made of a durable plastic finished with a cut glass appearance, and comes in beautiful decorator shades of pink, blue, orange, green, deep blue and clear plastic. This pretty and practical gift is priced at $3.33, and is certain to please the young bride.

Kitchen showers are always popular but, here again, it is necessary to make certain that the bride-elect doesn't receive a collection of automatic clove-grinders. (You can imagine what would happen to gifts like these.) One practical gift item is a protective stove top cover made of thick, heat-resistant rubber. These are available in three sizes . . . one foot by two feet, two feet by six inches, and six inches square. The large sizes are suitable for covering stoves, counter-tops, sink areas, and the square pads are good resting spots for scalding pots and pans, or irons. These mats come in pink, turquoise, brown, yellow and white. Priced at $3.49, $2.39, and $1.49 respectively, these are certain to be a much-used gift.

Another gift that will be handy for the bride is a good-sized, but light-weight serving tray. In this shop I found sturdy plastic trays that have an attractive wood-grain finish. These are either oval or circular in shape, and have easy-to-hold handles. Priced at $2.79, this is a gift that will be invaluable for both everyday use and for entertaining too.

If you'd like to know where I shopped for my super shower gifts, give me a call at 382-3131.

Party Whirl Heralds Vows This Evening

Miss Bev Lloyd has been feted with a round of showers preceding her marriage to Donald Sarnshaw tonight.

A yellow rosebud corsage was presented to the honor guest, and carnation corsages to her mother Mrs. K. Lloyd, and the groom-elect's mother Mrs. I. Earnshaw, when the staff of Woodward's stationery department gave a shower at Mrs. R. Cariou's Rowan Street home. Gifts were contained in a gaily decorated grocery cart.

Guests included Mrs. J. Bell, Mrs. P. Adams, Mrs. A. Logan, Mrs. L. Tidball, Mrs. B. Le Clair, Mrs. F. Hammill, Mrs. A. Harkness, Mrs. B. Mohns, Mrs. M. Jones, Mrs. J. Campbell, Mrs. D. Thomson, Mrs. J. Gelling, Mrs. M. Voisard, Mrs. M. Saari, Mrs. F. Boughton, Mrs. D. Parkinson, Mrs. M. Griffin, Mrs. G. Kvamme, Mrs. F. Holmes, Mrs. B. Sinclair, the Misses Chris Read, Jackie Douglas, Nancy Lamb and Donna Cariou.

A miniature train contained the gifts at a shower given by Mrs. M. Russell in her Kingston Street apartment. The bride-elect received a gladioli corsage, and rosebud corsages were presented to mothers of the principals.

Invited guests were Mrs. M. Hodson, Mrs. E. Cairn, Mrs. N. Fleming, Mrs. H. Barr, Mrs. D. Malone, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. L. Moutray, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. D. Cairns, Mrs. R. Fleming, Mrs. W. Russell, and the Misses Mary Russell, Maureen George, and Cathy Moutray.

Ribbon corsages were presented to the honor guest at a shower given by Mrs. W. Stewart in her Kay Street home. Her mother, her grandmother Mrs. M. Hodson, and the groom-elect's mother also received ribbon corsages. Guests included Mrs. E. Cairns, Mrs. J. Mayzes, Mrs. H. Lohr, Mrs. F. Smith, Mrs. W. LaSalle, Mrs. T. Harris, Mrs. A. Thorsen, Mrs. W. White, Mrs. K. Wood, Mrs. W. Mertton, and Mrs. E. Pendray.

A decorated wedding cake topped with miniature figures of a bride and groom held the gifts at a shower given by Mrs. D. Cairns in her Grant Street apartment. The bride-elect received a yellow rosebud corsage, and carnation corsages were presented to mothers of the principals, and the honor guest's grandmother.

Among the guests were Mrs. H. Campbell, Mrs. L. Patterson, Mrs. I. Earnshaw, Mrs. D. Cairns, Mrs. W. Arnold, Mrs. E. Campbell, Mrs. K. Mollgard, Mrs. W. Mertton, Mrs. E. Cairns, Mrs. S. Hunt, and Mrs. J. Campbell.

Make Home in Vancouver Following Wedding Today

Following a honeymoon on the mainland, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Brian James Lamb will be making their home in Vancouver. The bride is the former Barbara Joan Piercy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Burr, 229 Irving Road, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Lamb, 4190 Cedar Hill Road.

Canon J. Rogers officiated at the ceremony in St. Matthias' Church, which was decorated with standard baskets of pink and white gladioli for the wedding this afternoon.

Given in marriage by C. W. Burr, the bride wore a gown of ligoda, fashioned with an empire-line bodice of lace. The same lace trimmed the train which extended from the shoulders. The bodice featured a scalloped neckline. Her four-tier veil misted to shoulder-length from a headpiece of fabric flowers, sparkling with crystals. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white roses and stephanotis.

The bride's attendants were dressed alike in floor-length gowns of deep pink peau d'elegance styled on empire lines. Their headpieces were fashioned of a single flower of the same fabric, studded with seed pearls, and they carried cascade bouquets of white carnations.

Miss Margot Young was maid of honor, Mrs. Bryan Gardner was bridesmatron, and bridesmaids, the bride's twin sisters, were the Misses Debbie and Donna Burr.

Best man was Fred J. Pick and ushering the guests were Russel and Alan Lamb, brothers of the groom.

A three-tier wedding cake decorated the head table at the reception following in Holyrood House. Flower arrangements were en tone with the pink and white theme of the wedding. D. G. MacDonald proposed the toast to his niece.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Lamb chose an ensemble in orchid pink shades, complemented with a hat en tone. A corsage of red roses completed the outfit.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. K. Logan and Stan of Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. S. Waterfield and Doug of Campbell River; Mr. and Mrs. T. Mackenzie and Ian of Duncan; Mr. and Mrs. J. Koster of Wellington.

Clubwomen's News

New Officers — Mrs. Barbara Miskiman was elected president of the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club at the recent annual dinner meeting in the War Amputations Hall. Also elected were Mrs. Kae Fleming, first vice-president; Mrs. Irmgard MacMaster, second; Miss Ella Brett, recording secretary; Mrs. Sally Hamill, treasurer, and Mrs. Carrie McLean, corresponding. Directors are Miss Dorothy Willoughby, Mrs. Mabel Dean, Mrs. E. Mayne, Mrs. Lillian Wright and Mrs. E. Crerar. Mrs. Marguerite Laughlin conducted the election. In her annual report, retiring president Miss Elizabeth Clement urged the formation of an active membership committee to concentrate efforts to attract business and professional women as members.

CONCERNING MINI-SKIRTS

Designers Lowering Boom?

By LYNN BELL

The reign of the mini-skirt is all but over. After several years of queening it over the world fashion scene, the chopped-off skirt is about to become as outdated as stiletto heels.

Rumors circulating in New York, Paris and London point to a skirt length five inches below the knee appearing on the scene by September of this year.

This gives the mini-skirt all of four months to fade gracefully out of the scene before hemlines drop below the knee with the loudest thud in years.

Ready-to-wear designers in the three fashion capitals have already started thinking about mid-calf-length lines, and by the time spring arrives in the northern hemisphere, fashion magazines will be full of models photographed in skirts banging the backs of their calves.

In Paris, Daniel Hechter and Fabrice Delfieu are currently showing spring-summer clothes with skirt lengths already on the downward trend. In London, ready-to-wear firms like Susan Small, Bob Schulz and Simon Ellis are adding their name tags to new-length dresses and rainwear. And Woman's Wear Daily, the fashion trade guide book, has spotted covered-up knees in new ranges on the Continent and in the United States.

One of Britain's leading fashion writers, assessing the life still left in the mini-skirt, comments: "It's just the old pendulum swinging again. Skirts can't go any higher. Not if we're going to go on wearing them at all. And because fashion can't stay put, something has got to give."

She predicts that, while the calf-length skirt will be worn this year by trend-setters, the real mass market impetus will not be felt until 1968.

"By then, all the girls who have been saying mutinously that they will stick to mini-skirts until they are 90 will have quietly knuckled under."

Spectators of the fashion scene, most experienced in the job of trying to "feel" trends, believe that the longer skirt will catch on.

They point out that the fashion climate is right—as it wasn't last year, when Marc Bohan at Dior put a longer-length coat in his autumn collection and those manufacturers who followed his lead found themselves lumbered with coats they couldn't sell.

Older women will welcome being able to cover their knees without looking dowdy, and the young will love it because it will be new after so many seasons of loyalty to the mini-skirt.

Indoor Garden Party

The Women's Parish Guild of St. Mary's Anglican Church proved Friday that you don't need a garden to have a successful garden party.

Members simply moved the out-of-doors inside, creating their own garden inside the parish hall. Huge and fanciful roses formed colorful wall decorations for the indoor garden party, making a vivid backdrop for stalls offering items from baby-wear to home cooked treats.

Brightly-colored streamers were strung between rose-decked pedestals to mark the tea area. The garden "gate" was a huge latticed arch and as guests crowded through for refreshments they were handed tiny rosebuds pins by centennial flower girl, Miss Jean Robertson.

Creating the garden decor was Mrs. Keith Dixon.

On their way to the tea, guests couldn't resist stopping at the various stalls — especially the hat booth. Every type of millinery imaginable, many created especially for this event was on display.

The array of hats, wide-brimmed, high-rising, floral, straw and fabric proved so irresistible to guests that convener Mrs. E. E. Lord and her committee were kept "on the run" most of the afternoon filling orders.

The home cooking and candy stal managed by Mrs. C. W. Duck and Miss N. Macdonald proved just as popular, with guests crowding three and four deep around the counter to buy the taste-tempting treats displayed.

Convening the other stalls were Mrs. H. S. Hughes and Mrs. T. G. Cromack, gifts, aprons and woollens; Mrs. T. S. Whitemore, garden; Mrs. C. H. Bunbury, books. Mrs. C. T. Teasdale made and donated the cake which was raffled.

Mrs. D. McDonald supervised the tea arrangements and acting as hostesses were Mrs. S. Petley-Jones and Miss V. K. French.

Presiding at the head table were Mrs. Hywel Jones and guild president Mrs. G. A. Ewart who had both greeted the guests. Mrs. W. J. Rupka and Mrs. Petley-Jones were in charge of the head table.

Mrs. H. S. Beckton was general convener of the party which was officially opened by Mrs. Carlton Collard, women's guild president of St. George the Martyr Church.

Handling the receipts, which totalled $750, was Mrs. A. H. Bamford.

DEAR ABBY . . .

At 13, Should She Shave Her Legs?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 years old and my mother will not let me shave my legs. It seems every girl at school shaves her legs and some even slip behind their mothers' backs to do it.

I don't want to go against my mother, but I wish she'd let me. The kids at school call me "Square," "Oddball," etc. I pretend I don't care, but I do. And anyway, my knee socks don't go together with all my clothes. So what should I do? — HAIRY.

DEAR HAIRY: If you want to shave your legs because all the other girls do, it's not a good enough reason. If you are really "hairy," ask your mother to take a good look at your legs and to be reasonable.

What a pity that when a girl reaches the age where her legs need shaving, her mother is at the age where she needs glasses.

DEAR ABBY: I have been keeping steady company with a girl who is 24. I am 26 and we have a lot in common. We've talked about getting married but that's about as far as it's gone.

She says you never know a person until you live with them, and she doesn't want to get married until she's SURE it will last. She suggested that either I move in with her, or she move in with me for about 3 months.

That way we can find out for sure how we get along. My folks drive up here to see me every once in a while as they live only 80 miles from me, and I am sure they wouldn't approve of that kind of setup.

Actually, I am not so sure I do myself. In a way it makes sense, but in another way it doesn't. Can you help me straighten out my thinking? FIFTY-FIFTY.

DEAR FIFTY: Tell her you aren't that kind of a boy. If she wants to live with you, she'll have to marry you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a divorced man, 56 years of age who would like to remarry. The trouble is, all the women in my age bracket are either divorcees living on alimony, or widows living on social security.

Before a man can discuss the economic facts of life with a woman, he has to know her pretty well, and this means spending a lot of time with her.

He can't come right out on their first date and ask if her financial security would be forfeited should she remarry, can he? My question: Is there a shortcut to finding out these things about a woman? — STUMPED.

DEAR STUMPED: No. Go ahead and ask her. That would be the acid test. If she has the urge to merge, she'll be glad to talk dollars and sense with you. If not, you can save a lot of precious time, and proceed to the next prospect.

DEAR ABBY: In our town, when you are invited to a party, I am told the hostess expects to be called a day or so later to be thanked.

It seems to me that a sincere "thank you" on departure from the party is sufficient evidence of appreciation.

And if it was a large party, the hostess will have plenty of cleaning up to do on the following day, so why should she be annoyed answering a dozen or more phone calls to accept repeated thanks? What is correct? — PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: When a hostess has gone to considerable effort to entertain, the gracious guest will send a written note repeating his thanks. (It's not necessary, but it's nice.)

There is always a chance that a phone call may be an intrusion, but I think the hostess who would resent being "annoyed" with repeated thanks is in the minority.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "S.O.S. IN SILVER SPRINGS": Sorry, but I don't buy that saying, "As you have made your bed, so must you lie in it."

If you discover that the bed you made is giving you a pain in the back, and it's possible to get out of it and make it over, do so. People who needlessly sleep on "mental" lumps must enjoy the punishment.

International Theme for Tea

The sum of $240 was realized when First United Church Women held a donation tea in the Fellowship Hall recently. The event had an international flavor with guests' tables decorated in the motifs of various countries.

Entertainment was in the same theme. Michael Ward and Lee York played Italian selections on the accordion, the students of Mrs. E. G. Costain performed Scottish dances and French songs were sung by a group directed by J. A. Lavertu. Various folk songs were sung by Miss Mary Bissenden, accompanied by Larry Owens on the guitar.

Chipperfield-Carson Vows

An heirloom lace handkerchief belonging to the groom's grandmother, Mrs. D. Bukin, was "something old" for Maureen Carol Carson when she became the bride of John Ernest Chipperfield in Knox Presbyterian Church. The token was carried inside her Bible.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-skirted gown of corded silk styled with lily point sleeves and a scooped neckline. Her matching petal headpiece held a tiered silk illusion net veil. A beige cymbidium orchid centred her bouquet of stephanotis. Jewelry accent was a pearl necklace, gift of the groom.

Rev. Alan Beaton officiated at the ceremony uniting the daughter of Mrs. F. Rudd, Sooke, and Mr. F. Carson of Lake Cowichan and the son of Mrs. D. Chipperfield, 1071 Tattersal Drive, and the late Mr. Chipperfield.

Baskets of pink and white gladioli decorated the church. The soloist, Mrs. Hugh Wadams, sang the "Lord's Prayer" during the service.

Matching floor-length gowns of rose crystal ice peau de soie, fashioned with bell skirts, were worn by the bride's attendants. They carried cascade bouquets of pink and white gladioli. Mrs. J. Cox was matron of honour, Mrs. K. Bosker was bridesmatron, and Miss Evelyn Strong, bridesmaid.

Best man was John Cox, Port Alberni, and ushering guests were Brian and Cyril Chipperfield, the groom's brothers.

Fred Oakes proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in Holyrood House. The head table was decorated with small pink roses and a tiered wedding cake, made by the bride's mother and decorated by Mrs. R. Robertson.

For travelling on honeymoon to Oregon and California, the new Mrs. Chipperfield chose a mint green and beige wool suit which she accented with bone accessories.

The newlyweds will make their home in the Shoreline Apartments when they return.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

By Nona Damaske

Some Ups and Downs of the Hemline Question

There is more interest, at present, in skirt-length than in any other aspect of fashion.

Damaske

Skirts are now shorter than they have ever been in any period of history and there are occasional rumblings of plummeting hemlines.

The plunging of skirt lengths is a far greater worry to the average woman then the swing to short skirts. For the woman who, over a period of years, carefully builds up a wardrobe of good looking timeless clothes, the prospect of them being suddenly outmoded is frightening.

With the occasional addition of a smart new outfit or an interesting accessory or two, many fashionable women retain the bulk of their wardrobe over a period of many years.

Coping with the rising hemline did not present too great a problem . . . shortening a garment is a relatively simple procedure. Lengthening, on the other hand, can create impossible difficulties. Even a generous hem allowance is not always useful. Some soft fabrics lose their nap completely at the turn of the hem, thus leaving a bare line if the hem is let down.

After a number of cleanings some hard finish fabrics have the hemline so firmly imprinted that it can never be erased. Some wash fabrics which have been exposed to the sunlight will have faded noticeably when compared to the protected under-hem allowance.

Many of you will remember when Christian Dior presented the "New Look" in 1947. This one man was so influential in the world of haute couture that he was able to suddenly put every woman's wardrobe in the "old fashioned" category.

The average woman who was interested in staying reasonably in fashion was faced with a dilemma. She could not discard her whole wardrobe so a number of interesting innovations began to take place.

The two-piece tailored suit which was so popular at that time, began to appear with blouse or slip-on sweater worn over the skirt rather than tucked in. The term over-blouse was born.

Skirt bands and zippers were removed, the skirt was allowed to sit lower on the hips and additional material, matched as closely as possible, was added in yoke fashion to the skirt top. This extra material, which gave the desired added length was covered by the overblouse or sweater.

The good daytime dress which was more than likely full skirted, was often shortened to tunic length and worn with a straight skirt of the correct length in a contrasting fabric.

If the skirt of the dress was slender a tie-around apron-type skirt was recommended. The favorite fabric for this was taffeta. There were any number of articles in newspapers and fashion magazines on methods of lengthening clothes. Making-over was the main topic of conversation when women got together.

The name Christian Dior brought groans of anguish from husbands who naturally blamed him for all the unrest and expense incurred by the women of the family.

For those of us who went through that upsetting wardrobe metamorphose it now seems funny . . . or does it?

Putting aside the high-thigh "mini" which is a young gimmicky fad the ultimate level has been reached as far as shortness is concerned . . . there is nowhere to go but down.

In January 1966 Yves St. Laurent dropped his hemlines and predicted the death knell of "OP" and abstract trends. Marc Bohan of Christian Dior kept one half of his collection above the knee and dropped one half to below the knee. The same year Jacques Heim featured short streetwear but showed mid-calf cocktail and dinner dresses.

In slang terms the longer numbers "aid an egg".

When the movie Dr. Zhivago was being made the long look noises were one again heard from Paris. Several designers showed coats in the Russian Cossack cut . . . well below mid-calf.

These impetuous attemtps to plunge the hemline downward made headlines but as women refused to accept them it became apparent they were not making money.

Today's woman in not ready to return to long skirts and there is not one designer who is influential enough to make this sudden change. When the chips are down it is the consumer who make or breaks a style.

The prediction is that skirt hemlines will flutter and flirt with the kneecap for some time to come.

Mr. Bill Carson travelled from Prince Edward Island to attend the wedding of his sister, Maureen Carol, to John Ernest Chipperfield. Other out-of-town guests included Mrs. Ella Jackson, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. F. Carson of Lake Cowichan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cox of Port Alberni, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Carson of Nanaimo, Mr. and Mrs. R. Fagan, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Yates of Vancouver, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Probyn of Richmond.

Hear Vows

Out-of-town guests for the recent Holt-Hodgson wedding included Mr. and Mrs. G. Kring of Prince George, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Shelford of Wisteria, B.C.; Mrs. E. Dollray of White Rock, Mr. and Mrs. R. Alcombrack of Everett, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. E. Schoening of Penticton, Mr. and Mrs. T. Parsons of Ganges, Mr. and Mrs. D. Veitch of Powell River, and Mrs. E. C. J. Bird, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Nordbrigget, all of Vancouver.

Exquisite Bridal Coat of Lace Tops Dress of Today's Bride

Delicate French cotton lace and nylon tulle formed the dainty bridal coat which topped the street-length dress worn by Charleen Ann McDougall this afternoon, when she became the bride of Gary Stephen McGregor.

The sheath dress was fashioned of powder blue nylon sheer, given added interest by appliques of the same fabric. Her bouffant veil of nylon tulle misted from a coronet headpiece of tulle, highlighted with twin bows.

As a "something old" talisman, the bride wore her great-grandmother's necklace of amethysts and pearls. Red rosebuds and white carnations accented with blue tulle and streamers, formed her bouquet.

Arrangements of gladioli, carnations and iris in pink, blue and white tones decorated St. John's Anglican Church when Canon Grahame Baker heard marriage vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. McDougall, 1243 Judge Place, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McGregor, 1204 Haultain Street. Mr. McDougall gave his daughter in marriage.

As the couple signed the register, choir boy Jay McGowan sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wings of a Dove."

Matching dresses of pink and white lace over pink taffeta were worn by the bride's two attendants. Their headpieces were tiaras sparkling with rhinestones and they carried bouquets of crystal chrysanthemums, highlighted by pink tulle and streamers.

Miss Sharron McDougall was maid of honor for her sisted and Miss Loris Sprinkling was bridesmaid.

Best man was Jack Chan and ushering the guests were the groom's brother David McGregor and Roy Scott.

The head table at the reception following in Holyrood House was decorated in the pink and white color theme of the wedding. Wedding bells topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the table.

The couple will be making their home at 1924 Belmont Avenue, following a honeymoon trip to Portland, Ore. For travelling, the new Mrs. McGregor donned a powder blue sheath dress topped with a tailored coat in navy blue. She chose white accessories and a gardenia corsage to complete the picture.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding included Mrs. Shirley Rogan and Miss Laura Rogan of Sudbury, Ont.; B. Kilvington, Cumberland; Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Thomson of North Surrey, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Prentice and Mrs. Clara Brown of Vancouver.

A Business Built on Customer Confidence and Goodwill

Mrs. Thomson to Head Symphony Committee

Mrs. K. Thomson was elected as president of the Victoria Symphony Society Women's Committee at the group's annual meeting in the King George Terrace home of Mrs. D. Roxburgh.

Also serving on the new executive are Miss Marianne Fraser, vice-president; Miss Bessie Marriott, secretary; Mrs. E. Napper, treasurer.

Standing committee chairmen are Mrs. J. Gillespie, box office; Mrs. P. Boese, receptions; Miss Dorothy Crighton, publicity; Mrs. Kathleen Humphrey and Mrs. J. Fraser, Sunday and Monday program sales; Mrs. Fraser, meeting notices; Miss Charlotte Crawford, membership; Mrs. S. G. Watts, flowers; Mrs. B. S. Gingell, meeting refreshments. Mrs. A. J. T. Laundy was in charge of the nominating committee.

Prior to the business meeting, retiring president Mrs. H. Thirlwall presented Mrs. Gertrude Stocker with a committee ribbon. She has recently been appointed an honorary life member of the committee.

Annual reports were read.

Treasurer Mrs. B. Davenport announced that a cheque for $1,750 had been given to the symphony board at the end of the concert season. Bank balance at the present time, she said, is $460.66.

Convener of the April coffee party, Mrs. N. Isherwood, reported that a profit of $300 had been realized.

Listing tentative box office arrangements for the coming season, Mrs. Gillespie said that June 12 would be the opening date for season ticket sales.

Convener for the Banff School of Fine Arts Ballet presentation at the McPherson Playhouse, Mrs. R. M. Adamson, appealed for assistance in billeting the performers on Aug. 14 and the night of the ballet, Aug. 15. Anyone able to assist with billeting should contact Mrs. Adamson, 1684 Yale Street, at 388-5718.

Other plans discussed were for a Symphony Ball on Sept. 29 in the Empress Hotel to open the new concert season. Appointed convener was Mrs. T. Mayne.

It was announced that the committee would sponsor a performance of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet in the Royal Theatre, Nov. 8.

Classic Gown Of Cloque For Bride

A gown fashioned on empire lines of cloque crepe was worn by Ida Lesley Wardman when she became the bride of Marvin Hugh Sherwood at a recent ceremony in St. Martin-in-the-Fields Church.

A yoke of matelasse highlighted the bodice of the gown. The bride's veil of silk illusion net misted softly from a headpiece of organdy roses starred with pearls, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis.

Pink carnations decorated the church for the ceremony conducted by Archdeacon J. H. Forth, assisted by Rev. B. Cowan. Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wardman, 2899 Colquitz Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sherwood, 4021 Shelbourne Street. Mr. Wardman gave his daughter in marriage. Organist was Cmdr. Fred Fairfull.

Miss Diane Wardman was maid of honor for her sister and bridesmaid was Miss Laura Rickinson. They were dressed alike in gowns of delicate orchid nylon over taffeta. Fashioned on empire lines, the gowns featured floating panels of sheer nylon, and lace appliques at the neck and sleeves. Their headpieces were of fabric violets in orchid tones, highlighted with satin bows, and they carried bouquets of pink carnations and stephanotis.

Douglas Sherwood, brother of the groom was best man, and ushering the guests were Ron MacDonald and Dave Nelson.

At the reception following in the parish hall, Keith Sedgman proposed the toast to his goddaughter. A three-tier wedding cake, flanked with crystal candelabra, centred the head table.

For travelling on honeymoon to Portland, Ore., the bride chose a navy blue dress topped with a coat in navy check. A petal hat in beige tones, and beige accessories completed the ensemble.

When they return, the newlyweds will make their home at 845 Condor Street.

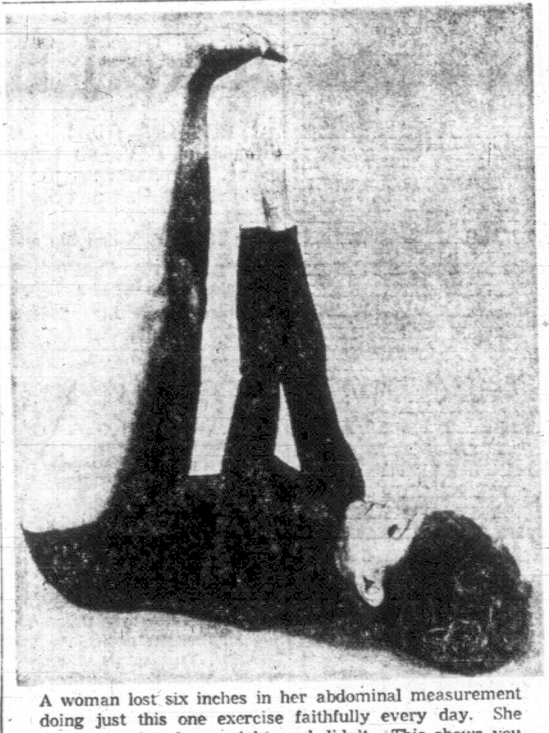
Of Personal Interest

Novel Corsage

A novel corsage of kitchen utensils was given to Mrs. Greg Thorpe, the former Miss Barbara Close, at a recent shower held in the Connaught Road home of Mrs. P. Durrell. Cohostesses Mrs. P. Durrell and Miss Phyllis Durrell presented Mrs. E. Thorpe, the groom's mother, and Mrs. R. Close, the bride's mother with pink carnations en corsage. A luncheon cloth embroidered with the names of guests attending was presented to the new bride. Upon opening her gifts after a treasure hunt, the honored guest was showered with confetti held in a balloon. A pink and white shower cake centred the luncheon table. Guests attending were Mrs. L. McKay, Mrs. M. Curtis, Mrs. R. Ashton, Mrs. N. Watson, the Misses Lori Chesson, Pam Heeley, Judy Goldney, Doreen Palamar, Darlene Wilson, Gail Ellard, Glendda Calver, and Pat Evans

Mainland Guests

Travelling from Vancouver to attend the wedding of Miss Susan Jacqueline Linggard and Mr. John Christopher Davis were Mr. and Mrs. Morley Maxwell and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Penney. Other mainland guests included Mr. J. E. Fitzwater and Miss M. Piller of Kamloops, and Mr. and Mrs. P. Stocker of Coquitlam.



A woman lost six inches in her abdominal measurement doing just this one exercise faithfully every day. She did not need to lose weight, and didn't. This shows you how exercise can redistribute pounds more attractively. Try it!

Lie on the floor on your back with your legs straight and your arms resting on the floor overhead. Raise both legs and both arms at the same time and try to touch your fingertips to your toes or ankles. Slowly return legs and arms to starting position and stretch out. The legs must be straight throughout this exercise and take time for the stretch. Continue, slowly. If this is too strenuous at first raise only one arm and one leg at a time.

MARRIED TODAY IN VANCOUVER

Newlyweds to Honeymoon in Hawaii

Following their wedding in St. Patrick's Church this afternoon, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. John Christopher Davis left on a honeymoon trip to Maui, Hawaii. When they return, the couple will be making their home in Vancouver where the groom-elect will continue post-graduate studies at the University of British Columbia.

The bride, the former Susan Jacqueline Linggard, is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. John Hollis Linggard, 240 Douglas Street. The groom is the son of Mrs. Joan Davis, 2537 Estevan Avenue. Arrangements of white flowers and greenery decorated the church for the double-ring service conducted by Fr. A. E. Leonard.

Mrs. Gill was organist and Capt. Linggard gave his daughter in marriage.

Delicate Alencon lace trimmed the bride's gown of peau d'ange which was fashioned with a full chapel train. The neckline was in Sabrina style. Her mantilla veil was of pure silk illusion net and she carried a cascade bouquet of gladioli and greenery.

Matching gowns of Mediterranean blue nylon over organza, fashioned on empire lines, were worn by matron of honor Mrs. R. Linggard and bridesmaid Miss Susan McCooey. Their net and nylon headpieces matched their gowns and they carried cascade bouquets of white carnations.

John Case was best man and ushering guests were the bride's brother Cpl. Michael J. Linggard, RCMP, George Murdoch and Ronald Lowsley.

White roses topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table at the reception following in the Empress Hotel Duke of Kent Room. Morley Maxwell proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Davis donned a linen dress in creamy white shade which was echoed on the lapels of her topping avacado green coat.

Whether you're in New Zealand or Canada, skilled handicrafts demand respect. Here, the eight New Zealand visitors admire some of the work created by members of the Colwood Women's Institute. Left to right, they are Mrs. Lily Harrison, Mrs. Louisa Harrison, Mrs. Frank Brown, Mrs. Ruth Plunkett, Mrs. C. R. Coutts, Mrs. Cotton Rowley, Mrs. Douglas Wards and Mrs. Louie McIntosh.

Here From New Zealand . . . . . . On Seven-Week Tour

VISITORS FROM 'DOWN UNDER'

By PAT DUFOUR

Eight women dropped in from "down under," Friday, when the Colwood Women's Institute held a luncheon in the Colwood Community Hall.

The visitors, all members of the Women's Division of the Federation's Farmers of New Zealand, were celebrating another event. Friday marked the 40th anniversary of their division.

The women, who come mostly from the Otago and Southland provinces, are part of a 36-women party that has saved its "mad money" in order to enjoy a seven-week tour of Canada, the United States, Fiji and Hawaii.

They arrived in Los Angeles three days ago and Mrs. Cotton Rowley, leader of the group, reports that they feel more comfortable here than anywhere else. "The trees and the greenery make us feel right at home."

Mrs. Rowley's husband and one of their sons run their 4,000-acre sheep run. The reason she has so much time to give to the division is, "I have nothing to do but stay at home by myself all day. The men are away, I don't even have to cook for them."

When she tells of some of the women's division projects, it seems reasonable to assume that a great deal of time must be donated by some of its members.

The division has 27,000 members and by arranging raffles, selling cakes, catering at various sports functions and raising money in any way they can, the members have achieved results that would stagger many a service club.

They've established a fund, from which the interest is used to provide housekeeping services for members who are ill or in need of help.

The organization has four rest homes at Auckland, Nelson, Wellington and Waimate which they own and operate. The homes are open to the general public at ruling rates and members can enjoy a holiday in them at prices guaranteed not to hurt even the most fragile of household budgets.

For those who love the tang of sea air, the division has bought six sea cottages.

One of the group's most realistic progams is concerned with the education of children who are brought up in isolated areas. The division provides bursaries that cover the cost of four years in a boarding school, enabling the youngster to finish high school.

Pat and Cotton Rowley have two other children, a married son and a daughter, Lynne, who is a Karitane nurse. Noticing my confusion, Mrs. Rowley explained that a Karitane nurse in one who specializes in baby care for children from birth to five years of age, concentrating on the needs of the handicapped or mentally retarded.

Training entails a two-year course and the name, Karitane, was chosen by Sir Truby King, the famous London doctor, who initiated the movement. When he lived in New Zealand, he stayed at Karitane Beach.

When the visitors arrive back in New Zealand on July 1, they will go back with strong ties binding themselves to their counterparts in Canada.

If they have their way, those ties will be almost unbreakable in the near future. They're already planning activities designed to please British Columbian WI members when some of them return Friday's visit.

BICKELL-HARDWICK

Honeymoon Trip East For Newlywed Couple

Following their recent marriage, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Harold Clifton Bickell left on a honeymoon trip to Expo 67 and various points in Eastern Canada and the United States.

The bride, the former Violet Anne Hardwick, 171 Homer Road, is the daughter of Mrs. Anne Dobney, San Diego, Calif., and the late Arthur Dobney. The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bickell. The wedding service took place quietly in the Legislative Buildings.

Dainty lace, trimmed with satin, formed the bodice of the bride's pink crepe afternoon dress. Her model hat was in pink and white shades and her accessories followed the same color theme. Completing the picture was a corsage of white orchids.

WHITE AND BLUE

A floral silk dress in blue and pink tones was worn by matron of honor Mrs. Elsie McFadyen. Her accessories were en tone and she wore a pink carnation corsage.

Mrs. Robert Kay and Mrs. John D. Sutton were bridesmatrons for their mother in dresses of white and blue respectively. Accessories were en tone and their corsages of white carnations.

The groom's brother, Leslie Bickell, was best man. Ushering the guests at the reception, following in the Carnegie Crescent home of Mr. and Mrs. Kay, was James Zwinger.

The pink and white theme of the wedding was continued in the decorations at the reception. A silver vase of rosebuds topped the two-tier wedding cake which centred the lace-covered refreshment table. King Barrett proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Bickell donned a white silk suit which she complemented with pink accessories and orchids en corsage.

The couple will be making their home at 127 Wellington Avenue.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Bickell, Mrs. Lorna Buschler and Mr. Donald Buschler, all of Seattle, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack McFadyen of Vancouver.

Hear Vows

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding of Miss Lorraine Jean Patterson and Mr. Robert Roch Lanthier included Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomson of Courtenay, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. David Nichol and Miss Phyllis Arnold, of Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Patterson, Susan, Norman and Gail of Port Coquitlam; Mr. and Mrs. Barry Patterson of Yellow Point, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Terry of Port Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Patterson of Burnaby, Mr. and Mrs. R. Robillard, Mrs. W. Fortier and Diane of Seattle, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Whittaker of Cobble Hill.

63rd Anniversary

Several close friends called on Mr. and Mrs. J. G. MacFarlane, 1767 St. Ann Street, on Thursday to help the well-known couple celebrate their 63rd wedding anniversary.

Guest Speaker—An outline of the fire and safety program at St. Joseph's Hospital was given by security officer J. Coates when he spoke at the recent meeting of the hospital's Ladies' Auxiliary. Discussing the program of continuing staff education, he pointed out that explanation, visual aids and practical demonstrations are used. The hospital maintenance staff has inspections on a continuing basis, staff members are constantly alert for possible fire hazards and the Victoria fire department frequently does thorough inspections, he said. Mr. Coates spoke of the fire control procedures and the fire and safety committee. Mrs. W. Rogers presided at the meeting. Appointed co-conveners for the fall bazaar were Mrs. Thomas Atkinson and Mrs. Marie Adkisson.

NEW COOKING FEATURE

Beginning Monday, the Times' women's pages will be carrying a new feature, "Cooking Can Be Fun" by Mary Moore. This well-known food expert has a column appearing in 15 other dailies across Canada. Mrs. Moore lives in Hamilton but has family ties here. Her son-in-law, Lt.-Col. H. C. Pitts, is the commanding officer at Work Point Barracks. He and Mrs. Moore's daughter, Marianne, have four children. Mrs. Moore tests all her own recipes and will answer your queries if you write to: Mary Moore, Food Columnist, 32 Churchill, Hamilton, and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. Monday's column will feature a recipe for Atlantic clam chowder which she discovered at Expo 67.

ARCHER-BAILEY

Dainty Handkerchief Is Token for Bride

A handkerchief of dainty lace fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Jean Margaret Bailey when she became the bride of John Stanhope Archer recently. The talisman belonged to her great-aunt Mrs. J. McKibbon.

The bride's exquisite gown of slipper satin, which she had designed and made herself, was fashioned on empire lines. The fitted bodice featured a softly rounded neckline and short sleeves, and the skirt was in sheath style. A single Dior rose held her full-length veil of delicate Chantilly lace. Red and white roses and stephanotis formed her cascade bouquet.

Arrangements of calla lilies, dogwood and broom with baskets of multi-colored tulips decorated Metropolitan United Church when Rev. E. Laura Butler heard marriage vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold S. Bailey, 2214 McNeill Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Archer of Russell, Man. Mr. Bailey gave his daughter in marriage.

Prior to the service, John Dunbar sang "The Lord's Prayer," and as the couple signed the register, "I Love You."

Miss Effie-Jane Bailey was her sister's only attendant in a gown of sari-silk, sent from New Delhi, India, by another sister, Christine. The gown, highlighted with a three-quarter-length overskirt draped from the shoulders, was in shades of sunset and salmon pink. Her headpiece was a tiara shimmering with rhinestones and she carried a cascade bouquet of white camellias and stephanotis.

Best man was Bert Ellis and ushering guests were Roy Christie and Paul Willing.

Pink rosebuds topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table at the reception following in Pendray Hall. Mrs. J. McConachy arranged the dogwood, broom and tulips which decorated the hall. Stan Johnson proposed the toast to the bride, and telegrams were read, including one from the bride's sister, Christine, from Rome. Serviteurs were Mrs. John Watson, Mrs. A. S. McNeil, Mrs. McConachy and Mrs. R. Spicer.

For travelling on honeymoon to Banff and Jasper, the new Mrs. Archer donned a two-piece outfit in aqua tone. Her hat of Italian straw was en tone and she complemented the outfit with black accessories and rosebuds en corsage.

ROUNDUP OF SERVICES

First-Aiders, Reservists Parade to Church Sunday

Two church parades will be held Sunday.

Members of St. John Ambulance Brigade will attend the 11 a.m. service at St. Matthias Church, 500 Richmond Road.

At the same time, members of the naval reserve unit, HMCS Malahat will attend the service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Bruce J. Molloy, associate minister at St. Andrew's, is chaplain of the unit.

Cmdr. W. Walker, CD, RCNR, will read the lesson, wqile Dr. J. L. W. McLean will preach the sermon. His subject will be "Stewards of Life."

Next week four Victorians will leave for Ottawa to attend the 93rd general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

They are Rev. A. G. Faraday, command chaplain, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt; Rev. A. M. Beaton, Knox Presbyterian Church; Frank Richardson, Knox Presbyterian Church, Sooke; and J. R. McKibben, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Among several reports to be presented at the assembly is one dealing with the abolition of capital punishment.

The reports of the General Board of Missions and the Board of Christian Education will also be of interest. They will indicate the course of direction the church will take in the next few years.

A Salvation Army summer hymn sing service will start Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at Centennial Square.

The services will be held on alternate Sunday evenings in June and one each Sunday evening in July and August.

A panel discussion for young people will be held at the morning service of the Unitarian Church of Victoria.

The theme is "Great Expectations" and will involve such subjects as education, politics and morality.

The panel will consist of Alice Munro and John Steele, members of the adult congregation, and Sarah Harvey and Gerry Silver, members of the Church Liberal Religious Youth Group.

Moderator will be Laura Mair.

At the morning service of First United Church, Rev. Robert J. D. Morris will speak on "They had been with Jesus."

Rev. Marvin G. Fowler will preach at the evening service. His sermon is entitled "Partakers of the Divine Nature.

At Emmanuel and Stevenson Memorial Baptist Churches, Rev. Norman K. Archer will start a new series of sermons entitled "A Relevant Gospel."

The topic Sunday will be "The Modern World," an analysis of the present world situation and it's effects on Christians.

Mr. Archer at Emmanuel Church on Sunday evening will continue the series of sermons on "Elijah" and will discuss the topic, "How Conscience Works."

Following the service, teenagers will be invited to the church lounge to discuss the sermon.

Anthems by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Otto Niedermann will include "The Creation (Richter) and "Lord for Thy Tender Mercies (Farrant).

Protestant church schools in the United States are increasing in numbers.

This observation was made by Ella Bone, principal of the Christian Elementary School of Victoria, during a discussion Monday on the place of Christian teaching in today's secular education systems.

Other speakers were Rev. E. B. Seymour, Free Methodist Church, and L. Stellingwerf, Calvin Christian Elementary School.

The discussion took place at an open meeting held at the Christian Elementary School.

Miss Bone said there are 5,700 Protestant church schools in the U.S. with over 500,000 pupils.

She said Christian schools are fully staffed establishments, teaching an approved curriculum and meeting department of education standards.

They differ from the public schools in the prominence they give to religious teachings.

A meeting of the British Israel World Federation, Victoria branch, will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Dominion Hotel.

Speaker will be Mrs. Mabel Hamilton of Parksville. She will speak on "Great, was the company."

At Central Baptist Church, Rev. E. V. Apps will preach at the morning service on the "Goodness of God."

At the 7 p.m. service he will speak on "How to worship God."

Mr. Apps is the pastor of the First Baptist Church, North Vancouver. He is also superintendent of Clarendon Court, the Senior Citizens Home in Vancouver sponsored by the Convention of Regular Baptist Churches of B.C.

On Wednesday evening at the mid-week prayer meeting, Dr. J. B. Rowell will speak on "Christ's return—how soon?"

Canon C. H. Butler, a John Albert Hall lecturer, will preach the sermon at the morning service of Christ Church Cathedral.

At the service, Christopher Hind will be admitted as server in the Cathedral Servers' Guild.

WEEK OF MUSIC, study and discussion sponsored by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Victoria for interested persons from all over the Island and lower mainland is planned this week by Sister Mary Clare (left) of St. Clare's Monastery and Mrs. J. P. Horgan of East Sooke, a Liturgical Week publicity committee member. Big event opens in St. Ann's Academy at end of July.

CLOSE TIES URGED BUT NOT MERGER

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Southern Baptists were urged today to increase their co-operation with other faiths short of actual union with them.

J. D. Grey, a New Orleans minister and a past president of the Southern Baptist convention, said Southern Baptists often have sought the help of other denominations in matters of temperance, law enforcement, social justice and governmental corruption.

"We need them and they need us," Grey said.

"We can no longer be little isolated islands in the great ocean of mankind. We cannot, we must not, draw up our Pharisaical robes about us and remain aloof from other Christians and men of good will," he said.

Grey said he believed in the true meaning of ecumenism, which is "worldwide, universal." But some, he said, think it means "organic union—a world church."

"Basically, it is not a bad word. It is made bad only by its misuse and improper application."

AMONG new princes of the Roman Catholic church is John Cardinal Cody, head of the archdiocese of Chicago.

Nuns Leave Convent In Experiment

SHREVEPORT, La (AP) — Twenty nuns of the Roman Catholic order of Daughters of the Cross are leaving their Shreveport convent to begin an experimental religious community in Wisconsin.

"What we are doing has the stamp of approval of the church," Sister Mary Michael, a spokesman for the nuns, said.

"We will have a commitment to live a religious life but we feel we will be more effective in this unstructured type of life."

She said they would wear modern dress and use their legal names. They will live in groups of five or more in Milwaukee apartments and will divide their earnings among the group. No financial support will be provided by the Roman Catholic Church.

Family Picnic To Cap Service

A family picnic at Camp Pringle, Shawnigan Lake, will cap Family Day-Promotion Sunday services at Garden City United Church.

All members of the Sunday school departments will attend church for year-end ceremonies and at 2 p.m., members of the congregation will meet at the church for the drive to Shawnigan.

At the 11:15 a.m. service at Wilkinson Road United Church, Rev. H. R. Whitmore will speak on God's Challenge. The anthem will be Love Devine.

Crime Crackdown Asked by Faiths

BOSTON (UPI) — A division of the National Council of Churches today called for a crackdown on crime, emphasizing the "respectable crime of the affluent" as well as crime in the streets and organized crime.

The NCC's Christian life and mission division proposed a resolution which urged a change in present morality "which ignores, condones and accepts organized crime."

"Rather than concentrating most of our efforts against the poor," the resolution read, in part, "we should invest an equal interest in the enforcement of laws covering the 'respectable crime' of the affluent, which may be even more extensive and damaging to the social fabric of our nation."

RESOLUTION

The resolution was presented by the division chairman, the Rev. Dr. Truman B. Douglass, to the general board of the NCC during the final day of a two-day spring policy meeting. The NCC is comprised of 250 representatives from 34 Protestant, Anglican and Eastern Orthodox communions with a membership of 40 million persons.

The Rev. Dr. Douglass said organized crime — with roots in prostitution, gambling, narcotics, smuggling, loan sharking, blackmail and extortion — "has been branching into more respectable businesses." It now influences "many sectors of local government and law enforcement," he added.

"It will require close co-operation and vigorous action by federal, state and local governments to combat it."

CRIME IN STREETS

The NCC official, who heads the board of homeland missions of the United Church of Christ, said he was "apprehensive" that the nation's anger about crime would be directed only to crime in the streets "and in so doing divert attention from other destructive and pervasive offenses against society — organized crime and 'white collar crime'."

The remedy for crime in the street "is not simply more rigorous enforcement or stricter laws by more policemen but the elimination of the frustration and indignities caused by poverty, unemployment and slum conditions which breed this type of crime," he said.

HALF-WAY HOUSES

The resolution also favored legislation to "severely limit" wire-tapping or electronic surveillance, opposed "stop and frisk" laws and urged churches to accept a larger share of responsibility in the task of rehabilitation through such means as the establishment of more "half-way houses."

In Thursday's session, the general board of the NCC urged the United Nations to intervene to head off armed conflict in the Middle East, called for an end to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam and unanimously adopted a resolution seeking "justice" in the cases of Rep.-elect Adam Clayton Powell, D—N.Y., and Sen. Thomas Dodd, D—Conn.

500 Meet In Kingston For Congress

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — More than 500 men and women from across Canada are meeting here for the 1967 congress of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

The congress is party of the church's program for Centennial Year.

Outstanding leaders attending include Dr. Hans-Ruedi Weber of the Ecumenical Institute near Geneva, Rev. Harold Englund of First Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, Calif., Rev. Philip Potter, director of world mission and evangelism for the World Council of Churches, and Prof. Joseph C. McLelland of McGill University, Montreal.

The congress theme is man in God's World.

The congress precedes the 93rd general assembly of the general assembly.

Presbyteries have nominated Rev. Everett H. Bean of Sydney, N.S., clerk of the synod of the Atlantic provinces, Rev. John Logan-Vencta, minister of St. Giles' Church, Ottawa, and Rev. A. Lorne Mackay, minister of Central Church, Hamilton, Ont.

Roy Watson St. Aiden's Soloist

Soloist at St. Aidan's Church on Sunday will be Roy Watson who will sing "The living God" by O'Hara.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. Vera Barclay will sing the anthem "The Greatest of These is Love" by Bitgood, with Marjorie Sturgeon as soloist.

Rev. A. G. MacLeod will speak on the Tenth Commandment.

Evening services have been cancelled until September.

And a Magic Fiat Dismantles Itself

By DICK PURSER
Special to The Times

MONTREAL — Today's "Day at Expo" tour covers four of the major international pavilions at Expo 67, plus a number of added attractions.

It begins with arrival at the Ile Notre Dame Expo Express station by 10 a.m., which means reaching the entrances to the Expo site about half an hour earlier. Visitors should brief themselves on transportation by reading the $1.00 official guide to Expo 67, on sale across the country, and should carry a small map with them. The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce map is most convenient for on site use, but the larger scale Esso map is better for advance planning. Both are free and are better than the $1.00 "official" map sold on the site.

Leaving the station by the northernmost exit ramp, the visitor will see to the right an upsweeping white roof bearing an apparently unfinished golden globe and other pieces of contemporary art.

WORK OF ART

This is the Italian pavilion, first goal of the day. It is one of the most beautiful at Expo in terms of interior design — a work of art designed to display other works of art.

The grotto or catacomb-like arrangement perfectly sets off the exhibits of aspects of Italian art and culture. Back-lighted transparencies of art reproductions are prominent in the concept. Passage between the various exhibit sections is through a large dungeon whose walls are transformed by ever-changing images of abstract light and color. Modern art and industry are not ignored elsewhere; there is a small gallery of contemporary Italian art, and a model of the latest Fiat which periodically dismantles itself so viewers can see its innards.

British Pavilion Really 'With It' . . . A Ripping Good Show!

There is a rock-sculptured indoor-outdoor bar, whose espresso machine may prove more attractive than its other offerings at this hour of the morning.

Allowing about half an hour for Italy, the visitor moves across the lagoon bridge outside the pavilion entrance to the Theme Pavilion, "Man the Producer."

This appears to be a mass of rusty steelwork supporting a number of massive flat tetrahedrons as facades.

But hidden in the vastness of this odd structure are several enclosures housing an astounding array of exhibits — an assembly line, energy conversion processes, a capsule cinematic history of communications so cleverly done that language is superfluous, a multi-storey machine that makes color television sets by itself, air traffic control, lasers, precision measurement.

Presentation varies from straight realism to total involvement. The net effect is overwhelming.

The only drawback is that the structure's design is so complex; despite direction arrows, visitors will rarely know where they have come from, where they are going, or where they are in relation to anyplace else. But by some miracle, hostesses manage to keep the traffic flowing in a direction that, in an hour or so, leads to the exit.

To the immediate south of "Man the Provider" is a sprawling structure of plastic skin suspended below a steel mesh hanging in waves from eight irregularly placed masts.

This serves as a cover from the German pavilion, which is worth another half hour. While the pavilion's design is striking, too many of the exhibits are obvious — just lumps of machinery sitting on the floor.

After a tour of the pavilion, which suffers further from a lack of focal point or of a clear path of movement, it should be about 12:15 p.m. and lunch time. The atmosphere improves considerably in the pleasant and unpretentious restaurant and beer-and-sausage parlor down by the lagoon under the pavilion. This is a popular and moderate-priced establishment; queues are frequent. German entrees begin at $1.70, with carafe wines and German beers about 80 cents. An interesting special drink is Berliner Weiss mit schuss ($1.10); a light beer spiked with raspberry juice.

JOIN THE QUEUE

After lunch it is time to join the queue — there almost always is one — for the popular British pavilion, which is easily spotted by the three-dimensional Union Jack atop its white tower.

The grandly stark building houses some of the most "with it" exhibits at Expo. The entrance itself is a superbly imaginative psychedelic experience — a gripping combination of rock, water, light, sound and color that leaves the visitor ready to accept almost anything that follows.

What follows is a wonderfully light-hearted look at Britain by Britons; the pavilion is filled with humorous touches and is up to the minute in every way. A visit takes at least an hour.

Moving west from the British Pavilion, the visitor passes a services area of boutiques and snack bars, and turns right in front of the great bulk of the French Pavilion to cross the lagoon. On the left is the Haitian Pavilion — "Terre du Soleil," or Land of the Sun, and on the right is the Yugoslav Pavilion. The former was notable at the time of writing for its charming bar, whose outdoor section should prove popular in the summer heat. (All the rum-producing countries are counting on good sales at Expo.) Opening of Haiti's exhibit area was delayed by financial problems.

FOR SITTERS

The Yugoslav pavilion is designed for sitters, who can plunk themselves in the centre of the room and ogle the enlarged slides of Yogoslavia's scenic and historic wonders.

Next door to Haiti is the attractively designed little Monaco Pavilion, which has little to offer but a short film of Rainier and Grace living as though still in the 1890s. Across the way are the tiny, conical Mauritious Pavilion and the Jamaica Pavilion, which is really nothing but a bar — but a truly colorful and indigenous one, and justifiably popular.

None of these pavilions requires much visiting time, and the visitor should limit his selection and browsing time to reach the Christain Pavilion by 3.30 p.m.

BITING DISPLAY

This is the first building to the right across the lagoon bridge between Jamaica and Mauritious. The Christian Pavilion is already notorious for its absence of references to Christianity.

The pavilion offers instead a biting display of the troubles of the world, of man's inhumanity to man. A series of often brutal pictures, including the famous one of a slum fence scrawled with New York's favorite obscenity, lead to a gruelling film summarizing the still greater obscenities of our century.

There is nothing relaxing about the Christian Pavilion, and the place to go now for solace is the UN Pavilion immediately to the west.

Only philatelists seeking UN stamps need go up the ramp to the main entrance; the attraction here is in the film theatre below, reached by an unlabelled downward ramp just to the right of the apparent main entrance. It should be reached before 4 p.m.

INSPIRING

The film, "To Be Alive," was produced by Johnson Wax for a UN group. It is heartwarming and inspiring, an effective antidote to the cathartic Christian offering. Aside from being a good film, it is, like most major film presentations at Expo, a study in advanced cinema technique.

Now comes some light entertainment in the Trinidad, Tobago and Grenada Pavilion, reached by retracing one's steps across the lagoon bridge and turning left in front of the Mauritius Pavilion, heading toward the Expo Express station where the day began. The pavilion is the last on the left before the station, and its small display of old and new Trinidad art is a riot of color.

The route through the exhibits leads into another popular outdoor rum bar, where one may dally while waiting to line up for the 5 p.m. Calypso Carnival show in the theatre upstairs.

MOST INVOLVED

The show over, the visitor wanders through the services area (shops, snack bars, etc.) and across the lagoon to the previously bypassed French Pavilion. Except for the Canadian Pavilion, this is by far the biggest and most involved at Expo.

A visit requires a good two hours, including five minutes or so for the dizzying little "Panorama" Theatre showing of the tidal power project at St. Malo (in English on the hour and half-hour, in French on the quarter and three-quarter hour), and six minutes for the every hour on the hour light and electronic sound spectacular in the centre well, created by Iannis Xenakis. A loudspeaker warns visitors to head for the nearest balcony overlooking the well.

The centre well makes the pavilion easy to tour, despite its complexity. The visitor should simply head straight for the roof, going most of the way by escaltor, to view the surrealistic roof garden created by Nikidde Saint-Phalle and Jean Tinguely, as well as the panorama of Expo and Montreal. He then works his way down, floor by floor, circling each. The exhibits are much too numerous to describe, but the visitor is warned especially not to miss the Franco-Canadian friendship exhibit, labelled "L'Amitie Franco-Canadienne" in French. It is hidden on the gallery reached by a stairway cleverly concealed behind a tapestry in the sixth-floor art gallery, and contains an irreplaceable collection of artifacts of New France; old maps, drawings, letters, etc.

$10 DINNER

By 8 p.m., the weary visitor should have about reached the lagoon floor, where the Restaurant "La Concorde" is located. Here is the chance to experience French haute cuisine. The restaurant is run by M. Raymond Oliver, owner of Le Grand Vefour of Paris, one of France's twelve top restaurants.

Reservations for dinner should be made in advance by telephoning 397-6953. Dinner is a set price of $10, plus beverages. The same restaurant also offers a $6 luncheon (reservations not required), and an adjacent brasserie run by the same firm has meals all day down to $4.

FUN CENTRE at Expo is the British pavilion which always seems to be busy according to one writer's view of a day at the world's fair. (See story at left.)

Caravaner Speaks Here Sunday Night

Miss F. H. Eva Hasell, who many years ago founded the Canadian Sunday School Caravan Mission, will speak about her work and show slides at St. Luke's, Cedar Hill, Sunday at 8:45 p.m.

These vans operate during the summer months in many areas of Canada. Each has a driver and a teacher. They travel from place to place conducting vacation Bible schools, linking up families with the Sunday School by Post, handing over prospective confirmation candidates to the local clergy, and ministering in a variety of ways to many lonely and isolated people. Many of the workers come out each year from Britain and give their services on a board and lodging and pocket money basis, other workers are recruited locally.

Miss Hasell has received an M.B.E. for her services, and in 1965 had a Doctorate of Divinity conferred on her by the University of Emmanuel and St. Chad's College, Saskatoon.

God Was Their Rock

God the Only Cause and Creator is the subject of the Bible Lesson to be read in all Christian Science churches this Sunday. The responsive reading is from Psalm 78, and includes this verse: "And they remembered that God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer."

VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

Decade of Art Easily Digested In One Paperback

By TONY EMERY

I am always meeting people in galleries who pounce on me and demand to be given an "explanation" of some contemporary work of art. It is usually made clear that the explanation should be couched in words of one syllable and last no longer than five minutes, which is rather a tall order, and it doesn't take long to discover that the person who wants the short course in contemporary art is not really prepared to cope with the explanation if you were to give it. It would be like trying to "explain" the music of Cage of Stockhausen to someone who has never tried to listen to anything more demanding than Sullivan, Sousa or Johann Strauss.

Emery

A much more rewarding questioner is the one who reveals a fair knowledge of the history of art up to about 1906 and a deep love of some particular painter or school of painting, but who has gradually lost touch with and sympathy for the movements of the last generation or so.

For many of these there is nothing outlandish about Picasso: they can cope with any artist who uses the traditional means even when the end product is considerably distorted: usually it is the work of a Rauschenberg or a Jasper Johns or an Ad Reihardt that they find most baffling and unrewarding.

For the first category one can only suggest that if they are genuinely interested in knowing why certain artists do thus and not otherwise they try to begin at the beginning with a course of reading supplemented by lectures and regular visits to galleries over a period of years.

Nobody would claim to know something about ice hockey unless they had been attending games or watching regularly on television for at least a season, surely, so why should anyone suppose that a knowledge of art can be acquired any more rapidly?

The second group are much easier to counsel, because they already have the foundation of familiarity with painting and sculpture, and with the language of the arts. It only remains to put them somehow in touch with the arguments, discussions, justifications, explanations and manifestoes that have been prompted by the more recent art movements. Until now the difficulty has been that the best of these writings have been scattered over a host of magazines and periodicals.

Unless one regularly reads the art reviews it is easy to miss statements that are both important and helpful to an appreciation of the more "difficult" artists. (On the other hand it must be said that in order to get to these few gems one has to wade through morasses of pretentious intellectual garbage.)

Now however a great deal of the strain on your eyesight and delicate stomach has been removed by the editorial efforts of Gregory Battcock, who has gathered together in one paperback some of the best essays on the art of the last decade. The book is called The New Art (A Dutton paperback original, $2.10 in Canada) and it is worth the price — high as I think that is for a paperback — for the essay by Leo Steinberg on "Contemporary Art and the Plight of Its Public."

This is the most succinct statement I have ever read of the theme that is constantly being chewed and worried in editorials and magazine features, conferences and symposia. Steinberg really says all that there is to be said on the topic in less than 20 lucid and well-written pages.

In addition there is Alloway on Op. Art, an oracular statement by Marcel Duchamp, John Cage on his friend Jasper Johns, a large chunk of gnomic utterance by Ad Reinhardt, and characteristically intelligent and penetrating essays by Clement Greenberg and Dore Ashton, plus a dozen others.

Reading this collection of essays will not necessarily convert you into a lifelong admirer of Andy Warhol but it should acquaint you with some of the sensible things that can be said in vindication of the newer manifestations in art, and it should also bring a number of names to your notice which, regardless of whether you like their works or not, are names of importance to the young artists today.

Trying to detect the fallacies in the arguments contained in these essays can only serve to clarify your own ideas on art in general and the work of the last five years in particular. I recommend it unreservedly to you.

Missionary Group Re-Elects Leader

TORONTO (CP)—Miss E. L. McClelland of Toronto has been re-elected president of the Women's Missionary Society, western division, of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Election results were announced today at the WMS annual meeting. About 70 delegates representing societies from British Columbia to eastern Quebec attended the meeting.

AND THEREBY HANGS A TAIL, ETC.

LONDON (Reuters)—Fred, the tortoise star of a British children's television show, has been unmasked.

Fred is really Fredericka and the BBC said Friday it would never have found out except for the eagle eye of a young girl viewer.

Tessa Knighton wrote the BBC, saying that Fred had a tail and only female tortoises have tails.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends, relatives and neighbors who gave their kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings in our bereavement. A special note of thanks to Dr. G. Simpson, Miss E. Mackie, Dr. McKenzie, Can. Legion L.A. Branch No. 7 the staff of Sand's and Rev. Canon G. B. Baker for his comforting words.

No stain was on her little heart
Sin had not entered there
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair
She was too pure for this cold earth
Too beautiful to stay
And so God's holy angel bore
Our darling one away.

—Maud, Erle and Jo-Anne Graham, Mrs. Maud Towers.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the expressions of sympathy received in the loss of a beloved wife and mother—G. C. Vessey and families.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BRANDON — In loving memory of a beloved husband and father John Brandon who passed away June 4, 1964.

A million times I've needed you
A million times I've cried
If love could have saved you
You never would have died.
It broke my heart to lose you
But you did not go alone
For part of me went with you
The day God called you home.

—Your loving wife Helen, daughters, Sandra Mills, Roberta and wee son John.

CHEKWECH — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Louis Stephen Chekwech, who passed away June 4, 1958.

Sweet memories will linger forever,
Time cannot change them it's true
Years that may come cannot sever
Our loving remembrance of you.

—Remembered always by wife Helen and family.

MATHIESON — In loving memory of my dear mother, Gertrude Caroline Mathieson, late residence 1420 Beach Drive, Victoria, B.C., who passed away peacefully on June 4th, 1966.

May she rest in Peace.

—Inserted by her son, Harold and family.

WEBB — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ada G. Webb, passed away June 4, 1957, also our dear Dad, William A. Webb, passed away Nov. 4th, 1952.

There is a tie, death cannot sever, love and remembrance last forever.

—Their grateful family.

WILLIAMS — In loving memory of a wonderful son, Lee Gerald Williams, aged 19 years, who passed away June 4th, 1966.

"Tied with a golden thread of love,
Sprayed with a million tears,
A bouquet of cherished memories,
We keep through all the years
Our flower faded too soon."

—Sadly, longed for, and missed, Mom and Dad.

WILSON — In loving memory of Mary C. Wilson who passed away June 4, 1966.

You prayed for strength
And then you lost awhile
All sense of nearness human and divine
The love you leaned on
Failed and pierced your heart.
The hands you clung to Loosed themselves from thine
But while you swayed,
Weak, trembling and alone
The Everlasting Arms upheld your own
God saw the road
Was getting rough
And the hills were hard to climb
So he closed your weary eyelids
dear,
And whispered "Peace be Thine."

—Your loving Mom.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

In board-a-match team of four duplicate scores are compared only once. Your partners play the same hands that were played against you, while your opponents' partners play your cards. You score a point if your partners do better than your opponents and zero if they do worse so that your whole aim as declarer is to try to get a better result than that declarers get at the other table.

Opening lead—♣ 8

East's double of three no-trump asked his paatner to open his own bid suit. Unfortunately for East it seems that West thought it called for a club lead. It would have called for a club lead (dummy's bid suit) if West had not bid but when your partner has bid your no-trump double says, "Partner, don't look around. Just lead your suit."

Anyway, West opened a club and East's jack fell to South's king. At this point, South could have made the hand by leading a heart but South played his king of spades.

East, in with the ace, led the queen of diamonds. It was allowed to hold and a second diamond lead knocked out dummy's ace.

South came to his hand with the ten of clubs and led the jack of hearts. He needed one heart trick to make his contract and had decided to go all out for it. Unfortunately for South's plans, West rose with the ace and cashed the rest of his diamonds for down three.

South explained that he could have gone down one by cashing out but one down doubled would be just as sure a loss as down three doubled.

South's no-trump bid with no diamond stopper had been bad judgment. His gamble to make the contract was even worse. It seems that West did not overcall at the other table and South also reached three no-trump. West did open a diamond and South was down three undoubled. This would have lost the board against down one doubled.

OPEN HOUSE
SATURDAY, 2 - 5 P.M.
985 GLORIA PLACE
(off Cordova Bay Rd.)

This brand new three bedroom, full basement home is as modern as tomorrow, located one block from the sea and launching facilities and is close to stores and schools.

Set against a backdrop of cedar and fir, with a tiny running stream, this home takes full advantage of the superb sea view. Designed on the open plan for easy housework and congenial family living, the living room, in-line dining room and kitchen all face the view across the house-long veranda, while off the kitchen a large sundeck invites relaxation.

The living room is tastefully panelled and has wall-to-wall Dupont 501 carpeting, which also graces the master bedroom and stairs. A modern fireplace and armour-plate windows add to the charm of this area.

The kitchen is functionally designed to provide the utmost in convenience for the busy housewife. Built-in oven and range, double stainless steel sink, abundant cupboards and large working surfaces are laid out specifically to save steps and energy. A breakfast nook is also provided.

The full high basement has roughed-in plumbing, fireplace and framing for a fourth bedroom, recreation room and bathroom as well as space for workshop, storage, etc.

You will be pleased with the high standard of finish work and the effective use of wallpaper, panelling and slate work and we believe you will also be pleased by the low asking price of $25,900. As little as $5,000 down may handle. For prior appointment to view, call A. W. Stewart, 385-7707 anytime.

SEAVIEW SUITE
3 BEDROOMS
$21,000 - TERMS

RARELY do we have co-operative suite for sale except on an "all cash" basis. In this case we have been informed that flexible terms can be arranged for a buyer with a good personal covenant. The full price is $21,000, but please call me and we can discuss financing on this golden opportunity.

There is a large living room, and 2 large bedrooms, all having a view of the sea. If golf, walking or fishing are more attractive than gardening or household chores, this is your solution. For further information, please call J. W. Ritchie, 385-7707 anytime. Exclusive Listing.

A beautiful ten-year-old luxury home on a half acre of property with a "view magnifico." Modern in style, but the personification of graciousness, elegance and quality, this home is nearly 2,000 sq. ft. of living area on the main floor. The large living room with traditional fireplace and the entertaining sized dining room both face the glorious view and will make you want to entertain. The kitchen is a dream come true. Two large bedrooms (one ensuite) plus the main bathroom are located on this floor. An open stairway from the slate-floored entrance hall takes you to the Family Room with fireplace, two additional bedrooms, and a third bathroom. New wall-to-wall carpeting and the large storage closets are features which add to the appeal of this home. The construction will bear your closest scrutiny. The grounds are a delight to behold and invite outdoor living. A carport and three garages with inside access allow ample space for all the family's needs.

Group to Take Off Doors To Reduce Fridge Deaths

A sharp increase in the number of children dying in abandoned refrigerators has been blamed on the good times of the sixties.

Fritz Hagedorn, secretary of the Island chapter of the Refrigeration Service Engineers' Society, says a higher standard of living has meant more abandoned refrigerators within the reach of children.

"In North America during the period 1947 to 1956," he said, "an average of 12 children per year suffocated inside old refrigerators.

"In 1957-1961 the number jumped to 15 per year and in the 1962-1966 period the number more than doubled to 31."

Mr. Hagedorn said the society, in an effort to prevent such tragedies, is willing to remove doors from old refrigerators with out charge and without damage, so they may be replaced later if needed.

He also said the society intends to ask the provincial government to make it illegal to sell any new refrigerator in B.C. that cannot be easily opened from the inside.

"Two other provinces and several states already have such laws," he said.

HE WAS PICKED UP GOING A GOOD CLIP

KINGSTON, N.C. (AP)—Keith Williams, 56, has been fined $100 and has lost his driver's licence after he was convicted of driving drunk on a lawn mower. Patrolman V. H. Heath testified Friday that he saw Williams driving his riding mower along U.S. 258 with no lights in heavy traffic.

Italy, N. America Bidding for Crown

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The first session of the finals of the world contract bridge championship gets under way today with Italy and North America meeting for the title.

The two teams earned the right to play each other after battling through a week of qualifying rounds that saw them finish one-two in a five-team round-robin.

The 15th and last round Friday night was an anti-climax as both teams had already clinched a place in the 128-deal final earlier in the day.

The Italians are rated favorites to capture their ninth straight world title. But the North American team improved consistently during the qualifying rounds. The North American team includes two Canadians—Eric Murray and Sam Kehala of Toronto.

SMASHING VICTORIES

In the last three sessions the North Americans took 59 of a possible 60 victory points in matches against Thailand, Venezuela and France to finish just nine points behind the Italians.

The victory over France clinched the North American's berth in the final round.

The final standings in the qualifying rounds were: Italy, 170; North America, 161; France, 132; Thailand, 73; Venezuela, 64.

In Friday night's matches, Italy bested Thailand 15-5 while France blitzed Venezuela 20-0. North America had a bye. The Thais will meet France in 96-deal playoff for third place.

Blown Up Tanker In Tow

LONDON (Reuters) — A Greek salvage tug today took in tow the stern section of the West German tanker Essberger Chemist, whose crew was taken aboard an American freighter after the ship blew up in the Atlantic Friday.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence reported the tug Nisos Zakinthos was taking the section of the 12,838-ton ship to Ponta Delgada, in the Azores. It planned to return for the forward part Sunday.

Reports from Ponta Delgada said medical teams were standing by to tend the crew of about 40 of the Essberger Chemist when the unidentified American rescue ship reached there.

The master of the tanker and the ship's officers were reported to be aboard the Nisos Zakinthos.

Driver Suspended, Fined $300

A man who went for a coffee after a traffic accident was fined $300 for impaired driving Friday.

Soren Sekkemo, 30, of 1430 Simon Rd., was found by police in a cafe a block from where his car was in a crash May 15.

Sekkemo had pleaded not guilty. His driving licence was also suspended.

In other impaired driving cases in traffic court Thursday, Mrs. Margaret Briggs, 2151 Haultain, was fined $300 when she was convicted in absentia.

She was stopped by police May 4 after she was seen driving erratically on Cadboro Bay Road. Her driving licence was also suspended for four months.

William Jackson, 1958 Casa Marcia Place, was also fined $300 and lost his driving privileges for four months when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was spotted driving erratically on Shelbourne near Feltham May 7.

Careless Drivers

Fined for careless driving when they appeared in central court:

Donald Rolph, of 816 Linden, $125; Hugh Hill, 230 Gorge, $50, and Eric McDowell, 1875 St. Ann, $40.

Silver Coins Out?

OTTAWA (CP)—The use of nickel to replace silver in certain Canadian coinage is under active consideration, Finance Minister Sharp advised the Commons Friday.

'FINAL WAR NOT FAR OFF (POP!) DUCK!'

WINNIPEG (CP)—Evangelist Billy Graham told 12,000 persons here Friday that The Bible predicted that the world's final battle would occur in the Middle East.

Moments later an overheated television spotlight exploded causing many of the audience to duck and showering some with glass. No one was injured.

Unruffled, Mr. Graham paused only momentarily in his 30-minute sermon. "It did sound like the opening shot of the last battle," he said.

At the conclusion of his sermon, the sixth during the evangelist's week-long centennial crusade here, more than 430 persons publicly accepted his challenge to profess Christianity.

Soldier Jailed For Robbery Of Cab Driver

A young soldir who threated a cabbie with violence when he robbed him early last Saturday was jailed for three months Friday.

Taxi drivers have to go to lonely and isolated places and must be protected, Magistrate Ostler said in passing sentence on Bernard Giovannini, 18, a member of the First Batallion, Canadian Guards.

Giovannini, also a member of the Centennial Tattoo cast which performed in Victoria a week ago, was captured by taxi drivers who came to the aid of driver Gordon Galloway, 50, when he flipped his radio mike open during the incident shortly after 3 a.m.

DETER OTHERS

The accused had alighted from the taxi with a friend but then got back in and forced the driver to hand over $7, warning him he had eight months karate training.

Police said in court earlier this week that he was "semi-intoxicated." Giovannini pleaded guilty to the robbery charge Monday.

Magistrate Ostler said that deterring others from the same sort of offence was a factor in passing sentence.

It was a very grave offence but after representations from the probation officer and the prosecutor the magistrate said he proposed being lenient.

Armed Clashes Continue In Red China

TAIPEI (AP) — Chinese Nationalist intelligence sources report armed clashes in China's provinces of Kiangsu and Chekiang between supporters and opponents of Mao Tse-tung.

A report, distributed by Nationalist China's official central news agency, said clashes broke out Wednesday at Suchow in Kiangsu province, disrupting rail traffic in the area.

Suchow, at the junction of the Tientsin-Pukow and Lunghai railways, was the centre of a decisive battle between the Nationalists and Communists in 1949.

The report also said that clashes broke out Wednesday in many parts of Checkiang Province including Hangchow, the capital and Kinhwa, an important rail town 90 miles south of Hongchow.

Rainbow Cadets Are Inspected

Rainbow Sea Cadets will hold their annual inspection at the foot of Roberts Street at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The occasion will mark the corps 50th anniversary.

Inspecting officer will be Commander I. A. McPhee, who will present 11 awards to outstanding cadets.

After a marchpast the public will be invited to inspect displays set up by the cadets, outlining various phases of their training.

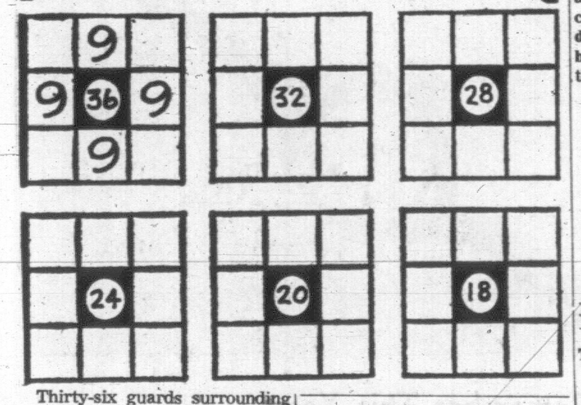
SMART GALLERY



Thirty-six guards surrounding a prison were arranged with nine men on each of four sides, as shown above. In the interests of economy, this force was reduced to 32, whereupon the warden worked out a new deployment with nine men on a side. Next, lo and behold, came orders reducing the complement to 28. Again, the warden came through with a nine-per-side arrangement. Ingeniously, he did the same with 24, 20 and finally 18. Do you see how he worked out each grouping of nine on each side?

Solution: Thirty-two — 1, 7, 1, 7, 1, 7, 1, 7. Twenty-eight — 2, 5, 2 etc. Twenty-four — 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3. Twenty — 4, 1, 4, etc. Eighteen — four blank five blank four, etc.

WHO IS HE?

Spanish explorer, companion of Columbus, he set out for Bimini and discovered Florida in 1513. His name?

Answer: Ponce de Leon.

GIVE YOUR TONGUE A TEST

Repeat the following aloud, as rapidly as possible:

Sheldon's sued shoes certainly show sundry scuffs and surface stains.

[illegible]our Schultz stocks his suite with sticks and stones and sawdust.

Bitter Broadway bettors beat bloody bunch.

PICK THIS UP IN FIVE SECONDS

Place a dozen matches on the table. Now, within five seconds, pick up in your two hands, two numbers of matches which, upon being multplied, will make seven. How is it done?

Answer: Pick up seven in one hand and one in the other.

TRY MULLING THROUGH

The following ten sentences are incomplete. How quickly can you add the 10 words—fly, drift, tires, engines, white, city, bells, whistles, state, packs—to the proper sentences?

1. Telephones have ....
2. The mocking bird ....
3. New York is a ....
4. Many autos need two ....
5. Chicago is a ....
6. Soldiers carry ....
7. Snow will ....
8. Steamships have ....

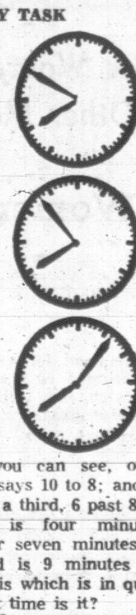
Answer: 1. Bells, 2. Whistles, 3. State, 4. Tires, 5. City, 6. Packs, 7. Drift, 8. Engines, 9. White, 10. Fly.

TIMELY TASK



As you can see, one clock above says 10 to 8; another 7 to 8; and a third, 6 past 8.

One is four minutes out, another seven minutes out and a third is 9 minutes out, but which is which is in question.

What time is it?

Answer: Three minutes to eight.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW

Use each word below to its best advantage in the sentences given. All five words are to be used; one in each sentence: handles, strings, locks, bars, chains.

1. Bicycles have
2. Prison cells have
3. Hammers have
4. Tennis rackets have
5. Safety deposit boxes have

Remember, all five words are to be used; just once each. No fair peeking below.

CHICKEN OUT?

There's no question about which comes first the chicken or the egg, in this easy-to-follow drawing lesson.

Begin with egg (step 1, at top), then complete figure as shown.

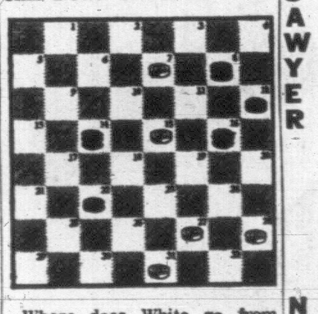
CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



Where does White go from here with seemingly inferior forces?

Why, he goes on to win in six moves—if he's on his toes. It's White's turn, moving up the board. Can you lead him to victory?

Long-time champ Millard Hopper, who devises these problems, gives his solution below, if needed. No fair peeking.

Solution: White 13-11, Black 8-15, White 31-26, Black 22-31, White 7-2, Black 31-24, White 28-19-10, Black 14-7, White 2-11-20, etc.

FINGER THE BAD GUY

Tommy Smithereen and his brothers were no more adept at falsehood than most small boys. When he was accused with his brothers of raiding his mother's pantry of cookies made for "company" Tommy said:

"No, it wasn't me — it was Bobby."

"Well, it wasn't, it was Phil," said Bob.

"Wrong again," said Bert. "It was Tommy."

"You're wrong, too," said Phil, "it was Bert."

Yet only two of the boys were wholly wrong in their statements. Who was the chief offender then?

Answer: Tommy himself was the offender, as his mother suspected.

HOW QUICKLY CAN YOU COUNT?

If 20 times a certain number exceeds a third of that number by 236, what is the number? Answer quickly.

Answer: The number in question is 12

HOW DO THE FOUR TEAMS STAND?

Each of four baseball teams has played 15 games. Team B has won two more games than team C. Team A won six more games than team C. How do the teams stand?

Answer: Team B has won 12 and lost 3; D has won 10 and lost 6; A has won 7 and lost 8. C has won 1 and lost 14. Thirty games were played in all, of course.

PRINCE RUPERT

23 Dismissed In Labor War

PRINCE RUPERT (CP)—Some 23 shoreworkers, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union Friday were told to go home after they refused to unload the vessel Attli, which brought 25,000 pounds of halibut to the Atlin Fisheries plant.

The new dismissals further complicated a fishing dispute which has plagued this port for two months. It followed disclosure earlier Friday that the UFAWU and its rival Deep Sea Fishermen's Union met informally with Mayor Peter Lester to discuss the dispute.

Atlin general manager Norman Christenson told the shoreworkers to go home and said he would "hire from elsewhere to unload the boat."

It was the second plant to dismiss workers. B.C. Packers Ltd. Thursday told UFAWU employees they were suspended after they refused to unload the vessel Fredalia III.

The initial move by the mayor would be to talk to both sides separately before bringing them together for a joint meeting, it was explained.

The mayor's efforts followed failure in the last few days to bring about joint talks. Mayor Lester said nothing definite has been established regarding mediation.

An attempt earlier Friday by the UFAWU to stop the unloading of alleged unfair halibut boats at two plants failed as about 100 shoreworkers crossed the union's picket lines.

About 75 of the workers crossed a 40-member UFAWU line at the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative Association plant as police pushed pickets back off the road.

More than 20 shoreworkers entered the Royal Fisheries plant through the UFAWU picket line.

Meanwhile the Deep Sea Fishermen threw up a picket line at the B.C. Packers Plant where UFAWU shoreworkers refused Thursday to unload the Fredalia.

The UFAWU has been trying to tie up 30 Prince Rupert Fishing Vessel Owners Association halibut boats after failing to get an agreement with the association.

The association said its trawl and halibut crews are covered by an agreement with the deep sea union.

The tie-up began when UFAWU officials declared all owners association boats "unfair" and asked its shoreworker members not to handle them.

The UFAWU boycott of owners' boats was first broken several weeks ago when shoreworkers crossed picket lines.

Shoreworkers were encouraged to cross the picket lines by about 50 wives of members of the deep sea union, who carried their own pickets demanding an end to the tie-up.

The women sent a telegram bearing 6,000 signatures, about 40 per cent of the city's population, to Attorney-General Bonner urging government action to end the dispute.

More than 50 per cent of the city's economy is based on the fishing industry.

Yugoslav Report Of Destruction Brings Denial

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian forces headquarters spokesman denied categorically Friday night a Yugoslav news agency report that Canadian soldiers destroyed UN equipment before leaving the Sinai Peninsula for Canada.

"There was absolutely no equipment or unit stores destroyed or damaged by Canadian soldiers," the spokesman told The Canadian Press.

A report from Belgrade earlier Friday said the Yugoslav official news agency Tanjug in a Cairo dispatch accused Canadian troops of the destruction.

The news agency also said Canadians tried to destroy equipment used to convert salt water into drinking water at Sharm el Sheik but that Yugoslav soldiers, also part of the UN Emergency Force, prevented any damage.

Centennial Edition Off Press June 29

A Centennial edition of the Victoria Daily Times, marking Canada's 100th birthday, will be published June 29.

Timed to appear on the eve of the July 1 anniversary, it will combine the regular issue with four sections of lasting interest.

Readers will recognize some of Canada's most respected by-lines. The stories span our history and our country. While they cannot comprise a comprehensive history, they are a tasty collection of representative stories, chosen for their interest.

One complete section will deal with Victoria and Vancouver Island. Other sections will discuss Canada's growth as a nation, and regionally. Pictures loaned from treasured collections give comparisons of our todays and yesterdays. They have been liberally employed.

The four special sections will contain 96 pages and the whole newspaper will weigh in the neighborhood of two pounds.

It will be the largest newspaper edition ever produced for Victoria readers.

All regular subscribers will receive a copy of the centennial edition by carrier delivery. Those persons wishing extra copies should reserve them now at newsstands or at the Times circulation department, 2631 Douglas St. Colorful mailing wrappers will be provided persons wishing to send souvenir copies out of town. Or the circulation department will undertake mailing and wrapping for customers for a flat 25 cents per copy. Order forms for mailing appear elsewhere in this edition.

16-HOUR BATTLE

Losses Severe On Both Sides

By HUGH LUNN

HIEP DUC VALLEY, South Vietnam (Reuters)—A big force of North Vietnamese regulars killed 54 U.S. marines and wounded more than 300 in a 16-hour pitched battle which ended early today, marine officers said.

The Americans reported finding 450 North Vietnamese bodies on the battlefield in the rolling hills and ricelands of northern Quang Tin province.

Fighting broke out in this valley, southwest of the major U.S. base at Da Nang, as a marine battalion came under heavy fire from the North Vietnamese, who pinned one company down with rockets and fire from machine-guns and recoilless cannons.

One marine described the fighting as a "knock down, drag 'em out, hand-to-hand battle."

One mile to the southeast, an American battalion moving up on foot to reinforce was locked in battle with another force of North Vietnamese.

As marine reinforcements flew into the area by helicopter, jets dived through streams of red tracers from machine-gun bullets to hit the North Vietnamese with rockets, bombs and napalm.

The planes kept up their assault throughout the night, dropping napalm within 100 yards of the marines.

Robot Car Misses Shah of Iran

BERLIN (AP) — A car steered by remote control and apparently set to crash into the Shah of Iran's motorcade en route to the airport today hit a parked car instead, West Berlin police reported.

In a statement, a spokesman said the Shah's motorcade already had passed when the car was set in motion.

"There were no explosives in the vehicle," the spokesman said.

The royal couple ends a nine-day official visit to West Germany Sunday. Anti-royalist demonstrations followed them across the country.

Police said that one 26-year-old student was pronounced dead at a West Berlin hospital where he was taken after a wild melee in front of the municipal opera house.

The royal couple were not touched by any of the paint-filled eggs, vegetables, stones, or smoke flares.

43 Injured, 33 Arrested In Boston Negro Section

BOSTON (AP)—Police maintained an uneasy vigil in the predominantly Negro Gove Hall section today after a night of looting and rock-throwing touched off by a welfare demonstration.

Police formed assault lines throughout the night to clear the streets.

At least 24 policemen, one fireman and 18 civilians were injured.

At least 33 men and 11 women were arrested. They were charged variously with trespassing, taking part in an affray or assault on police officers.

Windows of businesses were smashed and there were reports of widespread looting. Several fires were reported in the area.

There was no estimate of damage.

The disturbance began late Friday afternoon when about 30 welfare recipients, members of an organization called Mothers for Adequate Welfare, capped a day-and-night sit-in by bolting the front door of a city welfare office in the Grove Hall section.

Fifty-eight welfare workers were blocked inside when the women took up positions on the first floor of the building, guarding the door they had locked.

Police climbed into the building through windows and formed a flying wedge to force the women out. Several of the women were carried to police wagons.

A crowd of more than 500 persons gathered outside the building and continued to hold most of the welfare workers inside. Police then called for reinforcements. About 150 policemen were assembled at the height of the disturbance.

Head for Safety!

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) —U.S. Ambassador Elbert Mathews today warned U.S. dependents living in threatened areas of Nigeria to seek safety immediately in the capital city of Lagos.

He issued the statement as Nigeria moved toward almost certain open warfare with its secessionist eastern region.

RED CHINA NEWSPAPER ASKS HONG KONG COUP

PEKING (Reuters)—China today told Chinese in Hong Kong to organize and prepare for a possible overthrow of British rule in the colony.

In one of the toughest pronouncements on the colony by China's Communist leaders since they took power 17 years ago, Hong Kong Chinese were told to mobilize "to launch a vigorous struggle against the wicked British imperialists."

An editorial in the Communist party newpaper The People's Daily said the Hong Kong Chinese should "be ready at all times to respond to the call of the great motherland to smash the reactionary rule of British imperialists."

'We'll Fight America,' Jeer Arabs

CAIRO (AP) — Thousands of jeering Egyptians carrying banners and huge photos of President Nasser staged an anti-American demonstration today at Port Said as a U.S. Navy destroyer entered the Suez Canal bound for the south.

Egyptian launches surrounded the destroyer Dyess as the demonstrators shouted from the banks of the canal.

"Down with Johnson; we will fight Israel and America," the crowd chanted.

The U.S. destroyer took up its position awaiting a south-bound convoy.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union bolstered its forces by sending three more warships into the Mediterrenean Sea.

In Tel Aviv, new Israeli defence minister Gen. Moshe Dayan, said he believed Israel could win if war broke out with the Arab states. But he told a news conference: "If it should come to fighting, I do not want American and British boys to die for us."

MAKE STAND

At the United Nations, Israeli ambassador Gideon Rafael told the security council his nation is determined to make a stand on the Gulf of Aqaba in resistance to the Arab blockade of the waterway leading to the Israeli port of Elath.

The United Arab Republic government ordered Egyptians to take precautions against any bombing attack or invasion from Israel amid a flurry of diplomatic activity as the mideast crisis neared the end of its third week.

U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser sent President Johnson a message, according to the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, but its contents were not disclosed. Soviet amabassador Dmitri Pojidaev called on U.A.R. Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad this morning.

In Baghdad, Iraq called an emergency week-end meeting of oil producing Arab states to co-ordinate threatened Arab action that would cut off oil to any western powers helping Israel in event of war.

THERE'S NO TOMORROW WITHOUT PLAN—THANT

MONTREAL (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations described the Middle East crisis Friday night as "explosive and delicate" and warned that the world must prepare for the 21st century—if there is to be a 21st century.

Mr. Thant issued his warning during a six-hour flying visit to Montreal to address the council of the International Civil Aviation Organization, a UN special agency, and the United Nations Association in Canada.

He also held private discussions on the Arab-Israeli crisis with External Affairs Minister Martin.

'ACT OF BANDITRY'

U.S. Roasted By Russ in UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The Soviet Union today accused the United States of "an act of banditry pregnant with serious consequences" in the bombing of the Soviet ship Turkestan in a North Vietnamese port Friday.

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko, speaking during the United Nations Security Council debate on the Middle East crisis, said:

"An end must be put once and for all to the arbitrary actions of the United States, the self-styled world policeman."

He said the U.S. has no "moral right to come to the Security Council and play the role of protector of international navigation."

The Soviet Union has supported Egypt's claim that it can legally blockade the Strait of Tiran in the Gulf of Aqaba while the U.S. has taken the stand that there should be free passage for all ships, including Israeli, through the strait.

WORDS ARE TOUGH

Fedorenko said:

"The professed words of the United States in favor of free navigation all over the world are at variance with its criminal, practical deeds all over the world.

The Soviet ambassador said American planes bombed the Turkestan Friday at 11:40 a.m. Moscow time in a harbor 50 miles from Haiphong. He said two crew members were critically wounded, one of whom died a few hours later. With the exception of a Cypriot vessel, there was no other ship in the harbor, he said.

"The ruling circles of Washington ceaselessly come forward with preachings about their love for peace, justice and international law, but they abrogate to themselves the right to dictate to other states," Fedorenko said.

Israeli Ambassador Gideon Rafael told the Council his country is "determined to make a stand on the Gulf of Aqaba."

"Nothing less than free passage is acceptable," he said as the council resumed long debate on the Middle East crisis.

ISRAEL HAS BACKING

Adib Daoudy, Syrian assistant secretary-general for politiccal affairs, charge that "Israel is leading the world to the brink of catastrophe" only because she is assured of strong backing by the U.S. and other "benefactors and protectors."

"In the face of the so-called declaration of the freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba and the threat to use American force against us, what can the Arab countries be expected to do," he asked.

"Our attitude is purely defensive in nature and legitimate in its motives. If Israel alone or with others, participation carries out aggression in the Gulf of Aqaba or elsewhere, the Arab governments are determined to react strongly and unitedly to defend their territory."

Debate on the Middle Eastern situation started in the unusual Saturday session but voting on rival proposals before the council was postponed until early next week.

The 10 non-permanent members of the council — including Canada — planned a weekend of intense diplomatic talks on a compromise plan being pushed by India and Ethiopia which would appeal to Israel and the Arab countries to avoid inflammatory actions.

BROADSIDE REBUTTAL TO BERGER

Don't Rock Boat, Strachan Tells NDP

Times Legislative Reporter

BURNABY — Close to 425 delegates at the New Democratic Party's largest convention this morning were mulling over an implication that they were on the threshold of power if only they don't rock the leadership vote tonight.

This suggestion was the underlying theme of a speech by NDP Leader Robert Strachan Friday night, who used his 15-minute annual report to make an expertly subtle broadside rebuttal to leadership challenger Tom Berger's criticisms.

About two-thirds of the convention gave him a standing ovation as he began his speech. The other third kept their seats — some refusing even mild applause.

The delegates will choose between the two men tonight in naming their leader for the coming year.

This decision obviously dominated all thoughts even as the convention gingerly proceeded with its routine business this morning.

Norman Levi was re-elected by acclamation for his second term as provincial president as both camps decided he was a neutral in the leadership battle but sharp contests were expected later today in election of four vice-presidents.

The delegates also this morning approved resolutions favoring the principles of a government guaranteed annual income for all citizens, collective bargaining rights for provincial civil servants and establishment of a provincial housing authority.

Although making no direct reference to the contest in his Friday night speech, and even praising the work of all freshman MLAs including the rebels, Mr. Strachan was obviously appealing for support tonight.

His most telling point was a comparison between the last two provincial election campaigns.

In 1963 — when Mr. Berger was the top strategist behind a soft-sell but costly $40,000 campaign — the party lost strength and was saddled with crippling debt.

Mr. Strachan dwelt on the contrast in the 1966 campaign which was mainly under his direction.

"With (NDP) provincial office expenditures of only $25,000, we faced a powerful Social Credit machine that bragged it was going to wipe us out and spent almost $500,000 trying to accomplish just that," he said.

"More than 250,000 voters supported NDP candidates on Sept. 12 and we increased our percentage of the total vote from 28 per cent to 34 per cent and increased our members elected from 14 to 16.

"A similar increase in our percentage of the total vote could make us the government after the next election."

Mr. Strachan, without identifying them specifically, answered his challenger's criticisms that he over-emphasizes legislative tactics at the expense of internal organization and fails to spend enough time with the grass roots.

He said throughout last September's campaign he worked for other candidates throughout the province, even while the premier and five cabinet ministers visited his own riding in a determined bid to unseat him but he was "re-elected for the sixth time due to the loyal party workers" who performed voluntary work in his riding.

An outburst of applause indicated his point had registered.

Mr. Strachan also enumerated a long list of his attendance at public and internal party meetings and efforts to spread the NDP word to a variety of organizations including native Indians, labor groups and university student bodies.

He said the NDP kept the government off balance during the last session "from opening day in the arena at New Westminster when the public booed the government for refusing to support my motion for a Hansard until closing day when I had to remind the government they had forgotten to pass the supply (appropriations) bill."

He also listed 10 policy programs devised under his leadership, from industrial development to chronic care, which he said could be implemented immediately by an NDP government.

"It is because of this constant effort over the years, that many people are now saying that the New Democratic Party is ready to form the next government of British Columbia," he said.

To emphasize the point, Mr. Strachan said the party's new organizing team (which largely supports Mr. Berger) went into the Cariboo byelection last fall and almost defeated Attorney-General Robert Bonner because it was building on the efforts of a decade.

He recalled that in the 1957 Cariboo byelection, won by Socred William Speare, there were no large NDP cadres but virtually only himself and the candidate to work as door knockers.

"Cariboo constituency is an example of what can be done, in a few years, to build a constituency from a minimal position to a point where there

Escaper Takes Gun

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Karlos Hegedus, 27, a B.C. penitentiary inmate here as a witness in a county court trial, stole a .38 revolver today and escaped from an RCMP detachment jail.

Police said Hegedus is considered "extremely dangerous" and was serving a four-year sentence for discharging a firearm at an RCMP constable in November, 1966.

MOUNTIE DIES IN CLIFF FALL

BURNABY (CP)—A young RCMP constable plunged to his death over a cliff early today while chasing a prowler in Burnaby, a neighboring municipality of Vancouver.

The dead policeman's name was withheld.

Police said the constable, only a few months out of training, disappeared while he and partner Constable Bob Yakubchuk were chasing youths following a complaint. z z z lowing a complaint.

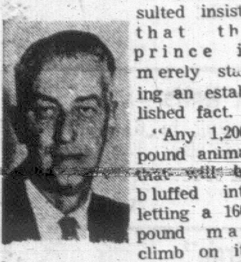
A search was held through the night when Const. Yakubchuk reported his partner missing. The body was found early today about half way down a 200-foot-high cliff.

Arthur Mayse

Prince Philip, a durable rider who has taken his share of tosses, delivered himself this week of a statement that I thought would fetch a prompt challenge from the boots-and-saddle set.

"God invented a lot of animals," said Philip, still smarting from a polo toss, "and just about the most stupid is the horse."

This sounded like heresy to me, but a fervent Victoria horseman I have just consulted insists that the prince is merely stating an established fact.



"Any 1,200-pound animal that will be bluffed into letting a 160-pound man climb on its back and control its actions has to be stupid," the expert assured me.

But he didn't comment on what happens when the man isn't precisely a mental ball of fire either, and has only the vaguest idea how you go about bluffing a horse.

Anyway, there was no need for him to deal with that problem. From my own limited and unhappy experience with various steeds, I can furnish the answers. The sum of them is that the horse, who is bright enough to know when it has a soft touch aboard, does what it wants.

Most times, this is to tag along with the other horses if there are any about, a trait impressed on me by a monstrous wall-eyed brute named Sam.

Sam and I met outside a corral half a day's ride from a Kamloops trout lake which, unfortunately, couldn't be reached on wheels. We eyed each other for a hostile moment, then I got a foot in the stirrup and a fistful of scrubby mane, and scrambled up Sam's lofty side.

This he permitted. Then, while I was trying to remember what one did with the reins, Sam swung his head around, bared a set of yellow teeth, and attempted to bite my left kneecap off.

"Gentle as a kitten," the ranch-hand guide remarked cheerfully.

Except for the occasional sneaky attempt to bite, Sam gave no more trouble. We jogged out of the pastures and into the jackpine; climbed one height of land and descended another; and after an hour or two of this, I began to think that maybe we'd arrived at an understanding after all.

We topped that summit and were starting down, when one of the ranch guys pointed to a meadow below. A long-tailed equine stood there minding its own business.

"Wild horse!" he hollered, and took off at a run. In spite of a startled "Whoa!" from his passenger, so did Sam.

The wild horse made out well enough, but that scamper cost me a bloody nose, a fishing hat with two Big Bertha flies and a Black o' Lindsay stuck in the band, several welts from whipping branches, and a pair of saddle-sores each the size of a silver dollar.

Long after Sam and I parted company, I told my daughter about our association, which was a mistake.

She was then in the horse-stage that little girls go through, and in consequence, her sympathies were all with Sam.

But the chase down the jackpine sidehill did give me some unearned status in her eyes, and when she prevailed on us to check in at a dude ranch near Bridge Lake, nothing would do but that daddy should join in the trail ride.

They saddled up a beast that could have doubled for Sam.

"Gentle as a kitten," the ranchman said; but I wasn't buying this time.

By standing aside until the others were taken care of, I achieved a mount scarce larger than a donkey. My feet in fact, darn near touched the ground.

It didn't try to bite me, and I didn't interfere when it paused to nibble grass, and in this amiable understanding we had a pretty good trail ride.

Since then, I have been considered too dumb to associate with horses, a rating that suits me just fine. Far as I'm concerned Prince Philip can have 'em!

200 Bikes Made The Big Parade Even Bigger

By TED GASKELL

It looked as if every bicycle in the world was in Oak Bay this morning.

There must have been 200 in the Centennial Tea Party parade and without the bikes with their crepe paper and balloons, the river of color that flowed down Oak Bay streets would have been a mere trickle.

"They really took us by surprise," said Bert Kent, Tea Party chairman. "We expected about 30 or 40 but look at them. There must be 200 at least."

The Board of Trade, coordinators for the Tea Party, received 500 children's parade entries and most of them turned up.

REAL STUFF

In addition to the children's groups there were 27 units in the parade including four bands, district floats, sports groups, decorated cars. There were Union Jacks, Red Ensigns, pipes, tweeds, top hats, umbrellas. The Real Oak Bay Tea Party stuff.

And of course there were the Tweedys, riding in a 1947, wire-wheeled, right hand drive M.G. And you can't be more tea party-ish than that unless you happen to be a cucumber sandwich.

ROUTE JAMMED

Hundreds lined the parade route from Windsor Park and the village area along Oak Bay avenue was jammed with people.

The parade and the atmosphere that surrounded it gave promise of a good weekend.

The sun shone as the children assembled. Just before parade time at 10 a.m. the sun could barely be seen through the ten-tenths cloud and there was fear of rain. But it managed to hold off until the official tea party at noon when dignitaries were welcomed by The Tweedys.

FREE DANCING

This afternoon the Spectacle of Bands is scheduled with drill displays and baton demonstrations. There is free dancing tonight at Willows Park to the Mixed Emotions and the famous baron of beef will go under the chef's knife.

The Children's carnival runs this afternoon and Sunday, a really big day with a waterfront show which includes fishing derbies, sailing races, swimming races, log rolling, treasure hunt, kite flying and sky divers.

SUN RETURNS ON SUNDAY —FORECAST

Today's grey skies will give way to sun Sunday.

Gradually improving weather should produce a bright, warm day but the weather office warns westerly winds on Juan de Fuca Strait could reach 20 miles an hour.

And, says the weatherman, the outlook up-Island should be even better than the Greater Victoria area.

CHARLES KNILL

History Repeated As Man Meets Owl

In 1909 Charles Knill, then 10 years old, submitted a picture of himself feeding a mouse to an owl, in a photo competition.

Title of the picture was "When shall we three meet again?"

Fifty-eight years later, Mr. Knill and an owl were in a picture again. (Above.)

About 5:30 this morning Mr. Knill was awakened by crows making a racket in his back yard. Upon investigation he found about 20 of them attacking a snow-white owl.

A young student, George Puziak, staying with the Knills, rushed into the garden with a blanket which he used to capture the owl and carry it into the basement.

While resting in its new basement home the owl ate raw bacon and slept peacefully until the S.P.C.A. came.

The bird did not appear to be injured, said an S.P.C.A. official. It has been given to an employee as a pet.

Women Electors Will Play Safe On Next Report

Future reports by the Association of Women Electors will require executive approval before publication, Mrs. Dorothy Ray, president, said today.

Mrs. Ray said the executive had decided such approval would prevent the type of dissension which followed recent publication of the association's controversial education study.

The study, severely critical of the B.C. school system, sparked a debate within the association.

Mrs. Violet Berringer, a school teacher, charged the press had received the report at the same time as the membership and that no vote had been taken.

REPORT ONLY STUDY

Mrs. Ray said although these charges were true, this procedure had never been necessary in the past.

"The report was only a study; it required no vote as it made no recommendations."

"There was nothing wrong with the manner in which it was presented, but just to ensure that such a situation does not arise again executive approval will be needed."

Mrs. Ray said the proposed study into unjust treatment of school children will not be carried out.

"Most of the membership feels that the education report is complete as it is.

"We don't expect to take on any new projects until the fall."

Veterinarians Hold Conference This Weekend

About 40 to 50 veterinarians are attending a two-day province-wide conference at the Red Lion Inn.

Highlighting the conference this afternoon is a closed circuit televised operation of a cataract being removed from a dog's eye. The surgery will be performed by Dr. Gary Brian, a small-animal eye specialist from Portland.

Dr. G. H. Hamilton, president of the Canadian Veterinarian Association, is attending the conference.

Dr. Otto Radostits, from a Saskatoon veterinarian college, will be guest speaker Sunday afternoon after a business meeting in the morning.

Tonight a banquet and a dance will be held.

40 Fires Burning In B.C. Forests

B.C. Forest Service said Friday 60 new fires were reported in B.C. during the past week, 78 were extinguished and 40 are still burning.

In its weekly bulletin, the service said it had spent $44,900 fighting 371 fires so far this season, compared with $65,400 spent fighting 527 fires in the comparable period of 1966.

The service reported slightly higher fire hazards due to a general drying trend.

Two Boys Start Fire; Greenhouse Razed

Powder Drums Pop Like Fiery Torches

By DON VIPOND

Two nine-year-old boys playing with fire turned an ancient wooden boiler house in a Saanich greenhouse complex into a raging ball of flames Friday.

Two firemen were taken to hospital when hit by slivers of flying glass as the white-hot fire burst scores of greenhouse panes. They had minor cuts stitched up and were released.

The large wooden shed at 800 Vernon Ave., just 200 paces from the main firehall, was left a mass of charcoal.

Owned by Frank Wright of 1835 Feltham, its replacement cost was estimated at "several thousand dollars."

Saanich detectives said the boys have admitted lighting papers in the boiler house. Police will consider charges against the youngsters next week.

LEAPING FLAMES

Two youngsters turned in the alarm shortly after 5 p.m. Police blocked off Vernon Avenue as rush-hour traffic plugged Douglas Street while drivers gaped at the leaping flames.

The entire structure was a mass of fire by the time firemen arrived. They had it contained within 30 minutes but were mopping up for another 2½ hours.

Drums of inflammable insecticide in the building presented a freak hazard to the firefighters. Expanding under the intense heat, they popped their bungs and spewed flames like acetylene torches.

One fireman narrowly escaped injury when a drum burst open as he passed it and fired a 15-foot tongue of flame within two feet of him.

So close was the fire to the firehall that some of the hose lines were laid from a hydrant right in front of the station.

"It was the hottest fire I've ever seen in Saanich," said one police officer.

"Ever seen what happens when you throw a cardboard box on a bonfire?" was the way one fireman described it.

He said he had never seen a fire travel so fast. The entire building seemed to burst into flames at the same time.

The boilerhouse was surrounded by greenhouses and it was a combination of the intense heat and gases produced which set the glass panes popping.

Heating pipes were left sagging like licorice sticks in the ruins and rows of plants nearest the blaze were withered and flattened.

Two or three city firemen on their way home from work stopped to lend the 11 Saanich firemen a hand.

"We were very grateful," said an officer this morning.

Injunction Halts Egg Board

Vancouvr Island and mainland small egg producers have obtained an injunction to temporarily prevent formation of an egg marketing board.

The injunction is aimed at seeking recognition for the smaller concerns (under 500 chickens) when a vote is taken on formation of the board.

It was granted on the grounds an order-in-council relating to the setting up of the board was worded in such a manner that all egg producers should be allowed to vote.

However, the returning officer has apparently been instructed that only those with more than 500 head or more shall be given the vote.

The matter will be decided when th two sides appear in court. No date has yet been set for the court appearance.

Earlier this week, Dave Bradbury vice-president of Vancouver Island Egg Producers' Association, charged the proposed marketing board is "flagrantly twisting" its terms of reference to the detriment of the small producer.

PRODUCE PRICE

He said: "The terms of reference of the board are that they can regulate and control the distribution and marketing of eggs.

"This means they can stop the small producer-vendors or tell them to which packaging plant they may take their eggs.

"Instead of getting the retail price for his eggs he will get the producer price."

BURGLARS WORK HARD; TAKE $535 FROM SAFE

Thieves broke into the main office of Page Cleaners at 2929 Douglas overnight, dodging the burglar alarms and stealing $535 from a safe.

The burglars hauled acetylene tanks to the roof of the building and then coolly dragged the safe close enough to hook up a cutting torch before slicing into the safe.

Entering through a skylight they left an office door wired to a burglar alarm untouched, cutting a hole through a wall to get at the safe. It was then dragged to a point where hoses could be connected to the fuel tanks on the roof and the torch used.

WON'T PAY WAGES

Cafe Shutdown Over Holidays

Most Victoria area restaurants will close Labor Day because it will be too expensive to open.

This was stated today by William Webb, president of the local branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association.

Last month, the Board of Industrial Relations issued an order requiring employers to pay their employees, for eight statutory holidays a year.

The order takes effect Aug. 1, making Labor Day — Sept. 4 — the first statutory holiday for which the new pay applies.

Mr. Webb said this means if a restaurant opens it must pay employees time and one half plus another day off with pay. If the restaurant closed, it only needed to pay one day's pay.

IMPOSSIBLE TERMS

"The majority of restaurants have decided they can't operate under those conditions," he said.

"The operator staying open is paying the cost from his pocket. It is impossible to operate under those conditions.

"The major ones would be open, and it will be the major ones that will be closing. I don't know what the tourists will do."

Mr. Webb also pointed out the old $1 an hour minimum wage (after three months work) was increased to $1.10 an hour on May 1 and goes to $1.25 an hour on Nov. 1. The three-month step-ups to the minimum rate were abolished.

Restauranteurs will meet in Victoria June 14 to see what can be done.

A new attempt to arrange a meeting with deputy labor minister William Sands, who is chairman of the Board of Industrial Relations, will be made.

When the statutory holiday with pay order was announced, Labor Minister Peterson said "it is a further advance in the board's program to raise labor standards for employees in the province."

Kuper Band Half Way To Expo

Kuper Island Indian Band fund has passed the $5,000 mark.

A total of $510 was raised for the fund Friday night when the Kuper Island Indians, assisted by Indians from the Duncan reserve and four sisters of St. Ann from the school staged a salmon barbecue at the Centennial Caravan location at Chemainus.

Friday morning the fund stood at $3,918.

Now it's over $5,000 with the barbecue donations; $200 from the Nanaimo Legion and between $300 and $400 in donations received at the school.

The band requires between $8,500 and $9,000 for the air fare to Montreal and accommodation and expenses there.

Donations are being accepted at the Indian school, S. J. Willis Junior High School here, The Times business office and any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Hearing to Set Price on Estate

An arbitration hearing will be held July 6 to determine the price Saanich must pay to expropriate the McRae Estate.

The estate, covering about 125 acres, comprises the Cedar Hill Golf Course and surrounding open land.

Lingua Mortua Jam Vivit—Dead Language Comes Alive

Studium linguae Latinae exhilarans est.

Studying Latin is thrilling.

So thinks lively, 24-year-old Anne Kemp.

And 56 of her Grade 8 students at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School agree with her.

For them, the dead language has come alive since last September when principal Horace Dawson initiated the course at the school.

Miss Kemp, top student in the education faculty at University of Victoria last year, intended to teach in senior secondary school.

But Mr. Dawson lured her to S. J. Willis by offering to let her teach Latin and English, her majors at university.

She's glad now she went there.

Not only does she teach Latin; she has also introduced students to the Greek and Russian alphabets in order to give them the feel of an inflected language.

"We cover as much or as little as they are capable of doing," said Miss Kemp. "There is no fixed curriculum and text. I give a minimum number of tests. We discuss whatever comes up."

Working that way, some students already can translate beyond the halfway mark in the Grade 9 Latin text.

Just as important, they enjoy their language studies.

Of the 86 in the class, 56 want to continue with Latin in upper grades. Trouble is, they may not be able to.

In Greater Victoria only Oak Bay and Victoria senior secondary schools offer Latin beyond Grade 10 level. Commented Miss Kemp: "I hate to see children get all fired up and not be allowed to continue."

What makes students "fired up" about a dead language?

Partly it is the understanding about Roman history, religion and myths that accompanies the Latin study that interests them.

Learning Latin also gives students a deeper sense and understanding about English by showing them the Latin roots of many English words in common use.

"But," said Miss Kemp," the big attraction is just the pleasure of studying something entirely different."

Centennial Edition Off Press June 29

A Centennial edition of the Victoria Daily Times, marking Canada's 100th birthday, will be published June 29.

Timed to appear on the eve of the July 1 anniversary, it will combine the regular issue with four sections of lasting interest.

Readers will recognize some of Canada's most respected by-lines. The stories span our history and our country. While they cannot comprise a comprehensive history, they are a tasty collection of representative stories, chosen for their interest.

One complete section will deal with Victoria and Vancouver Island. Other sections will discuss Canada's growth as a nation, and regionally. Pictures loaned from treasured collections give comparisons of our todays and yesterdays. They have been liberally employed.

The four special sections will contain 96 pages and the whole newspaper will weigh in the neighborhood of two pounds.

It will be the largest newspaper edition ever produced for Victoria readers.

All regular subscribers will receive a copy of the centennial edition by carrier delivery. 16-HOUR BATTLE

Losses Severe On Both Sides

HIEP DUC VALLEY, South Vietnam (Reuters)—A big force of North Vietnamese regulars killed 54 U.S. marines and wounded more than 300 in a 16-hour pitched battle which ended early today, marine officers said.

The Americans reported finding 450 North Vietnamese bodies on the battlefield in the rolling hills and ricelands of northern Quang Tin province.

Fighting broke out in this valley, southwest of the major U.S. base at Da Nang, as a marine battalion came under heavy fire from the North Vietnamese, who pinned one company down with rockets and fire from machine-guns and recoilless cannons.

One marine described the fighting as a "knock down, drag 'em out, hand-to-hand battle."

One mile to the southeast, an American battalion moving up on foot to reinforce was locked in battle with another force of North Vietnamese.

A marine reinforcements flew into the area by helicopter, jets dived through streams of red tracers from machine-gun bullets to hit the North Vietnamese with rockets, bombs and napalm.

The planes kept up their assault throughout the night, dropping napalm within 100 yards of the marines.

Robot Car Misses Shah of Iran

BERLIN (AP) — A car steered by remote control and apparently set to crash into the Shah of Iran's motorcade en route to the airport today hit a parked car instead, West Berlin police reported.

In a statement, a spokesman said the Shah's motorcade already had passed when the car was set in motion.

"There were no explosives in the vehicle," the spokesman said.

The royal couple ends a nine-day official visit to West Germany Sunday. Anti-royalist demonstrations followed them across the country.

Police said that one 26-year-old student was pronounced dead at a West Berlin hospital where he was taken after a wild melee in front of the municipal opera house.

The royal couple were not touched by any of the paint-filled eggs, vegetables, stones or smoke flares.

RIOT DEBRIS litters Boston street following rock-throwing and looting Friday night. Riot was touched off by an eviction from a welfare building.

43 Injured, 44 Arrested In Boston Negro Section

BOSTON (AP)—Police maintained an uneasy vigil in the predominantly Negro Gove Hall section today after a night of looting and rock-throwing touched off by a welfare demonstration.

Police formed assault lines throughout the night to clear the streets.

At least 24 policemen, one fireman and 18 civilians were injured.

At least 33 men and 11 women were arrested. They were charged variously with trespassing, taking part in an affray or assault on police officers.

Windows of businesses were smashed and there were reports of widespread looting. Several fires were reported in the area.

There was no estimate of damage.

The disturbance began late Friday afternoon when about 30 welfare recipients, members of an organization called Mothers for Adequate Welfare, capped a day-and-night sit-in by bolting the front door of a city welfare office in the Grove Hall section.

Fifty-eight welfare workers were blocked inside when the women took up positions on the first floor of the building, guarding the door they had locked.

Police climbed into the building through windows and formed a flying wedge to force the women out. Several of the women were carried to police wagons.

A crowd of more than 500 persons gathered outside the building and continued to hold most of the welfare workers inside. Police then called for reinforcements. About 150 policemen were assembled at the height of the disturbance.

MOUNTIE DIES IN CLIFF FALL

BURNABY (CP)—A young RCMP constable plunged to his death over a cliff early today while chasing a prowler in Burnaby, a neighboring municipality of Vancouver.

The dead policeman's name was withheld.

Police said the constable, only a few months out of training, disappeared while he and partner Constable Bob Yakubchuk were chasing youths following a complaint.

A search was held through the night when Const. Yakubchuk reported his partner missing. The body was found early today about half way down a 200-foot-high cliff.

U.S. Denies Bombing Soviet Ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence department declared today that "no U.S. aircraft bombed or strafed the Soviet ship" that Russia alleged was attacked Friday some 50 miles north of Haiphong.

A statement, issued after receipt of a report from the commander-in-chief in the Pacific, said "there is absolutely no evidence to confirm the Soviet allegations."

The U.S. said:

"It is probable that the heavy North Vietnamese anti-aircraft fire was responsible for any damage to the Soviet ship and any casualties suffered by its crew."

Russia had charged that two U.S. jets bombed the Soviet ship Turkestan in Cam Pha harbor, killing one crew member and injuring six others.

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko, speaking during the United Nations Security Council debate on the Middle East crisis, said:

"An end must be put once and for all to the arbitrary actions of the United States, the self-styled world policeman."

He said the U.S. has no "moral right to come to the Security Council and play the role of protector of international navigation."

The Soviet Union has supported Egypt's claim that it can legally blockade the Strait of Tiran in the Gulf of Aqaba while the U.S. has taken the stand that there should be free passage for all ships, including Israeli, through the strait.

WORDS ARE TOUGH

Fedorenko said:

"The professed words of the United States in favor of free navigation all over the world are at variance with its criminal, practical deeds all over the world.

The Soviet ambassador said American planes bombed the Turkestan Friday at 11:40 a.m. Moscow time in a harbor 50 miles from Haiphong. He said two crew members were critically wounded, one of whom died a few hours later. With the exception of a Cypriot vessel, there was no other ship in the harbor, he said.

THERE'S NO TOMORROW WITHOUT PLAN—THANT

MONTREAL (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations described the Middle East crisis Friday night as "explosive and delicate" and warned that the world must prepare for the 21st century—if there is to be a 21st century.

Mr. Thant issued his warning during a six-hour flying visit to Montreal to address the council of the International Civil Aviation Organization, a UN special agency, and the United Nations Association in Canada.

He also held private discussions on the Arab-Israeli crisis with External Affairs Minister Martin.

Arab Mob Jeers: We'll Fight U.S.

CAIRO (AP) — Thousands of jeering Egyptians carrying banners and huge photos of President Nasser staged an anti-American demonstration today at Port Said as a U.S. Navy destroyer entered the Suez Canal bound for the south.

Egyptian launches surrounded the destroyer Dyess as the demonstrators shouted from the banks of the canal.

"Down with Johnson; we will fight Israel and America," the crowd chanted.

The U.S. destroyer took up its position awaiting a south-bound convoy.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union bolstered its forces by sending three more warships into the Mediterrenean Sea.

In Tel Aviv, new Israeli defence minister Gen. Moshe Dayan, said he believed Israel could win if war broke out with the Arab states. But he told a news conference: "If it should come to fighting, I do not want American and British boys to die for us."

MAKE STAND

At the United Nations, Israeli ambassador Gideon Rafael told the security council his nation is determined to make a stand on the Gulf of Aqaba in resistance to the Arab blockade of the waterway leading to the Israeli port of Elath.

The United Arab Republic government ordered Egyptians to take precautions against any bombing attack or invasion from Israel amid a flurry of diplomatic activity as the mid-east crisis neared the end of its third week.

U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser sent President Johnson a message, according to the authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, but its contents were not disclosed. Soviet amabassador Dmitri Pojidaev called on U.A.R. Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad this morning.

In Baghdad, Iraq called an emergency week-end meeting of oil producing Arab states to co-ordinate threatened Arab action that would cut off oil to any western powers helping Israel in event of war.

Record Falls

LONDON (AP)—Anne Smith, a London school teacher, bettered the women's world record for the mile run today with a time of four minutes, 37 seconds.

That was 2.2 seconds faster than the previous mark she set three weeks ago.

At the finish, Miss Smith, 25, was more than 100 yards ahead of her nearest rival, Mrs. Roy Jordan, who clocked 5:00.4.

Damascus Wins Again

NEW YORK (AP)—Favored Damascus came home first in the 99th running of the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes today at Aqueduct.

Montreal-owned Cool Reception was second and Gentleman James was third.

Damascus paid $3.60, $2.60, $2.40. Cool Reception paid $4.20 to place and $3.60 to show. Gentleman James paid $7 to show.

Chinese Back Attack

PEKING (Reuters) — Demonstrators crowded around the gate of the residence of Britain's charge d'affaires in Peking tonight, chanting slogans in support of a tough Chinese pronouncement over the British colony of Hong Kong.

The demonstrations followed an exhortation in the Communist party newspaper People's Daily to Hong Kong Chinese to "be ready at any moment to respond a call of the great motherland and smash the reactionary rule of British imperialism."

England Wins

MONTREAL (CP)—England's visiting all-star eleven today beat Leon of Mexico 3-0 in the opening game of the six-nation international soccer tournament.

Frank Wignall, England's centre-forward whose home club is Nottingham Forest, scored the only goal of the first half.

Brian Labon of Everton and Michael Summerbee of Manchester City scored the others.

Forest Burns

SMITHERS (CP)—Four aircraft, 10 bulldozers and 80 men were fighting four forest fires in the Smithers area of central B.C. today. The four fires, one of which is reported out of control, cover about 2,000 acres. Officials say little merchantable timber was destroyed.

BROADSIDE REBUTTAL TO BERGER

Don't Rock Boat, Strachan Tells NDP

Times Legislative Reporter

BURNABY — Close to 425 delegates at the New Democratic Party's largest convention this morning were mulling over an implication that they were on the threshold of power if only they don't rock the leadership vote tonight.

This suggestion was the underlying theme of a speech by NDP Leader Robert Strachan Friday night, who used his 15-minute annual report to make an expertly subtle broadside rebuttal to leadership challenger Tom Berger's criticisms.

About two-thirds of the convention gave him a standing ovation as he began his speech. The other third kept their seats — some refusing even mild applause.

The delegates will choose between the two men tonight in naming their leader for the coming year.

This decision obviously dominated all thoughts even as the convention gingerly proceeded with its routine business this morning.

Norman Levi was re-elected by acclamation for his second term as provincial president as both camps decided he was a neutral in the leadership battle but sharp contests were expected later today in election of four vice-presidents.

The delegates also this morning approved resolutions favoring the principles of a government guaranteed annual income for all citizens, collective bargaining rights for provincial civil servants and establishment of a provincial housing authority.

Although making no direct reference to the contest in his Friday night speech, and even praising the work of all freshman MLAs including the rebels, Mr. Strachan was obviously appealing for support tonight.

His most telling point was a comparison between the last two provincial election campaigns.

In 1963 — when Mr. Berger was the top strategist behind a soft-sell but costly $40,000 campaign — the party lost strength and was saddled with crippling debt.

Mr. Strachan dwelt on the contrast in the 1966 campaign which was mainly under his direction.

"With (NDP) provincial office expenditures of only $25,000, we faced a powerful Social Credit machine that bragged it was going to wipe us out and spent almost $500,000 trying to accomplish just that," he said.

"More than 250,000 voters supported NDP candidates on Sept. 12 and we increased our percentage of the total vote from 28 per cent to 34 per cent and increased our members elected from 14 to 16.

"A similar increase in our percentage of the total vote could make us the government after the next election."

Mr. Strachan, without identifying them specifically, answered his challenger's criticisms that he over-emphasizes legislative tactics at the expense of internal organization and fails to spend enough time with the grass roots.

He said throughout last September's campaign he worked for other candidates throughout the province, even while the premier and five cabinet ministers visited his own riding in a determined bid to unseat him but he was "re-elected for the sixth time due to the loyal party workers" who performed voluntary work in his riding.

An outburst of applause indicated his point had registered.

Mr. Strachan also enumerated a long list of his attendance at public and internal party meetings and efforts to spread the NDP word to a variety of organizations including native Indians, labor groups and university student bodies.

He said the NDP kept the government off balance during the last session "from opening day in the arena at New Westminster when the public booed the government for refusing to support my motion for a Hansard until closing day when I had to remind the government they had forgotten to pass the supply (appropriations) bill."

He also listed 10 policy programs devised under his leadership, from industrial development to chronic care, which he said could be implemented immediately by an NDP government.

"It is because of this constant effort over the years, that many people are now saying that the New Democratic Party is ready to form the next government of British Columbia," he said.

To emphasize the point, Mr. Strachan said the party's new organizing team (which largely supports Mr. Berger) went into the Cariboo byelection last fall and almost defeated Attorney-General Robert Bonner because it was building on the efforts of a decade.

He recalled that in the 1957 Cariboo byelection, won by Socred William Speare, there were no large NDP cadres but virtually only himself and the candidate to work as door knockers.

"Cariboo constituency is an example of what can be done, in a few years, to build a constituency from a minimal position to a point where there
